Silver Creek Elementary seeks playground funds

By Andy McDonald
For The Citizen

Students from Silver Creek Elementary School addressed the Berea City Council Tuesday, asking the city to endorse their efforts to raise money for new playground equipment.

City Council

Six fifth-graders from the Silver Creek Leadership Team told officials that while the playground equipment is on school grounds, it is a play area that is widely used by the surrounding neighborhood. For that reason, they are hoping to get community support to raise $250,000 to upgrade the playground, which some suggest is over 25 years-old. Some of the equipment is broken, damaged, or covered with graffiti, according to student Winter Moss.

Representatives from the school said funds from the Madison County School District aren't available because playgrounds fall within the purview of the individual schools, not the district as a whole.

So far, the school has raised approximately $1,000 by selling Kentucky chocolate candy bars, and that effort still continues. However, residents can lend their support by either buying

Grandparents were an instrumental influence

Keith Taylor

Grandpa told me about the good ole days. So did my other grandparents.

All four of my grandparents had an influence in my life in one way or another during my days of youth. They each set an example for me to follow and for that, I'm extremely fortunate. Each of them had a hand in molding me into the man I am this very day.

As far back as I can remember, I always spent quality time with my grandparents before they all entered eternity. My grandpa, Bill May, was a farmer and taught me a thing or two about cattle, tobacco and literally scared me to death when he drove his old beat up 4x4 Chevrolet through the field in the snow. He had a heart of gold and always made sure you had plenty to eat when you came to his home. He wasn't afraid to pull a prank and had a different nickname for his family and friends. I can still hear him calling my dad, "Cody, Asbury or Flip."

I guess that's where I get my sense of humor and my ability to pull pranks.

My grandmother, Bettie May, had Godly influence on me as did both of my grandparents on my Dad's side, Reed and Irene Taylor. Mamaw May was purely Pentecostal and always wore her hair in a beehive and was known to lose a few bobbie pins in church. The first time I saw her without a beehive it freaked me out. I can still hear her singing gospel songs while cooking and cleaning up the house. The ones I remember most are, "God is so Good" and "Jesus Loves Me."

I probably spent more time with Mamaw and Papaw Taylor than anyone else while growing up. Mamaw liked to read and watch Soap Operas. My sister and I had no choice and and we grew up watching "All My Children," Days of our Lives" and "General Hospital." We also watched game shows and mamaw always watched "Match Game" and Hollywood Squares." She was a Godly woman and taught me about God in her own special way.

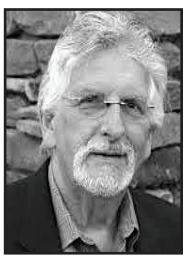
Papaw Taylor, was a quiet man and led by example as opposed to vocal influence. However, when he spoke he was spot on and a man of wisdom. He always told me when I did something to always do it right the first time. He was the slowest driver ever and it took forever for us to get to our destination. He took us to church, auctions and to "town" as mom and dad worked to make a living. He always bowed his head on the pew at prayer time and was more private during church.

If I am at least half the man that he was, I consider it an accomplishment, because to me, he walked on water and was the most humble soul I ever knew.

I challenge our young people to glean from their grandparents and savor the moments.

They have stories to tell, they have wisdom and they have a lot of love to give. I'm thankful for my grandparents' influence in my life as we celebrate Older Americans Month.

Celebrating Older Americans Month



Jeff Ruben

May marks the 60th anniversary of Older Americans Month, a time set aside to acknowledge the contributions of older people, past and present, to our country.

There are over 55 million Americans 65 and older living in America today. According to the US Census, that number will rise past 70 million by 2030. That's 1 in 5 Americans.

Many experts call what is taking place "a longevity revolution." Yet, despite the magnitude of this shift, why do we still nurture ageism?

Too many older adults everywhere are discriminated against simply because of the wrinkles on their faces, the grey in their hair, or the candles on their cake. Their contributions are often discounted, devalued, or marginalized.

Perceptions that older people "can't learn new things contribute little to society, can't make good decisions, and drain our resources" are just some of what is assumed to be true of seniors in our society today.

To counter that thinking, the Administration for Community Living (ACL) promotes the nation's observance of Older Americans Month by trumpeting a different theme each year.

In 2023 the theme is Aging Unbound. This year's focus is on raising awareness of the positive aspects of growing older, why everyone must combat ageism, and how all benefit when older adults are engaged, independent, and included in their communities.

The Administration for Community Living features several ways you can take part in promoting positive aging in your community. Please visit their website for more details. https://acl.gov/oam/2023/older-americans-month-2023.

In keeping with this year's theme, I'd like to pose the following question and request that you share your answer with me. This question is this:

"If you were not bound by age, what more could you do with your life?"

Please include your first name and age, along with your answer, and send it to me at: jeff@wisdomofage.net.

As we celebrate Older Americans Month, let's remind ourselves that equal rights, equal access, and equal opportunity are inalienable rights for all.

Jeff Rubin is a speaker, author, international advocate for positive aging, and founder of the "Senior Moments" campaign, a global initiative changing perceptions about what it means to grow old. He and his wife are residents of Berea.

Learn CPR

About 70% of out-of-hospital cardiac arrests happen at home, and less than 46% of people who experience an out-of-hospital cardiac arrest receive the immediate help that they need before professional help arrives.

Cardiopulmonary resuscitation, or CPR, can greatly increase a person's chance of survival when administered immediately. A simplified version of CPR, called Hands-only CPR, requires no mouth-to-mouth breathing or special certification. It can be learned in two minutes and is just as effective at improving survival rates for cardiac arrest events that happen at home.

A patient has a much better chance of surviving a heart attack if someone begins CPR immediately instead of waiting for emergency personnel to arrive. Since Hands-only CPR is simpler to perform, more people without medical training will be comfortable performing this technique.

If you see someone lose consciousness, collapse and stop breathing:

Check to see if the person is responsive. Shake them and ask if they're okay.

Call 911 on your cell phone and put it on speaker so you can communicate with the dispatcher.

Start CPR immediately. Push down hard fast with two hands in the center of the chest to the beat of a familiar song that has 100 to 120 beats per minute such as "Stayin' Alive" or "Baby Shark".

Continue CPR without interruption until emergency personnel arrive.

If you or someone else is experiencing chest pain (especially if it is associated with shortness of breath or lightheadedness), call 911 immediately. Do not drive yourself or the patient to the emergency department – paramedics have the expertise and equipment to provide the best care quickly.

Studies have shown that the chances of survival from a cardiac event vary greatly from city to city. Factors such as how close you are to a hospital or average ambulance time can affect a person's outcome. But one of the biggest determiners is the number of people in your community who know CPR. The more people around you who have CPR training, the more likely one will be around when you need it.

New York City health department grateful

In a letter written to Dr. Cowley by Dr. William H. Parks of the New York City Health Department, he expressed his sincere thanks to Berea and its students for their liberal supply of blood serum which they furnished to New York's children. Dr. Parks said that the first attempt was so successful with children in combating measles that a marked decrease in the disease was noted and undoubtedly many lives were saved through the efforts. Some time ago a second blood serum was furnished to New York City. Forty pints of blood was provided during that donation.

Berea Ministerial Association backs youth

The Berea Ministerial Association backed a group of young people associated with the Christian Youth Council in their appeal to campus and community for one thousand dollars to feed hungry children of the world. Some of the churches gave an opportunity for a special offering on Mother's Day during their regular services. Other churches planned to interest church members in this appeal through films being shown which illustrated how the desperate the need was. The money was to go to the United Nations Appeal for Children. Although initiated by the United Nations, most of the money was given through voluntary contributions. At that time, it was estimated that one half of the children of the world was badly undernourished.

New pharmacy to be built on U.S. 25 North

Three Berea pharmacists, Paul Upton, Billy Wagers and Joe Chowning formed a partnership on May 1st and were moving forward with plans to establish a new drug store on U.S. 25 North in Berea and completed the purchase of Hinkle Drug in Berea. Mr. Upton said the new store on U.S. 25 North was to be located just north of Ted Williams Autos, in a building that was not yet constructed. The venture would be an affiliate with Walgreen. It was hoped that the store would be operational by the fall of 1973. Upton's Drug Store on Chestnut Street would continue to be a full-service pharmacy, Mr. Upton said, but it was still undecided whether Wagers Pharmacy on Main Street would continue with its prescription service or if it would change in character to be a "variety store." Mr. Upton said that either he or one of his other partners would be present at the Hinkle store in Richmond every day of the week.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

ANSWER:

5	1	2	8	7	4	3	9	6
7	3	9	2	5	6	8	4	1

said Escobar, who has helped coordinate the student visits for the past eight years. "We made southern biscuits and fried apples in my kitchen and they made pottery."

Escobar's parents helped start the Danish Exchange Program at Berea College in 1973 and after it was discontinued she helped to revive and continue a program that meant so much to her family.

While in Berea, the students are welcomed by host families and volunteers in the community to treat the students to a variety of activities. "It takes a village to pull this off, and we certainly have that here," Escobar said.

Danish students learned the art of cooking during a visit to Berea recently. The students made southern biscuits, fired apples and also made pottery during their stay recently.

the project, which is expected to take two months and scheduled to begin in June. When Frazier-Gordon visited the lake to explore the upgrades, she was greeted by visitors from not only Madison County but other surrounding counties in the region.

"This is going to be fantastic and a great partnership with the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife," she said. "I'm excited for Madison County and everybody who comes out here to enjoy this."

Taylor said the project is part of his initiative to improve his home county and improving the quality of life.

"It's about making Madison County better," he said.

Michael Hensley drives to lake from neighboring Fayette County and is a frequent visitor to the lake.

"We catch a lot of fish and it's peaceful," he said. "It's mostly a fishing place. This lake is just ripe (for future development) to bring in more money and more people from other counties."

Storm, an avid hunter and fisherman, was impressed with the lake and is looking forward to its future.

"This is a first-class fishing in the heart if Central Kentucky," Storm said."It's going to bring in a lot of people (to the county)."

The lake will be closed to the public, during renovations, which officials said was dependent upon the weather conditions during the upgrades.

chocolate or by making a tax-deductible donation to Silver Creek Elementary School.

Councilmember Cora Jane Wilson asked whether the city could help in funding the project. Berea Mayor Bruce Fraley replied there is a precedent in which the city aided Berea Community Elementary School to build an inclusive playground. Fraley said given the consideration that the playground is already used as a play area for the general public, and because the city has helped to fund an inclusive playground in the past, he would consult the city attorney to determine how the city can best support the project. Councilmembers Steve Caudill and David Rowlette agreed that because the playground is used by the community, special consideration should be given in supporting the playground renovation.

Wilson challenged other officials to pitch in for the fundraiser, while several city officials praised the presentation by the Silver Creek students.

"For the Silver Creek team and the young people in particular, you did a great job," said Mayor Fraley. "What you are doing tonight is civic engagement, and that's what we hope you'll do as you continue to go through life to be involved with your state, city and federal government and speak up."

In other action, the Berea City Council affirmed a decision by the Berea Planning and Zoning Commission recommending a zone change at 145 Christmas Ridge Road from R-1 residential to R-3 multi-family.

The developer proposes building a 55+ community in 16 condo units. Resident Dwayne Litton, a Christmas Ridge resident who opposed the zone change, cautioned city officials that if the property should change hands before it is developed, the approximately three-acre site could be developed into something that's not as desirable, such as apartment buildings.

Councilman David Rowlette cast the lone dissenting vote on the zone change, expressing concern about the impact the development will have on traffic in the Christmas Ridge area.

The council also adopted resolutions designating May as Older Americans Month in Berea, and designating May 7-13 as National Public Service Recognition Week. City Administrator Rose Beverly and Fraley, as well as several councilmembers expressed appreciation for the work city employees do for the community.

In other action, the council unanimously approved the appointment of Diane Kerby to serve as an alternate on the Berea Ethics Board, while Ernestine Breshear was appointed to a full three-year term on that same committee.

Berea City Clerk Robin Adams drew praise from Fraley and other officials when he noted that this week is Professional Municipal Clerks Month.

In his report to the council, Public Works Director Roy Curtis noted his department has been very busy as usual, removing downed brush from the recent wind storm, preparing equipment for the busy season, working on the new police firing range, as well as getting ready to do concrete work and road patching around town once the weather improves.

Berea Municipal Utilities Manager Kevin Howard requested approval for a $29,899 project on Glades Street west in the Dixie Park neighborhood. The request was approved unanimously by the council and is expected to repair 600 feet of pipe. GT Construction won the bid due to his ability to get on the job immediately, Howard said.

Additionally, Howard was granted approval to purchase two pick-up trucks from Don Franklin Auto in Franfort for approximately $38,000 each.

During public comments, John Heiser of Baldwin Street expressed concert that dirt bikes and ATVs are operating in his neighborhood. He said he would like some kind of appropriate action to be taken. Berea Police Chief Jason Hays said he would address the issue with his department.

At the conclusion of the regular business meeting, the council went into executive session to discuss pending litigation. When the regular session resumed, Fraley reported that no action had been taken by the council regarding the pending case.

Judges can be so generous with other people's money

Roger Alford

Everyone suspected it was only a matter of time before Bubba ended up in divorce court.

"Bubba, I have reviewed this case very closely," the judge said. "And I've decided to give your wife $1,000 a month."

"That's very fair, your honor," Bubba said. "And every now and then I'll try to send her a few bucks myself."

There was a time when people's domestic issues were kept out of the public eye. It was an unwritten rule. But in our current culture, that rule has been not only broken but also trampled.

Time was when supermarket tabloids were the ones that shared all the ugly details of the breakups of the rich and famous. Now, even mainline media have gotten in on the action.

We've heard and read some doozy stories over the years, but I suspect nothing compares to the husband and wife in the Book of Judges, Chapter 19. That happened to be my morning Scripture reading the other day, and, though I've read it many times over the years, I'm always shocked by the graphic nature of the passage.

It begins with the wife leaving her husband to go running around with other men. It gets more interesting when he goes to find her and bring her back home. It was a long trip that required a stopover in a distant city that, as it turned out, was filled with horribly wicked people.

Those people came to the place where the man and his wife were staying and demanded that the man come out to them so that they may "know" him. Instead of going out there himself, he sent his wife. Those wicked people abused her throughout the night. When she finally got free, she dragged herself back to the house where her husband was staying. She collapsed at the front door and died.

But wait, the nightmarish tale doesn't end there.

The husband put her body on a donkey to finish the trip home. When he got there, he cut her body into 12 pieces and sent them to the 12 tribes of Israel.

"And it was so, that all that saw it said, There was no such deed done nor seen from the day that the children of Israel came up out of the land of Egypt until this day: Consider it, take advice, and speak your minds" (Judges 19:30).

Sometimes, we think our own generation is the worst of all time. But people have always been messed up. That's why we desperately need Jesus.

Perhaps Bubba wasn't such a horrible husband after all. At least he was willing to send his wife a few bucks every now and again.

Bluegrass String Fest set for Saturday

For a few years, the folks behind the Folk Circle Association have been trying to find the right moment to launch a bluegrass music event. It is now a reality and the inaugural Berea Bluegrass String Fest is slated for Saturday at the Boone Tavern Event Center from 1-10 p.m.

Kelly Caldwell, Folk Circle treasurer, comprised the right line-up of bands for the event with help from others in the community.

The eight-hour music event will include bands like the legendary The McLain Family Band, which has performed in 65 countries around the world, local heroes Olde Towne Project, Laurel River Line, Kelly Caldwell Band, Mountain Music Ambassadors from Morehead State University led by award-winning banjoist Daxson Lewis and the Berea College Bluegrass Ensemble led by Sam Gleaves.

Pre-sale of tickets online at Eventbrite are $15 and $20 at the door. Seniors above the age seventy is $10 online and $15 at the door.

For more information, see www.berea-folk-circle.org, call Kelly at (606) 875-3883 or join the Folk Circle Facebook group online.

Hospice training new volunteers

Hospice Care Plus is hosting an in-person training for new volunteers on Saturday, May 20, at the Madison County Public Library in Richmond.

The training is for individuals aged 14 and up who would like to help provide care and support for those with a serious illness, their caregivers, and the bereaved, either directly or indirectly.

Mariah Smith, volunteer coordinator at Hospice Care Plus, says volunteers are central to the organization's mission.

"Our volunteers enhance our care in meaningful ways, even when they choose to do more behind-the-scenes work. They are essential to our mission."

Pre-registration is required and can be completed at hospicecareplus.org, 859-986-1500, or hospice@hospicecp.org. Lunch and refreshments are provided.

People choose to volunteer for many reasons. Many, like Laquetta Brandenburg, are motivated by personal experiences.

"I started volunteering after I was diagnosed with breast cancer," said Brandenburg.

Her experience led her to support patients and caregivers as a Tuck-In Program volunteer.

"Our staff welcomes volunteers as part of the team," said Smith. "They're supported and appreciated as making real, meaningful contributions."

To learn more or to register for the training, visit hospicecareplus.org or contact Mariah Smith at (859) 986-1500 or hospice@hospicecp.org. You can also register via the Facebook event page. For those interested in self-paced, online training options, contact Smith.

Titans take Levis

By Keith Taylor
Kentucky Today

The wait is over for Will Levis, who found out he was wanted after all.

The Kentucky quarterback, one of 17 college players invited to Kansas City for the opening round of the NFL Draft on Thursday who then went unselected, was picked in the second round as the 33rd overall pick by the Tennessee Titans, who traded up eight places Friday night to be able to get him.

Levis wasn't among the 31 prospects taken in the first round of the NFL Draft on Thursday. He was projected to go as high as No. 2 by many draft analysts. However, he was the second player taken in the second round by the Titans, who took an offensive lineman in the opening round.

Three of the top four picks taken in the draft were quarterbacks. Former Alabama standout Bryce Young (Carolina) was the top pick, CJ Stroud (Ohio State) was chosen by Houston as the third selection and the Indianapolis Colts chose Florida's Anthony Richardson as the fourth pick in the draft.

Speculation on an injury on Levis' left toe that forced him to miss two games last season was an issue for some teams, which contributed to his slide down the draft ladder in the opening round.

The Titans made an aggressive move for their potential quarterback of the future by agreeing to a trade with the Arizona Cardinals, who acquired a second-round pick (No. 41 overall) and third-round pick (No. 72) in this year's draft and a third-rounder in 2024.

The Titans received a third-round pick (No. 81) from the Cardinals to land Levis, who in two seasons at Kentucky threw for 5,233 yards and 43 touchdowns.

Ryan Tannehill, 35, is expected to be the starter for the Titans. Levis should be able to take a backup role and potentially take over as the starter in 2024 if the Titans void the remaining two years on Tannehill's contract.

Levis will compete with Tennessee's 2022 third-round pick, Malik Willis, to be Tannehill's backup under new offensive coordinator Tim Kelly.

"I'm just ready to learn," said the former Kentucky quarterback.

"I just want to learn as much as I can from them and I want to be the best teammate that I can be going in there to compete, for sure. They've got a lot more experience than I have in the NFL and I just want to learn from them and just do whatever I can to help the team win."

Levis left the NFL Draft in Kansas City before the second round started Friday night because he and his family needed to get back to their home in Connecticut for a big party planned for Saturday, reported AP Football Writer Teresa Walker.

The Titans ended the QB's agonizing wait under the glare of TV cameras with the No. 33 overall pick. Levis says they were in a very different atmosphere at home after being in nice suits and dresses Thursday night.

Levis said his flight was delayed, and he arrived home just before the Titans called to tell him they selected him. Levis says he was a "crying mess" and he was "ecstatic to get the call."

Rodriguez, Valentime drafted in late rounds

Chris Rodriguez will begin his professional career in Washington.

The Kentucky running back was selected in the sixth-round as the 193rd overall pick in the NFL Draft, which concluded Saturday. Rodriguez will join former teammate Jamon Davis, who was picked in the first round by Washington in 2021.

"Feels good," Rodriguez said. "I'm excited. Ready to get to work, man. I mean, it's one of those moments I waited for my whole life, man. It feels almost unrealistic almost, man. I'm ready to get to it."

Along with Davis, he will join Washington running back Antonio Gibson. Both players played prep football in McDonough, Georgia.

Rodriguez added it was surreal to be joining Gibson to begin his professional career.

Rodriguez finished his rushing career at Kentucky with 3.644 yards and 32 rushing touchdowns. He ran for 1,379 yards as a junior.

In the seventh-round, the Green Bay Packers chose Kentucky defensive back Carrington Valentine, the 232nd selection in the three-day draft held in Kansas City.

Valentine was a two-year starter for the Wildcats and finished with 119 tackles, two sacks and an interception in his collegiate career with the Wildcats.

Missing Mom on her special day

Keith Taylor

Mother's Day is a special time of the year.

If you still have your Mother, call her, hug her, visit her, take advantage of every opportunity to spend time with her and not just on the day designated by the calendar to celebrate her every year.

The last time I saw and talked to my mom was several weeks before 3:33 p.m. on Oct. 5, 2020.

I hadn't heard from her for about three weeks, but in one of our last conversations, she was crying and wanted to come home. She didn't want to be put on a ventilator and if I had it to do all over again, I would have carried her on my back despite her diagnosis of COVID-19. I didn't know at the time how cruel things would turn out, not being able to see her in person again until that final day and she spent the last days of her life alone, when it shouldn't have been that way.

Mom deserved better and so did the other patients who died of COVID-19 during the pandemic. I will stand by that for the rest of my life.

Prior to that, she was her usual self, we talked two and three times per day and Donna Reed was more than a mom to me. She was my best friend and life has been so different the past 24 months.

We talked and talked a lot even if was just random stuff. She talked about God, told me the latest news circulating nationally and locally, She would always say, "that's what they said." I would reply and say, 'who is they?" That's when her mom instincts would kick in and I would just laugh and go on. That's what a good son does, right?

The holidays and birthdays and other family gatherings have been especially hard since mom's passing but we are carrying on what mom would have us to do, even with some tweaking to the traditional schedule here and there. I can hear her say, 'don't worry about me.'"

Truth is, I think of my mom every single day and it never goes away. Some say time heals, but the pain and the hurt are still there, even though we have learned to carry on without mom's earthly presence. Her spirit and presence are felt in other meaningful ways and that's what helps us as a family to carry on, even when special dates arrive on the calendar once a year.

I never missed an opportunity to honor my mom on her special day and therefore have no regrets. I'm thankful that I was raised by the best and will forever be thankful for her influence in my life, not matter how many times she would say, 'now, William Keith,' when she would get aggravated at me at times. It was during those times I knew she was serious and paid attention to what she had to say.

I wish I could hear her say my full name again to get my attention. One day, I will.

Time is valuable

Glenn Mollette

You may have lost your mother early in life or never really knew your mother. My two sons were only 17 and 20 when their mother passed at the age of 49 from multiple sclerosis. Mother's Day is a tough day for them and many others around the world. This day may be very difficult for you.

My mother has also passed on but I remember her as one of the hardest working persons I've ever known. On Sunday and often during the week she loved getting dressed up and going to church. One of the greatest enjoyments of her life was singing in a gospel quartet with my dad and another lovely couple.

Eula Hinkle Mollette was just the best mom ever. Yes, I'm prejudiced of course.

Mom helped me with my homework. She washed and ironed my clothes. She put breakfast on the table for me every morning. She had something for me to eat every day when I came home from school. She read to me when I was a child and took care of me when I was sick. During the summer we would carry water from our nearby creek to wash clothes. Typically, we caught rain water in large tubs to wash our clothes but summer months often brought dry weather. We had lunch together every day during the summer break. Usually, it was a homemade sandwich and sometimes a candy bar from Grandpa Hinkle's grocery store. I once wanted root beer and she said, "You won't like it." I debated that I would but I didn't. I was stuck with the root beer.

She never hesitated to set me straight with a peach tree limb across my back side.

If she were alive today, I would try to make up for all the things I didn't do or didn't consider doing. I always had good intentions for all the things I might try to do for mom and dad but they slipped from this life before I had the opportunity.

Missed opportunities happen often to most of us. We have good intentions but often we don't have the ability to act on those intentions. I'm envious of those who are able to do a lot for their moms and dads and wish that I could have done more.

However, so often what we can do are the simplest things that mean so much. Today, I don't want my family to do anything for me but call me or visit me occasionally. A hug and some shared times are the most meaningful to me. Some good quality time is actually the best gift we can give to mom, dad or anyone.

Our time is fleeting for us all. To be generous with a visit, conversation and sharing of life is probably the most precious gift we can give.

Mother's Day is coming. Set aside your best gift – your time.

Letters to the editor

Misleading half-truths

I am thankful we live in a country where we can vote how we want to.

Wait, not always true in Kentucky, where in the primary we have to vote by party registration – Independents need not apply – you won't get anywhere in most of the state.

Why don't we voters object to that law? What troubles me as much as that law is how candidates skew the Constitution to say things like, "our right to worship was denied during the pandemic early days by the directive to close churches and other areas of mass gatherings."

NO: We could worship how we wanted by temporarily not where we wanted for the safety of many.

When a candidate says another's that is a personal judgement, not a fact.

Recognizing that young children should get good, thorough medical care for all their health needs with the consent of their parents is recognizing family rights, not denying them and certainly not immoral.

What is wrong is from any candidate is the misleading of the public with half-truths or untruths for their own advancement. We need to watch for political action which impedes forward, inclusive thinking that helps governing but does not hinder truth and everyone's advancement seems to really bother some candidates.

Road work successful

The Slate Lick "road working" last Tuesday, May 9th, proved to be a great success. There were 72 men, 25 women and 14 children who took an active part in the road work. Men and teams came from all over Rockcastle County to help because of the interest in having a better way to reach Berea. Berea businessmen, especially those of West Berea, turned out with shovels and picks. The plowing was followed by a grater which was pulled by a Berea College tractor. At noon county agent Spense proposed another "road working" for May 27th. It was accepted by the people and the women promised to have a good dinner ready which would be served at the Slate Lick Springs. This road was one of the main roads to Berea.

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Preacher fluent in english and sarcasm

One recent Sunday, Pastor Craig Dale announced in his sermon that he has mastered two languages.

"I'm fluent in English and sarcasm," he said, drawing laughs from his congregation.

Craig suggested that the Apostle Paul may very well have been fluent in sarcasm, too.

You remember the time that Paul was proclaiming the gospel to a roomful of Jewish leaders. The high priest, Ananias, was offended by Paul's powerful words, so he told those standing near Paul to smack him on the mouth.

Roger Alford

"Then said Paul unto him, God shall smite thee, thou whited wall: for sittest thou to judge me after the law, and commandest me to be smitten contrary to the law?" (Acts 23:3).

And the men scolded Paul for disrespecting the high priest. Then came what may very well have been sarcasm: Brothers, I didn't even know he was the high priest.

In other words, Paul was saying Ananias bore little resemblance to a high priest, not because he didn't look or dress like a high priest but because he wasn't behaving like one.

I suspect Paul's words stung.

Ananias has been described as a violent, haughty and gluttonous man — not very fitting traits for a man of God. It's not surprising a man like that would order Paul to be slapped.

A few years before, Paul would have been on the other side of that gathering, a zealous religious leader who was willing to do more than slap a Christian.

In fact, Paul routinely had Christians arrested, beaten, and thrown into prisons. He actually held the coats of the men who stoned Stephen to death.

But something changed when Paul met Jesus on the road to Damascus, and he would never be the same again.

Jesus has that effect on people.

Pastor Craig, a sailor in his younger days, had his own encounter with Jesus many years ago. And Craig has preached powerfully through the years using both his languages.

I'm glad he's fluent in English and sarcasm, because I understand both languages. I suspect you do, too.

resigned to become Commissioner of the Tennessee Department of Health. The 28th District includes Bath, Clark, Menifee and Montgomery counties, as well as part of Fayette County..

Madison County voters will decide whether to make Madison County wet or dry as an option for voters in this year's primary.

Berea was once in the running to land a Cheddar's Scratch Kitchen, Cattleman's Roadhouse, and perhaps even see the return of Columbia Steakhouse. The inability to sell alcohol, however, was a stumbling block, since offering bar service is a prominent part of their respective business models.

Yet, Berea Business and Tourism Development Executive Director Donna Angel didn't give up on those businesses, alerting them to the May 16 Madison County ballot initiative that would legalize alcohol sales county wide. If it passes, establishments that previously overlooked Berea might reconsider the city.

"I've continued working along with every one of them. I believe in growth in our city and in bringing in restaurants of substantial name brands will be quite beneficial to Berea, Kentucky," Angel said. "I think everyone is just waiting in the wings to see what will pass and I think it's of interest to anybody who is looking to expand and grow their franchise."

Angel noted that property along the interstate has been the subject of increased interest lately, especially with the growth of housing in the neighborhood.

"I think exit 77 is just prime property and I've gotten more and more commercial brokers that are interested in showing land out there," Angel said. "There's plenty of land out there. You could take Cheddar's, Columbia, Cattleman's Steakhouse, and with 60,000-plus people passing every day on Interstate 75, I think this is a great spot that people have an interest in right now."

Additionally, Angel said she has continued to stay in touch with grocery outlets, such as Kroger, which was hesitant to settle in Berea because of alcohol restrictions. If the May 16 referendum allowing county-wide alcohol sales passes, it may spark interest from a mid-size chains, if not one of the major grocery outlets, she said.

"If it's not a Kroger or a Meijer or a larger chain, we still have Food City that's expanding in this direction, and Food Lion is into Lexington now," said Angel, adding that while Publix has been receptive to Berea's pitch, the city probably doesn't fit the company's desired population level and demographic.

Other companies are in the mix, according to Angel.

"We have reached out to Ingle's Market, which I've visited a few times in Tennessee. They do spirits and wines and they have incredible deli, bakery and fresh vegetable departments. So, I think the way their stores work would make them a really good fit for Berea."

Angel asserted there would be enough grocery business for newcomers and the city's existing retail outlets. "In no way does this mean we disrespect our current stores, Walmart and Save-A-Lot, but we believe there is much to share and room to grow in terms of grocery offerings here in Berea."

Local entrepreneur Sune Frederiksen, who ran a successful independent café on College Square, expressed reservations about the current alcohol initiative. Frederiksen supported alcohol sales votes in Berea when they were strictly limited to by-the-drink sales in qualifying restaurants. But the wide-open nature of the current initiative could present problems, according to Frederiksen.

"I am still for alcohol sales, but I think it should be regulated so it fits the needs of the city/county," Frederiksen said. "I am not in favor of a bar or liquor store on each corner."

Frederiksen, who is also active in promoting culture and the arts in Berea, cautioned that if big chain restaurants do come in, they could potentially squeeze out locally owned businesses by offering lower prices while out-advertising smaller eateries that don't have large corporate marketing budgets.

If those smaller restaurants are forced out, that could be detrimental to the unique culture Berea has forged and is trying to sustain, said Frederiksen.

"It is up to Berea to find the right balance to keep Berea unique," Frederiksen said. "Unfortunately, I think it [culture] is fading, because many people do not understand that a sound cultural life is the pulse of a town."

As the election nears, independent establishments are still seeking new opportunities in Berea. This week, Richmond's Dreaming Creek Brewery posted on social media that the May 16 referendum will impact their future development plans.

"What would we at Dreaming Creek Brewery do if beer sales were legal countywide? We'd try to get beer on shelves closer to rural areas, ask Fort Boonesborough to serve Kentucky Common at their 18th Century Tavern, and look into the possibility of a Berea Taproom," a recent Facebook post read.

Additionally, Giovanni's Pizza, which has locations in Richmond and other stores in central Kentucky, is reportedly set to take over the Huddle House location at exit 77, near the BP Station. With remodeling, that restaurant could be open by the end of the year, Angel said. Giovanni's would join two other popular independent restaurants at exit 77, Nuevo Vallarta, which is remodeling the former Hitz Roadhouse, and the Smokehouse Grill and Buffet.

"I think it's all a sign of good things to come. It takes one piece to fall into place to make another piece fall into place," Angel said.

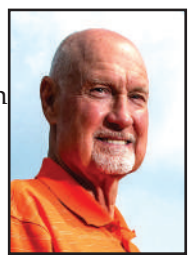
Davis recalls connection to Crum, Hall

By Keith Taylor
Kentucky Today

A promotional poster that hangs on the wall at Papaleno's Restaurant tells the story of the relationship between late Kentucky coach Joe B. Hall and late Louisville coach Denny Crum.



Kenny Davis

The poster, titled "Either Way, You Can't Lose," featured Hall and Crum promoting Converse, the shoe that dominated the sneaker circuit before the Nike explosion took over the market. Crum and Hall are shown at a table with their hands locked depicting an arm wrestling match, with a locker and Kentucky and Louisville jerseys hanging behind each coach. Both schools wore Converse at the time and it wasn't hard for the two coaches to connect and promote the brand of their era.

As a representative of Converse, former Georgetown College standout and 1972 Olympian and team captain Kenny Davis became acquainted with Crum and Hall during coaching clinics and other events that showcased the two coaches.

"That gave me opportunity to be around him (Crum) on many occasions," Davis said of Crum, who died Tuesday at the age of 86. "I can honestly say I don't know of any nicer person or any more of a friendly person than coach Crum was to me. Denny was pretty much the same person anytime you saw him. He never changed over the years."

An autographed poster of late Louisville coach Denny Crum and late Kentucky coach Joe B. Hall hangs on the wall at Papaleno's Restaurant. (Keith Taylor/Kentucky Today)

Even after a 40-year career with Converse, Davis still remained in touch with Crum.

"He was always kind and he was always someone who was interested in what you were doing, and he never, ever had an ego as far as I was ever concerned being around him," Davis said.

Crum won two national titles at Louisville in 1980 and 1986 and played and coached under the late John Wooden.

What made Crum successful?

"He could coach, obviously, with his background from UCLA, being around (Wooden), plus he knew how to recruit players," he said. "His system for a long time was to get as many athletic players as he possibly could, whether they were super basketball players or not.

"He felt like that if he was able to do that in the long run, he could win games with those type of athletes as opposed to maybe even the lesser talented basketball players."

Following retirement from coaching, Crum and Hall had their own radio show, "Joe B. and Denny Show," and Davis was often a guest on a segment. During one of those times on the radio, Hall and Crum signed posters for Davis, one of which hangs in Papaleno's and others Davis has for his own collection.

Even prior to the two Hall of Fame coaches joining forces to create their own radio show, both were friends on and off the court.

"A lot of people don't understand (the relationship between Crum and Hall)," Dais said. "Both of them liked to hunt and fish and I think they did that on different occasions, even when they weren't coaching.

"You would go to coaches clinics and different events and there seemed to be absolutely no animosity between them."

The relationship between Hall and Crum made it easy to promote Converse and was an easy sell for Davis.

Alcohol for all: Voters approve referendum

■ Prohibition ceases 60 days after the election results are certified. The county must establish an office of Alcohol Beverage Administration before licenses to sell alcohol can be granted.

By Leslie Barlow
Citizen Staff Writer

The voters of the county spoke during the primary election on Tuesday and Berea and Madison County will be considered wet.

According to vote totals from the Madison County clerk's office, the "yes" vote carried 9,883 votes compared to 4,792 "no" votes in the local option election.

"I am just so excited for the people of Madison County and all the places in the county that have languished because we have been stuck in the past," said Wesley Browne, owner of Apollo Pizza. Browne also has practiced law for 24 years at Browne Law Office and spearheaded the local option.

Browne said he was nervous of the voter turnout because of the low turnout races on the ballot.

"We felt confident it could pass if we got it on the ballot," he said. "The people of the county spoke and they wanted their county to go wet. I think this will be a very big upside to all parts of the county."

Madison County was made dry by prohibition in 1919. After prohibition ended Kentucky created a system in which an area could vote to be wet, but Madison County never voted wet county-wide until Tuesday's vote.

Prior to the local option vote, the city limits of Richmond are wet, meaning you can purchase alcohol in restaurants, bars, and stores. The city of Berea is considered moist — meaning alcohol can be

The City of Berea Codes and Planning Department will soon be testing new software making the planning and permit process more convenient for citizens, according to department administrator Amanda Haney.

In a report to the Berea City Council on Tuesday, Haney said the new OpenGov software will enable contractors, architects, and citizens to conduct business online instead of having to make a trip to City Hall.

"We are on our last leg of our OpenGov software build out," Haney said. "In the next few weeks, we will be doing the in-house training with our utilities, public works, business licensing, and our development review team, to make sure we are streamlining all of our processes, that we are making this software easier for citizens and developers to use."

Haney explained testing will continue through June, with the hope of fully launching the system on July 1. In the meantime, those wanting instruction on the system can get help from the Codes and Planning Department.

Stroll down memory lane

Last Thursday evening served as a walk down memory lane for many Madison Countians and Exile fans as the Richmond Area Arts Council and the Madison County Historical Society hosted a book signing for local and former Exile band member Billy Luxon's book, "Exiled, The Climax and Surrender of Jimmy Stokley." The band, Exile got its start during the 1960's in Richmond and quickly became a local staple before being discovered and going on to national notoriety when they were invited to become a part of Dick Clark's Caravan of Stars, performing with many of the top performers of the time. In 1978, their hit "Kiss You All Over," hit number 1 on the Billboard Top 100, where it remained for 4 weeks. The song was ranked as the number 5 song for 1978. (The Citizen/Libby Horn)

Library braces for busy summer

The lazy days of summer are quite the opposite at the Madison County Public Library.

June and July are in fact the busiest months at the library, as we host thousands of children each year for our summer reading program. Designed to combat the summer slide, a decline in academic abilities that can occur during the months a child is not in school, the library offers literacy based programs to help keep those skills fresh.

Christina Cornelison

While this year's summer reading program will feature our usual reading challenges, story times, STEM activities and special performances, we're also introducing a new way to keep kids engaged with books.

Building upon the success of our monthly themed book boxes for adults and teens, the library now offers a similar program for young readers. Junior Joy Boxes include a hand-selected library book for checkout, as well as special treats, activities, a recipe card, and bookmark based on each month's unique theme. These boxes are designed specifically for elementary aged children reading at a variety of levels.

Junior Joy Boxes create an experience around checking out a book, which we hope will build excitement and enhance accessibility for reluctant readers. Fun activities that relate to reading material can help a child connect with the content, enhancing comprehension and overall interest. Further, participating in literacy based activities as a family allows parents to build bonds and model positive reading behavior.

Themed reading activities also pique a child's interest in learning and inspire further exploration. Children can recognize connections among different topics and subjects, making learning meaningful and relevant. Themed activities also support different learning styles. Those who may struggle with reading comprehension may find that activities based on movement or interpersonal connection enhance understanding of the written word.

Families will have the opportunity to take home a themed Junior Joy Box at the beginning of each month. A total of eighteen boxes will be available at our Richmond and Berea locations and can be checked out on a first-come, first-served basis. Each library location will offer a choice of three different reading levels, including level 1-3 readers, early chapter books, and junior novels. The library books must be returned, but families can keep the rest of goodies!

June's theme is "Out of this World," and boxes can be checked out during the library's Crafternoon program on June 5 at 4PM. For more information, contact Alisha Helton, Youth Programming Coordinator, at 859-623-6704.

Donald (Don) Hansel

As family we are eternally grateful for the time that we had with Donald Ray Hansel, better known to all as Don. Born in Rockcastle County, he was the son of the late Saley Hansel (who passed away during WW II) and Mary B. Henson Hansel Rowlett.

Don was a strong willed and hard-working man but was best known for his quick wit and was someone who never met a stranger. He could start a conversation with anyone and usually many walked away smiling after their encounter with him.

Don was fascinated with the universe and its creation. He could spend hours reading and watching the History Channel. Science was always a favorite study in college and continued on into his later years. He had the best recall of anyone. He could look at someone after years had moved between you and could remember who you were. He loved mowing his lawn after retirement with his zero turn John Deere. Donuts were his favorite treat to take to veterinarians, nurses, doctor visits and friends. Most of all, he loved taking care of his family. Being a part of his sons lives during their youth sports careers gave him some of his best enjoyment.

During this difficult time, we find solace in continuing to celebrate his life thru memories that he left as a husband of 57 ½ years to Sharon Dotson Hansel; father to Donald Brian Hansel and the late Sean Ray Hansel; grandfather to his first-born grandchild, Whitney Lynn Hansel whom he cherished; 5 step grandchildren and three step great grandchildren. He is also survived by his brothers, Harold James (Jeannette) Rowlett, Berea, KY and Roy Edward (Freda) Rowlett, Sr, Lexington, KY; sister, Sandra K. Present the facts, not fabrication, it's that simple

Freedom of the press was so essential that our founding fathers made it a priority in our Constitution.

It's important to make sure the public is informed, but without bias, especially when it comes to key laws and issues that effect our lives locally, state-wide and nationally.

Unfortunately, most Americans disagree that national news organizations do not intend to mislead on any given topic, while only 25 percent surveyed in a poll by Gallup and the Knight Foundation agreed with that statement.

Reporting the news, whether it be in print, television or radio, requires a high standard of trust, reliability and responsibility. I take that seriously and take the "trust but verify" approach on a weekly basis when it comes to making a determination on any story idea we receive on a daily basis. Not all stories are newsworthy and not all require our full attention, but some of them are and that's why it's important to consider the value of a topic and the source.

Our mission is to never mislead our readers and make up their minds. That's up to you, the readers. We report the facts, the story and don't rely on sound bites to misled or even give a story more "hits" on social media. That's never has been and is not the goal.

We always strive to be fair on our coverage, especially regarding controversial topics. National news organizations have lost touch with that notion and have largely depended on public opinion to sway their angle on a story by using adjectives and other forms of flattery to get your attention.

The reality of it all is that some state, local and national news agencies are out of touch with reality and don't have the respect from their respective audiences. Back in the day, commentators such as Walter Cronkite had the respect of those who listened to CBS News. He was fair, balanced and unbiased in his reporting.

He knew America and they knew him. He was like family and could be trusted. News doesn't have a right or left side if you report the facts without bias or your own opinion and agenda.

Honestly, there are so many news sources out there that it can create a brain fog when it comes to their reporting skills and its evident in the presentation. No organization is perfect, but striving to be fair and consistent, while gaining trust and reliability should be the goal each and every time.

Opinions have their place and do in this newspaper, but shouldn't be the driving force and the backbone of reporting. My journalism career has centered around sports and I use that same approach to our news coverage in this newspaper. I don't report, the final outcome would have been different if …. I mention the final scorer and the facts that determined the winner and the loser.

Just the facts. It's that simple.

Letter to the editor

FCHS grant is a success at BCS

In the fall of 2018, Berea Community Schools welcomed the opportunity to be a Full-Service Community School (FSCS). The federal grant funded a team of four to work with principals, staff, community partners, families and students to make sure students have what they need to begin school ready to learn, achieve academically and feel safe and supported at school.

Community partners have been critical in this work. During this fifth and final year of the grant, we want to celebrate the contributions partners throughout Berea and Madison County have made to the success of our students. These partners have offered their time and knowledge to engage students in myriad learning opportunities from a law office that provided an internship for a student to a farm where students learned to care for horses to the city park where students learned to identify plants.

The FSCS team will share more stories of partnerships in the upcoming weeks. Visit the BCS Pirate Partners Facebook page and check out local media to learn more. I hope you will join me in thanking your fellow citizens for their role in helping our students grow and learn as they prepare for the world.

Thank you partners!

Five siblings start, finish term

Keith Taylor

Eleven years ago, as I began my presidency at Berea College, Kaitlyn Reasoner '16 was starting her own Berea College journey. This month, as I approach retirement, her youngest sibling, Noah Reasoner '23 graduated. Between Kaitlyn and Noah are three other siblings who graduated from Berea. Their mother, Wendy, wrote to express her pride and happiness that all five of her children finished college debt-free and to draw attention to the neat coincidence that the time at Berea of that whole group of siblings matches my own exactly.

Kaitlyn graduated with a degree in biology. While attending, she worked as a teaching assistant and as a referee for intramural sports. Kaitlyn took advantage of internship opportunities as well, accepting the Aspirnaut Research Internship at Vanderbilt University Medical Center in Nashville and the Shepherd Poverty Internship at Charleston Area Medical Center in West Virginia. She completed medical school at Vanderbilt in 2020, is finishing her internal medicine residency in June, and is starting an infectious disease fellowship in July.

Seth Reasoner '18 studied chemistry at Berea. He also served as a teaching assistant and did the Aspirnaut Research Internship. Now enrolled in the Medical Scientist Training Program at Vanderbilt, Seth is on a path toward earning his doctor of medicine and doctor of philosophy degrees.

Emma Reasoner '19 studied biology like her sister. She worked on the Berea College Farm and as a teaching assistant for the geographic information systems class. She did internships at the Indianapolis Zoo, the Alaska SeaLife Center, and the Cheetah Conservation Fund. Emma recently returned from Namibia, where she worked for the Cheetah Conservation Fund and earned her master's degree from the Namibian University of Science and Technology. Now she works at the Alaska SeaLife Center with stranded animals.

Clara Reasoner '21 majored in chemistry and minored in biology and Spanish. She also worked as a teaching assistant and did the Aspirnaut Research Internship at Vanderbilt. Clara is now enrolled in the combined doctor of veterinary medicine and doctor of philosophy program at Colorado State University.

And Noah, who just finished this month, earned his degree in agriculture and natural resources with a minor in philosophy. He worked at the Berea College Farm and Printing Services, and ran on the track and field and cross country teams. He interned at Big Horn National Forest in Wyoming and at Colorado Fresh Farms in Colorado. This summer, he is joining two other Bereans for an internship at Edelen Renewables, a state-of-the-art solar energy company in Lexington.

Of course, I am proud of all the students who graduated from Berea over the past 11 years. They all have accomplished greatness in their own ways and have overcome significant economic and social hurdles to get there. I chose to share the story of the Reasoner family because it brings our mission into sharp focus and reminds us why we do what we do. There is no other school like Berea College, a place dedicated to helping students of limited means but unlimited potential achieve that potential and then go on to live productive lives and impact our society so positively.

John F. Smith appointed

Professor John F. Smith had received notice that he had been appointed by Governor William J. Fields as a delegate from Kentucky to the Twentieth Anniversary Conference on Child Labor that was held in Washington, D.C. on May 27th and 28th. The notice accompanied an invitation and welcome to the conference from Mr. Owen R. Lovejoy, general secretary of the National Child Labor Committee.

Home Economics classes featured

A fashion show of garments made in the elementary and advanced clothing classes of the College Home Economics Department were showcased on May 21st on the first floor of the Emery Building. Miss Marian Kingman, instructor for both classes, presented approximately fifty-six girls who modeled clothing which they had made during the past term. Three children's dresses made in the elementary class were modeled by Trudy Gilkerson and Polly Ann Davis. Other garments made in the elementary class were shown in three groups – house and lounging, sports and school wear, and afternoon wear. An interesting note was made by Miss Kingman was that coats for suits and coats featured in the show varied from $1.00 for make-overs to $20 for those made from new material.

Gasoline shortage beginning to be felt in Berea

The gasoline crisis was slowly reaching Berea. Bob McMahan, owner of the Central Standard Service Station and Jack Manley, owner of Manley's Exxon Station both reported that their distributors had begun to ration gasoline. Area service stations for those two companies would receive gasoline on a monthly quota based on the amount of gasoline that an individual station received that particular month a year before. Rationing for Manley's Exxon began in April, while Standard officials began rationing the Central Standard Station only this month. Both owners were uncertain as to what the future would hold. Whether rationing would increase or stay at present levels remained to be seen. Mr. McMahan said, "We don't know about next month or what the rest of the summer holds." When asked if there would be sufficient gasoline available to increasing numbers of motorist expected this summer for "Wilderness Road," as well as tourism in general, Mr. Manley firmly replied, "Oh yeah!" Coleman Devere, owner of Berea Shell Service Station reported that his station was not being rationed and that company officials had told him that they did not see that arising in the near future. When asked if he had been rationed, C.E. Powell, owner of Powell's I-75 Gulf Station answered, "Not yet, although we're thinking we'll be low on low-led next month." He explained that the company was lagging behind in the refining of low-lead gasoline, but otherwise, Gulf officials were not anticipating rationing. However, Mr. Powell expressed some doubt as he pointed out, "There I always that possibility."

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

ANSWER:

What could be more adorable than a baby monkey?

I don't think I've ever shared the old joke in this column about the mother who got on a bus carrying her baby.

"That's the funniest looking baby I've ever seen," the bus driver told her as she passed by.

The mother stormed down the aisle and took a seat in the very back. Seeing how angry she was, a man seated next to her asked what's wrong.

"That bus driver insulted me," she said. "I'm thinking about going back up there and giving him a piece of my mind."

"I think you should," the man said. "Here, I'll hold your monkey for you."

Roger Alford

None of us like being insulted, and we really don't like those we love being insulted. It brings out the Mama Bear and Papa Bear in us.

So, it's little wonder that King David's claws came out when a haughty king in Ammon shamed two of his ambassadors. That king's father had died, and David had sent the ambassadors to extend his condolences.

Instead of receiving the ambassadors with hospitality, the king shaved off half their beards, cut off their garments at their butts, and sent them away.

Those ambassadors looked like freaks with half of their faces shaved. Worse still, men in that day and time wore long garments with no britches or underwear underneath, so their private parts were exposed when they were sent walking back toward home.

It would be hard to imagine a greater insult to those ambassadors, to King David, or to all of Israel, the country they represented.

David responded by sending in his army, and that king's days of insulting others came to an abrupt end.

I've never understood why some people are compelled to be insulting to others. It's an ugly way to behave. You remember that, before Jesus was crucified, evil men spit on him, plucked hair from his beard, and slapped him. How insulting that was to the King of King and Lord of Lords.

Jesus could have reacted in great power, but he didn't. He could have called down 10,000 angels to deal with those men, but he didn't. He could have spoken those men out of existence, but he didn't. He accepted the shame of the cross. In so doing, He fulfilled his mission here on earth. In his death, he gave eternal life to all who would believe.

That includes the mother and her precious little baby in the back of that bus. And, yes, it includes that insulting bus driver.

Stage set in state Governor's race

FRANKFORT (KT) – They once worked together at a law firm, now they will face off this fall in Kentucky's gubernatorial race - it's game on for incumbent Democrat Andy Beshear and Republican Attorney General Daniel Cameron.

Beshear had an easy path, easily outdistancing perennial candidate Geoffrey Young and Peppy Martin, who was the unsuccessful Republican nominee against Democrat Paul Patton in his 1999 re-election bid but switched parties to run against Beshear.

Cameron, meanwhile, had 11 other opponents in his race, including Agriculture Commissioner Ryan Quarles, State Auditor Mike Harmon, and Kelly Craft, a former ambassador to both Canada and the United Nations. During his victory speech, Beshear touted his accomplishments in economic development and later told reporters when you're dealing with pandemics and natural disasters, you don't worry about who your opponent will be in November.

Andy Beshear

"This race is about our families. It's about the good jobs that provide more security and opportunity for the next generation. It's about the expansion of health care, where we are building the first hospital in the West End of Louisville in 150 years, and a new autism center in Prestonsburg. It's about investment in public safety, like the largest raises ever for our State Police, and it's about someone who truly believes in public education and is willing to champion our educators."

Daniel Cameron

Cameron, during his remarks, thanked former President Trump for his support, saying, "The Trump culture of winning is alive and well in Kentucky. You and I together have proved that no obstacle is too great, no barrier is too large, when concerned and committed Kentuckians come together around a common purpose and vision, rooted in ideals that have propelled this nation forward since its very beginning. Those ideals being faith, family, and community."

Second-place GOP finisher Quarles said: "To the other victors tonight who will be representing the Republican party as a slate, we must all unite. We must all come together after tonight, because if we are going to defeat Andy Beshear, we must all come together, and it starts right now."

He also quoted Daniel Boone: "'Heaven must be a Kentucky kind of place,' and I would have to agree with him tonight."

Third-place finisher Craft told her supporters, "While it is true that I am disappointed this evening, we have so much to celebrate. I know that our movement has had lasting impressions on Kentuckians across the commonwealth, and the Kentuckians that I've met have made a forever lasting impact on me."

She also said the need to come together as one Republican party to defeat Beshear in November.

HISTORY

Funeral Directors of Berea. Todd was the maternal great grandfather of the late Red Foley. Cummins' mother was Betty Foley Cummins.

John Buckler, member of the LaFayette Chapter, National Society Sons of the American Revolution, was the master of ceremonies. Speakers included Chaplain of Camp 5 and Mt. Zion pastor, Roger Hunt, Stewart Davidson, volunteer for Bluegrass Memorial Cemeteries, Cummins and the honor guard firing detail from the Kentucky Department Sons of Union Soldiers of the Civil War and Sons of the Veterans Reserve. Buckler provided the closing remarks.

Davidson said Todd's original tombstone was shattered and was in need of replacement. After a new tombstone was requested from the military and received, Buckler asked if a ceremony was going to be held. "It just so happened that an encampment was happening the same weekend at Mt. Zion Church and the Sons of the Union Army Soldiers of the Civil War were going to be there so we were able to have soldiers in full uniform at the gravesite," he said.

Preserving and honoring those who came before, Davidson said, is the reason he became involved with the Friends of the Blue Grass Army Depot Cemeteries, formerly Cemetery A and Cemetary B. "I wanted to do this for the people of Madison County," he said. "The people who were buried there deserve better than they are getting. It's been a real labor of love.

"Not a lot of cemeteries that have the notoriety of these two."

purchased by the glass in restaurants but is not sold in stores. Outside those locations the county is dry with the exception of places like golf courses, which require a special license.

According to Kentucky State Statue, prohibition ceases 60 days after the election results are certified. The county must establish an office of Alcohol Beverage Administration before licenses to sell alcohol can be granted.

Of the 73,570 registered voters in the county, 14,675 ballots were cast in the primary election for a 20 percent turnout.

Kentucky Attorney General Daniel Cameron carried the county in the race to become the Republican candidate for governor in November. Cameron received 3,792 votes. He will face incumbent Kentucky Governor Andy Beshear, who received 5,078 votes to lead the Democrat ticket.

In other Republican primary races, Michael Adams received 5,418 votes for Secretary of State, Allison Ball received 5,251 votes in the Auditor of Public Accounts race, while Mark Metcalf will be the Republican nominee for state treasurer and Jonathan Shell took the Commissioner of Agriculture race with 5,544 votes in the county.

Sierra Enlow will be the Democratic nominee for the Commissioner of Agriculture after receiving 2,816 votes.

Kentucky's primary election has was a smooth one with few problems, according to Secretary of State Michael Adams, the state's chief election officer.

While the State Board of Elections was preparing to meet Tuesday afternoon, Adams said, "Right before I walked in here, my election director said we got three calls. Normally we get a hundred. They were all benign situations like how to put up a vote sign by polling locations. " top priority, so my grades suffered. I realized I wasn't applying myself and decided to hit pause on my college education."

After leaving EKU, Carpenter began a 29-year career at Toyota Motor Manufacturing in Georgetown.

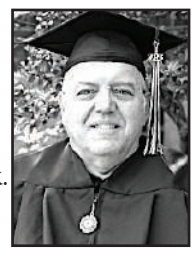
"Toyota practices continuous improvement—I learned a lot there," said Carpenter. "Even if we thought we had perfected a system, we constantly looked for ways to improve our processes. This inspired me to always strive for self-improvement. There is always room for growth."

After retiring from Toyota in 2017, Carpenter joined his wife, Laura, '87, in her lifelong dream of being a realtor. Calling on his love for learning, he decided to get his realtor's license and earned it in just two months.

"I quickly realized that I needed to get my license in drone operation," explained Carpenter. "Sometimes we needed overhead pictures for the property being sold. I started pursuing my license as a drone pilot—that was the hardest test I've taken to date."

Carpenter's exploration of different careers and love for learning has taken him on several other interesting paths. From a young age, Carpenter had dreams about being on the radio. As a close second, in 2009, he became a mobile DJ for weddings. Later, from 2018-20, Carpenter reached his dream as a radio DJ. He was on air Wednesday through Saturday on WCYO-FM.

In March, he began pursuing another lifelong dream, voice acting. After learning all he could about the business, he started recording auditions on March 1 for ACX, run by Amazon and attached to Audible. A few weeks later, an author selected him to narrate their book. He just finished recording his voiceover for the book while preparing to graduate.



Carpenter

Carpenter returned to EKU in summer 2021. He started filling his general education requirements and taking classes in areas that interested him, especially in communications.

"For 38 years, I had regrets about not earning my degree. That's the good thing about college. With many regrets, you don't have the opportunity to go back and correct them. With your education, you always can," said Carpenter

Carpenter says he will always continue to learn something new. EKU has helped satisfy his need for a college education, having known the importance of earning that education. He and his wife instilled a passion for learning in both of their daughters and supported them in earning their college degrees.

Now, Carpenter plans to continue his realty career and voice acting and enjoy the perks of his new title, grandfather. He plans to learn about whatever inspires him most in an effort to continuously improve himself through a pathway of lifelong learning.

"If I could give one piece of advice to someone considering college, I would tell them to make college a high priority," Carpenter suggested. "Do the homework, listen to your professors and apply yourself. Today, your degree is worth a lot, so you need to invest in yourself through your education."

UK softball team keeps NCAA streak alive

LEXINGTON (KT) — Making the NCAA Tournament has been a routine for the Kentucky softball team.

The Wildcats (30-20-1) will be making their 14th consecutive appearance competing in the Northwestern Regional. Kentucky will be paired with the host Northwestern and joins Miami of Ohio and Eastern Illinois in the four-team tournament.

Kentucky is the No. 2 seed in the regional behind Northwestern and will take on third seed Miami at 1 p.m. Friday in the first game of the four-team regional. Host Northwestern will play Eastern Illinois at 3:30 p.m. Friday in the second game of a doubleheader.

The double-elimination format regional will be played Friday-Sunday at Northwestern.

"It is a good draw because we get to stay close to home and I like that," said Rachel Lawson on Sunday. "Northwestern is very good. I think they are underrated. They could have been a top 8 seed (not No. 12). Miami (Ohio) is also very good and I am excited for Eastern Illinois who has a terrific coach. It's a very competitive pool."

Overall 11 teams from the SEC qualified for the tournament and Kentucky won't play conference foes on the opening weekend.

"I think it is fun when you get to play teams from other leagues," Lawson said. "You have battles in the SEC all the time. The further you advance, you will be matched with SEC teams. I love going across conferences. It adds a lot of excitement for the tournament."

Tennis team reaches NCAA Elite Eight

The Kentucky tennis team will compete in the Elite Eight of the NCAA Tournament after defeating Stanford 4-3 Saturday at the Boone Tennis Center. Kentucky makes a return trip to the nationals, which will be held in Orlando, Florida.

"They love each other. It's a family," Kentucky coach Cedric Kauffmann said. "We're always together and we just don't want it to end. We wanted to get to Orlando and maybe get one more match than last year … 'It feels good. I'm just happy for the boys and happy for our program. Maybe we can get one more match than last year."

The No. 4 Wildcats (27-4) will face the No. 5 Cavaliers (27-4) this Thursday at 5 p.m. at the USTA National Campus as both sides look to continue their chase of an NCAA trophy. Fans interested in attending can find tickets and more information here. Live streaming will be available through PlaySight on the USTA National Campus website, as well as on the Cracked Racquets YouTube page with commentary.

Kentucky is one of one of eight teams to reach the finals site in Orlando, joining Virginia, Texas, South Carolina, TCU, Michigan, Ohio State and Georgia. All remaining matches in the tournament will be played at the USTA National Campus with quarterfinals on Thursday, semifinals on Friday and the championship on Saturday. Friday's semifinals, along with Saturday's final, will air live on Tennis Channel.

During their NCAA Tournament run, the Cats have taken out Presbyterian, Northwestern and Stanford to reach the quarterfinal round. UK has won eight consecutive matches overall, four of which have come by a score of 4-3. Kentucky is 11-1 this season in matches decided by one point and has won seven-straight such contests, including its last two in the NCAA Tournament.

Junior Joshua Lapadat enters Thursday with a 23-4 singles record, the most victories on the team. The native of London, Ontario has won six singles matches in a row, five coming in straight sets. Lapadat and partner JJ Mercer also lead the Wildcats with 15 doubles victories on the year and are ranked No. 67 in the latest ITA rankings.

While UVA got the best of Kentucky in the 2022 National Championship, the Cats enacted some revenge this season.

offering training to our contractors, engineers, architects and citizens," Haney said. "What citizens will be able to do with this software is they will no longer have to come to City Hall to get a building permit, or to get an electrical permit, or permit to build an accessory structure. It will all be filed online."

Additionally, users can file complaints concerning code violations, and they can track the status of their projects, including what permits have been issued. Requests for inspections can also be filed online.

Haney emphasized that contractors, citizens, or architects can still get service in the Codes and Planning office.

"One thing I want our citizens and our contractors to understand is that we still want to be available as a department. You can still come in the door, and if you need to have a consultation, we will still meet you in person. This is just meant to expedite the plan review and the approval process to kind of get you started," Haney stated.

"What if someone does not have computer access?" asked Councilmember Cora Jane Wilson.

"We will help them," Haney replied. "We're going to set up a user computer in our lobby [in the Codes and Planning Department] so anybody that doesn't have computer access can come up there, and if we need to help citizens, we will help them navigate through that."

"Business friendly and citizen centered, right?" Mayor Bruce Fraley interjected. "Good job and compliments to your staff for the good work they do in the community."

In other business, Mayor Fraley read a proclamation declaring May 21-27 National Public Works Week 2023. The measure recognizes the many ways in which public works professionals keep communities operating safely and contribute to the general welfare of citizens. Berea Public Works Director Roy Curtis briefly addressed the council, noting that his staff works for citizens in ways that people don't often see.

Fraley also read a proclamation designating May 2023 as National Building Safety Month. After the reading, Haney said the theme of the month is "Building Safety: It Starts with You." With that in mind, Haney encouraged local residents to develop a home escape plan, check smoke alarms, carefully consider the placement of portable heaters, clear debris, dead trees and shrubs away from your home to help prevent fires, and take measures to make the outside of your home safe as well, such as keeping barbecue grills at a safe distance from the house.

Turning to the upcoming Berea Craft Festival, the council approved a three-year licensing agreement with Rick Terrill for land to be leased along Big Hill Road for the Berea Craft Festival. The city has approved the same agreement in previous years, noting the need for nearby parking to ensure pedestrian safety.

As he has in past years, Councilman Ronnie Terrill abstained from the vote and the measure was adopted 7-0-1.

The City of Berea also unanimously adopted a measure to join the City of Richmond and the Madison County Fiscal Court in a hazard mitigation plan. Madison County Emergency Management Agency Director Tim Gray briefly addressed the council, noting the agreement would enable the three governments to cooperate more effectively in the event of some future disaster.

During council comments, several citizens addressed the council concerning a rumor that an alley off Grant Street will be paved to allow for parking/access for Apollo Pizza. Mayor Fraley said that no such plans have been submitted to the city. Councilman Jerry Little added that after consulting with the property owner, he learned that no decision has been made by the business owner about the proposed idea.

Also during public comments, Jacqueline Bowling expressed concern that more oversight is needed in the administration of city committees. Bowling noted that according to her research, there are instances in which citizens are serving on more than one board. She also asserted that the terms of members of the Berea utilities board have lapsed, and that the body has not submitted meeting minutes since 2019. Fraley thanked Bowling for her comments.

The next Berea City Council meeting is scheduled for June 4.

Alcohol impact on city uncertain

By Andy McDonald
For The Citizen

After two thirds of Madison County residents recently approved a measure allowing county-wide alcohol sales, it won't significantly alter the course of Berea's economic development strategy, according to Berea Mayor Bruce Fraley.

While the new law may change the pool of businesses now willing to consider Berea as a potential destination, officials have to keep in mind that the mere ability to sell alcohol does not automatically ensure economic success for the city, Fraley said.

"I think that compared to the past, we'll probably have more people inquiring about space availability, whether it's about property for sale or rent by people whose business model includes the sale of alcohol," Fraley said. "Whether those businesses that give us looks will actually choose Berea and create jobs is yet to be seen. We really don't know the answer to that."

Instead, Fraley said the city will continue to seek a balance when it comes to recruiting new ventures to Berea, not banking exclusively on trying to draw businesses that rely on alcohol sales.

Haymond: diversion program a success

By Leslie Barlow
Citizen Staff Writer

Madison County Attorney Jenny Haymond told the Madison County Fiscal Court more than 3,000 people have been referred to diversion programs for misdemeanor offenses over the past four-and-half years.

Haymond said the county ranks ninth in state population, but her court case load ranks sixth. "The diversion programs we offer in conjunction with Advent Treatment have really helped the community as a whole," she said. "We are saving money for our county by keeping people out of our jails, but most importantly we are saving lives."

From March 2022 through April 2023, the court has referred 181

By Andy McDonald
For The Citizen

The Berea Tourism Commission unanimously adopted the 2023-2024 budget last week, which includes expenditures for city beautification Now one commissioner is challenging local business owners to follow suit in helping spruce up the city.

At last week's meeting, Tourism Commissioner Laura Carpenter praised the efforts of the tourism department, including the recent project to plant flower boxes in high traffic tourist areas. Tourism, Public Works and Berea Municipal Utilities staffers also team up regularly to deploy welcome banners and holiday decorations. Summer welcome banners will be installed soon, according to Business Development and Tourism Director Donna Angel.

Along with the city's efforts, Carpenter hopes building owners will step up. "I just Dream big!

Keith Taylor

It's been more than three decades since I obtained my high school diploma.

At that time, I had not idea where my career path would have taken me. I hadn't settled on a career and had three to four ideas in mind. One of them was becoming a restaurant manager since I had worked in the food service business all through high school while also playing basketball at Berea Community High School.

If I wasn't at practice, I was working and didn't mind putting in the extra time to help my parents pay for my insurance at the time. It was the least I could do considering they made sure I had a vehicle to drive and rewarded me for my hard work and dedication to work, job and sports.

A lot of students will make that same journey this week after graduation from high school. Some may have a career path already craved out, while it will take others a little longer. With that decision, it also comes with creating your own identity.

During high school, I took a newspaper class for two years and learned the basics of journalism from Brenda Lambert. I wrote mostly sports articles and that was a starting point to my journalism career. One day, I just stopped by a local newspaper outlet and asked if they needed help covering sports events in the county. I also attended classes part-time at Eastern Kentucky, was a morning supervisor at Hardee's and worked sporting events in the evening. The sacrifice led to an eventual career in journalism.

The journey began in 1992 and has featured many twists and turns, but I kept my eyes on the road ahead and never looked back. The best decision of my career came in 2001 when I took a job as design editor at the Winchester Sun and learned the ropes of journalism from the best in the business.

The move wasn't any easy one, but it turned out to the one that God had intended to further enhance my career in the field of journalism. The good Lord sees the road ahead even though it's hard to fathom the future while stuck in neutral.

When it comes to any decision, I have prayed about any given situation. Sometimes I followed my guts, while other times I stepped out in faith, which is the hardest steps to take in life, but truly worth it once you take that first leap.

I've covered and written about events that I could only dream about. Those experiences took me places that I couldn't have envisioned when my career began 34 years ago.

Hats off to this year's graduates. Don't be afraid to dream. Don't be afraid to step out in faith and always trust God in your career decision-making.

That's has been and always will be my formula for success.

Veterans group seeks funding contributions

Dear Editor:

The Vietnam Veterans Chapter 1066 is in dire need of funds to complete the purchase of two Kentucky Veterans Hall of Fame monuments for both the cities of Richmond and Berea. The total cost is $20,000 for both of them.

As of now, $5,000 has been raised by donations from individuals and businesses in Madison County, as well as from former Air Force members who were stationed at Blue Grass Army Depot, and low live in other states (they are not even residents of KY and are giving). Additionally, the City of Richmond has provided $5,000 and the Madison Fiscal Court has provided another $5,000.

The final $5,000 was planned to be provided by the City of Berea, but after a year of attending city council meetings, in the end they decided it wasn't beneficial to the city council to even bring it up for a vote or even have the courtesy to tell this briefer, no we are not interested.

The last time was coincidentally just prior to the November election.

Since then, we have attempted to get funding through the Kentucky department of Veteran Affairs and were turned down. It's also hard to expect further help from the Madison County Fiscal Court when they are already funding 25 percent of the total. The Madison County School Board was approached and gave permission to place the monument in front of Madison Southern High School, but they are also unable to provide any funding for it.

So, we are left with $5,000 (possibly only $3,000 if a known donor can provide $2,000) to obtain through other means. Placing ads in the newspaper, and literally going door-to-door in Madison County appear to be the only methods left.

If anyone has any connection with any of the tenants of either the Berea or Richmond Industrial parks, we would hope that others would join RAPT who has made a generous donation and help get this final amount collected.

This writer has made statements previously that this monument will be obtained prior to the end of the year.

Race not a factor in emergency situation

Dear Editor:

On a return flight from Washington, D.C. late last month, while awaiting departure, a person directly behind me had a seizure. A flight attendant yelled, "CODE RED" several times and asked if a doctor was on the flight.

From the back of the plane, a young black man with dreadlocks past his shoulders, wearing a T-shirt rushed to the victim. At the same time a middle-age white man with a burr haircut and sports coat came from the front to the victim's aid.

Both worked intensely to provide oxygen, positioning the person correctly, checked pulse and breathing, all while communicating with each other as if they had worked together in an ER somewhere.

Turns out the black man was a nurse and the white man was an EMT.

Together they stabilized the person until paramedics arrived and escorted the victim off the plane in a wheelchair to provide further medical care.

What color was the victim? It didn't matter – and that's the point!

About Memorial Day

Each year on the last Monday of May, Americans celebrate Memorial Day. Memorial Day is a federal holiday that honors and mourns American military personnel who died while performing their duties in service to the United States Armed Forces.

Memorial Day has a rich history and one that's worth revisiting as the nation prepares to honor the sacrifices made by its military personnel over the centuries.

• Freed slaves played a role in the establishment of Memorial Day. The American Civil War is the deadliest military conflict in American history, as the Union and the Confederacy each suffered more than 800,000 casualties by the time the war ended in 1865. According to History.com, as the war drew to a close, hundreds of Union soldiers who were being held as prisoners of war died and were buried in a mass grave in a Confederate prison camp in South Carolina. After the Confederate surrender, more than 1,000 now-freed slaves honored those recently deceased Union soldiers during a ceremony in which they sang hymns and distributed flowers. The ceremony was dedicated to the fallen soldiers and served as a precursor to what is now celebrated as Memorial Day. Confederate soldiers were honored, too.

· It took a long time for Memorial Day to become a federal holiday. Despite tracing its origins to the immediate aftermath of the Civil War, Memorial Day did not become an official federal holiday until 1971, more than a century after the war ended. This is the same year the holiday was officially designated as taking place on the last Monday in May. The designation has periodically drawn the ire of veterans and military supporters who suggest it is now more widely seen as the unofficial beginning to summer and not a day in which the sacrifices of fallen U.S. soldiers are honored to the extent that they should be.

· Debate exists about which town has the longest history of celebrating Memorial Day. A handful of towns claim to be the first celebrants of Memorial Day. That debate figures to continue in perpetuity, but History.com notes that Waterloo, New York, was officially recognized by U.S. President Lyndon B. Johnson as the birthplace of Memorial Day in 1966. Doylestown, Pennsylvania, and Rochester, Wisconsin are some other towns that claim to have celebrated Memorial Day since the mid-1860s.

Memorial Day has a rich history that highlights the importance of honoring the men and women who have given their lives while in service of the United States military.

Knapp Hall graduation

The eighth-grade graduation ceremonies were held on May 26th in the Tabernacle. The graduating class presented a play entitled, "John G. Fee and the Growth of Berea," which they had written during the year. The performance was under the direction of Ms. Lyn Hartgrove. The three-act play portrayed the home and school of John G. Fee as a boy and young man in around Madison County and Berea College homes. The historical materials for which the performance was based on came from the college library. Roy N. Walters, Dean of the Foundation School, presented the thirteen graduates with diplomas which were handed to students by President Francis S. Hutchins. The graduates included: Donald Casey, Fern Clark, Joyce Durham, Bob Grant, Barlow Newbolt, Bonnie Jean Oyler, Joe Ray, Sandy Reynolds, Barbara Rogers, Phyllis Scrivner, Alta Smart, Bonnie Walters and Nadia Zahobia.

New sirens coming

Fire Chief Bob Davis said that three new warning sirens were expected to arrive and be installed. They were to be placed near Walnut Meadow Campground on Highway 21 West, at the old sewer plant below the golf course and at the new fire station on Glades Road. The Berea City Council approved recommending to Disaster and Emergency Services that the old sirens be installed in Garrard and Rockcastle Counties. According to Davis, the installation of the new sirens would provide coverage to most of Berea.

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

ANSWER:

Spoon drawer no place for bunch of jumping frogs

Roger Alford

A police officer walked up to a mischievous little boy walking along with a BB gun in one hand and a frog in the other.

"Now, listen to me," the police officer said. "Whatever you do to that poor defenseless creature, I'm personally going to do you."

"In that case," the boy said, "I'm going to pat him on the head and let him go."

Like that police officer, I am a lover of frogs. One of my biggest thrills after a long winter is hearing their chirps when the temperatures finally begin to moderate. They're announcing spring is right around the corner, that we'll soon be free of the cold weather that has had us in its clutches.

The Bible tells us of a people who came to despise frogs — the Egyptians in the Old Testament.

You remember, the Egyptians had the Israelites serving them as slaves and were mistreating them horribly. The Egyptians, along with Pharaoh, were benefiting from all that free labor and had no intentions of ever letting them go. That is until God sent a series of plagues upon Egypt. One of those plagues was frogs.

"And the Lord spake unto Moses, Go unto Pharaoh, and say unto him, Thus saith the Lord, Let me people go, that they may serve. And if thou refuse to let them go, behold, I will smite all thy borders with frogs. And the river shall bring forth frogs abundantly, which shall go up and come into thine house, and into thy bedchamber, and upon thy bed, and into thy house of thy servants, and upon thy people, and into thine ovens, and into thy kneading troughs."

You get the picture. There would be frogs everywhere those people turned. Open the spoon drawer in the kitchen, and frogs would jump out. Turn down the covers, and frogs would already be in the bed. But, then, I doubt those people really needed their beds at that point, because when night came and those frogs were in full chorus, they would be absolutely deafening. No one would sleep a wink.

"Then Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron, and said, Entreat the Lord, that He may take away the frogs from me, and from my people; and I will let the people go" (Exodus 8:8).

Moses then asked the Lord to remove the frogs.

"And the Lord did according to the word of Moses; and the frogs died out of the houses, out of the villages, and out of the fields. And they gathered them together upon heaps: and the land stank" (Exodus 8:13-14).

When the frogs were gone, Pharaoh changed his mind and refused to let the Israelites go. The rest of the story is that the Lord brought even worse plagues on Egypt until Pharaoh finally relented and let the people go.

It was a hard lesson Pharaoh had to learn: When the Lord tells you to do something, it's best you go ahead and do it, because He will get his way.

That police officer meant business when he told that mean little boy to be nice, and we can rest assured God means business also when he tells us the same.

COVID-19 Memorial to be dedicated at State Capitol

FRANKFORT (KT) — Kentucky's monument to honor those who died due to COVID-19 is nearly completed, and a dedication ceremony has been scheduled to take place next week on the grounds of the State Capitol.

The event took place on Wednesday .

"This is a memorial where people can come to remember those loved ones they've lost," he said, "and also recognize the amazing sacrifices and heroism of our first responders, our health care heroes and others.

Kentucky native Amanda Matthews, an artist and chief executive officer of Lexington-based Prometheus Foundry, was commissioned to create the permanent Team Kentucky COVID-19 Memorial. It is located in the area of the Capitol grounds in Frankfort known as Monument Park, which is at the south end of Capital Avenue, where the loop around the Capitol building begins.

The memorial, titled "United We Stand, Divided We Fall," which is Kentucky's state motto, will honor Kentucky's losses and sacrifices since March 2020 and remind future generations of the challenges Kentuckians overcame together.

"After announcing the plans for the memorial in March 2021, more than 80 artists from across the country sent in their qualifications and a statement of interest," said Gov. Andy Beshear. "From that group, a panel of experts drawn from both state government and local arts organizations recommended 11 finalists, six of whom are either Kentucky artists or have strong ties to Kentucky."

A COVID-19 Memorial Advisory Panel, whose membership included health care heroes, family members and loved ones of those lost, as well as COVID-19 survivors, selected the final design for the memorial. It has been built entirely with privately-raised funding, and no state money is involved.

It was originally hoped to have the dedication of the COVID Memorial in March 2022, but like everything else its construction was delayed due to supply chain issues.

IMPACT

"I really don't think it will have a major impact on how we cultivate economic development," Fraley said. "One of my priorities is providing an equal emphasis on attracting large business, industrial or otherwise, commercial businesses, which may be nationally known franchises, while also providing support for and encouraging growth of our small, locally-owned businesses and entrepreneurs. We will continue to do that."

Berea Business and Tourism Development Director Donna Angel stated she has remained in touch with businesses that were initially interested in Berea, but hesitated because the city only sold alcohol in designated areas. Angel cited Cattleman's Roadhouse, Columbia Steakhouse, and Cheddar's Scratch Kitchen as examples of businesses that expressed interest. Angel has also been investigating mid-sized grocery stores, including Ingle's Market and Food City, which include alcohol in their business models. Fraley said those efforts will also continue now that voters have approved alcohol sales.

"We will need to have our business and tourism development director reach out to businesses, whether they are restaurants or others, that have inquired about Berea but have excluded us from consideration because we were moist, to see if those businesses still have an interest in coming to Berea," said Fraley.

The new alcohol law goes into effect 60 days from when the official election results were certified on May 18. The city of Berea now has to make sure certain processes are in place to ensure the proper regulation of alcohol sales in city limits, such as the issuance of liquor licenses for businesses.

"There are a lot of details that need to be worked out between now and when the 60 days are up," Fraley said.

The conventional wisdom leading up to the election was that Richmond voters might overwhelm Berea in passing the alcohol measure. As it turned out, the wet measure won in Berea by comfortable margins in all but one Berea precinct, including East Berea (224 Yes -107 No), Gay-Stephens (128-40), North Berea (284-167), South Berea (311-158), West Berea-Mayde (359-161), Clay (218-197), Silver Creek (248-125), Bobtown-Redlick (336-219), and Walker Branch (134-92). The alcohol initiative was only voted down in the Big Hill-Blue Lick precinct, where it failed by a vote of 167 to 163.

One major concern expressed by alcohol sales opponents was that it would cause the proliferation of liquor stores all over Berea. Fraley said that since there is a legal limit on the number of package stores a city can have based on the population, preliminary estimates indicate Berea could have five or six stores at most.

"A lot of people wonder if we'll have a liquor store on every corner and that will not be the case," Fraley said, noting there will be a very competitive selective process.

Fraley acknowledged that there are very strong feelings for voters on both sides of the issue, but that because the ballot measure was beyond the city's control, the best the administration can do is make the policy work.

"We respect the opinions of people on both sides of the issue," Fraley said. "But now the people have spoken. We have to respect the will of the people, and as elected officials and city staff, we have to determine how to best carry out the will of the people and manage that process in cooperation with state agencies."

want to say thanks for the beautification. I know we've talked about that a lot," Carpenter said. "I'm hoping the money we spend for beautification will encourage landlords out there that own places next to our property to put a bucket of paint on them. I'm hoping [beautification] will be contagious. I hope whoever is listening out there, and property owners, you know who you are, spend some money and make them [their buildings] look as beautiful as we're trying to."

During discussion of the city's annual budget, the commission committed $5,000 for city beautification, with Angel noting that investment in improving Berea's appearance has already had a positive impact on the city's image.

"We consistently get calls for property to rent, buy or lease, and that just shows you we look good to outsiders," Angel said. "I do think that everyone cares about our city and they'll jump on that," Angel added regarding Carpenter's suggestion.

Angel mentioned that representatives from other cities are also making visits to town to learn from Berea to appeal to prospective tourists.

Hoops legend Nash dies at age 80

LEXINGTON (KT) — One of Kentucky's legends, Charles "Cotton" Nash, passed away Tuesday at the age of 80.

Nash, a Hall of Famer and a three-time All-American performer, played at Kentucky from 1962-64, where he averaged 22.7 points and 12.3 rebounds per game in 78 games. Nash was a member of the baseball team and participated in track and field.

Following a stellar college career, he became just one of 13 players to play in Major League Baseball and the NBA. He played for the Lakers and Warriors on the hardwood and was a first baseman and outfielder for the Chicago White Sox and the Minnesota Twins, batting only 16 times in his career.

His jersey (No. 44) hangs in the rafters at Rupp Arena and he ranks ninth on the school's all-time scoring list with 1,770 rebounds and finished his career fifth in rebounds with 962 rebounds.

Kentucky men's basketball coach John Calipari called it a "sad day for all in BBN."

"Prayers to his family and friends," Calipari said.

Nash is survived by his wife Julie, sons Patrick and J. Richey and daughter Audrey Lowry. Funeral arrangements are pending.

Tshiebwe: UK or NBA

LEXINGTON (KT) — If Oscar Tshiebwe opts to continue his collegiate career, it won't be at another school.

The Kentucky forward is participating in the NBA Combine this week and indicated he will return to play a third season for the Wildcats if his immediate plans of making a leap to the next level fall short.

"That is not an option," Tshiebwe said in an interview with the Lexington Herald-Leader. "I will never transfer. Kentucky's my home. If there's a chance to go professional, I'll go pro. If there's a chance to not go professional, I will go back to Kentucky. I've never even thought about going (another) place. Kentucky is my home. It's a dream place. I can't leave my home. That's my place, forever."

Thsiebwe, the unanimous College Player of the Year two years ago, has enjoyed his time with the Wildcats regardless of the decision he makes on May 31 to remain the draft or return to Lexington.

"It has meant a lot. I've had a great, great time — probably the best time in my life — at Kentucky," he said. "The people have been great to me. I've been good with the fans. I'm just so appreciative for everything the people have done for us. And everything I have accomplished for Kentucky — I'm very grateful for that. And I will continue to be a part of the Big Blue Nation forever."

> "Kentucky's my home. If there's a chance to go professional, I'll go pro. If there's a chance to not go professional, I will go back to Kentucky."

At the combine in Chicago, Tshiebwe scored 10 points and had 16 rebounds in his team's 107-88 win in a exhibition game on Wednesday. He had a rating of plus 26, while competing against Connecticut's Adama Sanogo and Drew Timme of Gonzaga.

"The feedback has been great," he said. "They keep telling me good things, and things that I need to keep working on. They know what I can do best, like you saw today. But they tell me a lot of different things to keep working on."

Most mock drafts don't have Tshiebwe listed among the 58 picks and the Kentucky senior is listed at No. 64 on the ESPN draft board. Tshiebwe took part in the exhibition games to help improve his pre-draft standing among the other participants, many of which opted against playing in five-on-five contests.

"The process has been good," Tshiebwe said. "I've been working — trying to extend my game to a different level. Everything's going great."

Tshiebwe has met with Boston, Houston, Milwaukee and Sacramento and plans to work out with other teams before the deadline.

"I don't want to say too much, because I gotta finish this process, and I gotta see where God got me going," he said. "Right now, it's still (a possibility of returning to Kentucky). I just want to continue and see. I'm praying everything can go well. I'm praying that a team can get me."

The NIL has been a solid source of income for Tshiebwe at Kentucky, which is still a backup plan for next season if he decides to return to the collegiate ranks.

"The NIL is good," he said. "It helped a lot of us take care of our families and I really appreciate that. But I'm not really focusing on that.

"I'm just going to stay strong and focus on what I'm doing right now. But this is my dream. My dream is to play in the NBA."

Creative gift ideas for graduates

The class of 2023 soon will be donning their caps and gowns and receiving their diplomas. After commencement ceremonies, graduation parties will soon follow. For party guests, that means finding the right gifts for grads.

Some high school graduates will continue their studies at colleges and universities. Others may pursue careers in various trades. Still, some graduates may be ready to enter the workforce right away. No matter the direction, these gifts can treat graduates to something special.

Travel accessories

Graduates may want to go on a trip before they take the next step in their lives. Quality travel gear is a worthy investment. Select luggage that won't exceed airport carry-on limits so grads can cut the baggage check lines when they dart away to locales near or far. Carry-on bags also fit easily in bus cargo areas or in the trunks of cars. Pair the gifts with standard or digital luggage tags.

Streaming TV device

While it's certainly possible to watch favorite shows or films on mobile devices, viewing is that much clearer on televisions. Rather than graduates having to invest in cable television wherever they go, streaming devices like AppleTV or Roku are portable, which means they can be used at home, in a dorm room or on vacation.

Secured credit card

Individuals typically are eligible to apply for credit cards once they reach age 18, which is the age most students are when they graduate high school. Credit cards are one method of establishing solid credit, so it can be beneficial for a teen to have one. But it can be challenging for individuals with no credit histories to get approval. A secured card, according to CapitalOne, is a credit card that requires money deposited with the credit card issuer in order to open the account. This security deposit is held by the issuer as long as the account is open. Often the security deposit is the same as the credit limit. Gift-givers can help establish secured cards for grads by providing the funds for the security deposits.

Wireless audio

Upgrade grads' audio with the newest wireless earbuds or headphones. This way they can take them to the gym or use them to listen to shows or music while sharing spaces with others, including college roommates.

Smartphone wallet case

Teenagers are seldom without their phones. A smartphone wallet case enables graduates to stash IDs, credit or debit cards and some cash into specially designed pockets built into the phone cases. This keeps all essentials in one spot.

Framed memorabilia

Whether a graduate was a star athlete or a premier member of the marching band, gift-givers can provide special memories of time spent in school. Frame ticket stubs, sports jerseys, show programs, or other memorabilia that commemorates a graduate's glory days at their alma mater.

Funds to boost tourism, water infrastructure

> "When one community in Kentucky wins, all of us win."
> Gov. Beshear

Kentucky Governor Andy Beshear presented more than $1.9 million in funding to benefit tourism marketing, water infrastructure, workforce expansion and nonprofits in Madison County on Tuesday at the Folk Center.

"When we talk about building a better Kentucky, we are talking about supporting the wellbeing of our people in all facets of their lives," Beshear said. "That means investing in our infrastructure, building our workforce, attracting more people to our communities and supporting nonprofit organizations. When one community in Kentucky wins, all of us win."

Madison County Judge-Executive Reagan Taylor praised the monetary benefits delivered by Beshear.

"Madison County will benefit for years to come because of the funds announced, Taylor said. "We are working hard to continue to build a better Madison County every day for every citizen and the infusion of state funds into our communities is always a good thing."

Berea Mayor Bruce Fraley agreed and said investments in the water infrastructure

County part of election audit

By Leslie Barlow
For The Citizen

The Office of the Kentucky Attorney General announced Madison County is one of 12 randomly selected counties that will undergo a 2023 post-primary election inquiry.

The 12 counties are: Boyd, Boyle, Bracken, Clay, Clinton, Cumberland, Harrison, Hopkins, Madison, Nelson, Owsley, and Trigg Counties.

Madison County Clerk Kenny Barger said the county is required to submit paperwork to the state to ensure all of the vote totals, paperwork, rosters, and procedures were followed during the May 16 primary election.

Barger added the county has not yet been contacted by the state to turn over the requested paperwork. "It will probably be a month or more before the state requests the needed paperwork," he said, adding the county is still awaiting the results of the 2022 primary election audit.

"This process helps

Wierwille camp returns

By Mike Moore
For The Citizen

After a two-decade hiatus, Berea College will once again host the Wierwille Kids Basketball Camp. The camp – named after longtime coach Roland Wierwille – is scheduled for June 19-22 at Berea College's Seabury Center.

"Having lived in Berea for many years and even before I became the coach here, I would hear people around the community always talk about attending Coach Wierwille's camp and how much fun it was," Berea College men's basketball coach Austin Newton said. "It was an annual camp that he conducted for 27 years that taught the fundamentals of the game.

"It also allowed the kids of our community to have fun by eating in the Berea College dining facility,

BBB May Hot Topics

1. A local consumer's Facebook account was hacked recently, and the hacker made a post claiming the consumer was selling several items as part of a moving sale. The hacker then requested any interested buyers first send a deposit in an attempt to defraud the consumer's Facebook friends. If you believe a friend's social media account has been hacked, contact them via phone or email to let them know. Report any hacked accounts to the social media platform.
2. A local consumer reported a scam that occurred on Craigslist.com. The consumer paid a deposit on a Jeep; however, when the consumer attempted to pick up the car and complete the sale, the seller was a no-show and the consumer was unable to contact them. BBB warns consumers to be cautious when sellers on Facebook Marketplace, Craigslist, and other online selling sites request deposits to "hold" items. Always pay with a credit card whenever possible.
3. A local consumer fell prey to a complex tech support scam. The consumer was contacted by someone alleging to represent Microsoft and informed their computer and smartphone had been compromised. The scammer requested the phone number of the victim's bank and claimed they would connect the victim to their bank via a "secure line." The "bank representative" was part of the scam, and the victim lost close to $10,000. BBB warns consumers not to grant access to their personal devices in response to unsolicited "tech support" messages, and to not give out personal or financial information as well.
4. A local consumer received a phone call from a scammer claiming to be an FBI agent. The scammer alleged the consumer's identity had been stolen and asked her to provide personal and bank account information to verify her identity. This is a phishing scam. Government agency and law enforcement imposters will often use scare tactics to convince victims to give out their personal and/or financial information.
5. A local consumer recently lost $3,000 in a puppy scam. BBB reminds consumers who want to buy from breeders to always see the animal in person first, check the breeder's credentials and references, and always pay with credit card.
6. A local consumer was contacted via phone by someone claiming to be the consumer's granddaughter. The granddaughter said she'd been jailed after an accident and needed bail money. This is commonly known as the grandparent scam. If you receive a similar call, do not wire money or give out your financial information over the phone. If you are concerned the caller may be legitimate, hang up and contact another family member or friend who can verify the caller's story.
7. BBB has received a report of a mailshipping employment scam from a local consumer. Any "job opportunity" that involves receiving other people's mail and packages at your home address so that you can inspect and mailship the packages is a scam and not a legitimate work-from-home job.
8. A consumer alerted BBB that they were receiving multiple phone calls from a loan company claiming to be accredited with BBB. This turned out to be untrue. Consumers can always verify whether a company is BBB accredited (as well as see their rating, reviews, and any complaints) by visiting bbb.org.
9. Multiple consumers have reported receiving fraudulent phone calls claiming to represent Amazon customer support. BBB reminds consumers that Amazon will not call you to question a purchase on your account. If you have any concerns about your Amazon account, contact the company directly.
10. A local consumer ordered a flower delivery from a florist, only for the delivery to be cancelled and no refund issued. BBB advises consumers to check a company's reviews and complaints at bbb.org before purchasing a product or service.

Memorial fitting tribute to those we lost in pandemic

Keith Taylor

Every day Kandie Atkinson rings a bell to honor those we lost during the pandemic.

She rings the bell 120 times every day at 10 a.m. The number represents the number of counties in Kentucky. Atkinson stepped out of her time zone last Wednesday and rang the bell for the second time in one day in front of the capital as a Memorial for COVID-19 victims was dedicated at the Memorial Garden in Frankfort.

I was appointed to an advisory panel that selected the design for the memorial, which included the state's motto, "United We Stand, Divided We Fall." It was conceived by Kentucky sculpture Amanda Mathews.

The memorial, which represents more than 18,000 of our friends, family and neighbors who passed away during the pandemic. One of those we lost was my mom, Donna Reed, who lost her fight to the deadly virus on Oct. 5, 2020.

We were all touched by the dedication and I urge each and every one of you to make a trip to Frankfort to visit the beautiful monument and for what it represents.

The ceremony was beautiful and fitting, and each speaker did their part to honor victims of the pandemic. A lot has changed in more than three years and I can only speak for myself and my family, but we suffered a big loss when Mom was called to her heavenly home. Time doesn't necessarily heal, but it does provide understanding and acceptance of losing a close loved one.

Not a day goes by I don't think of how much my life has changed and think about the impact she had on my life and the lives of others. Since then, her first granddaughter Shelby has gotten married and gave birth to Walker in February. Her granddaughter Addisyn has been cheering at Foley Middle and will be on Madison Southern's squad this upcoming school year. We missed her every day, but we also do our best to make her proud on a daily basis.

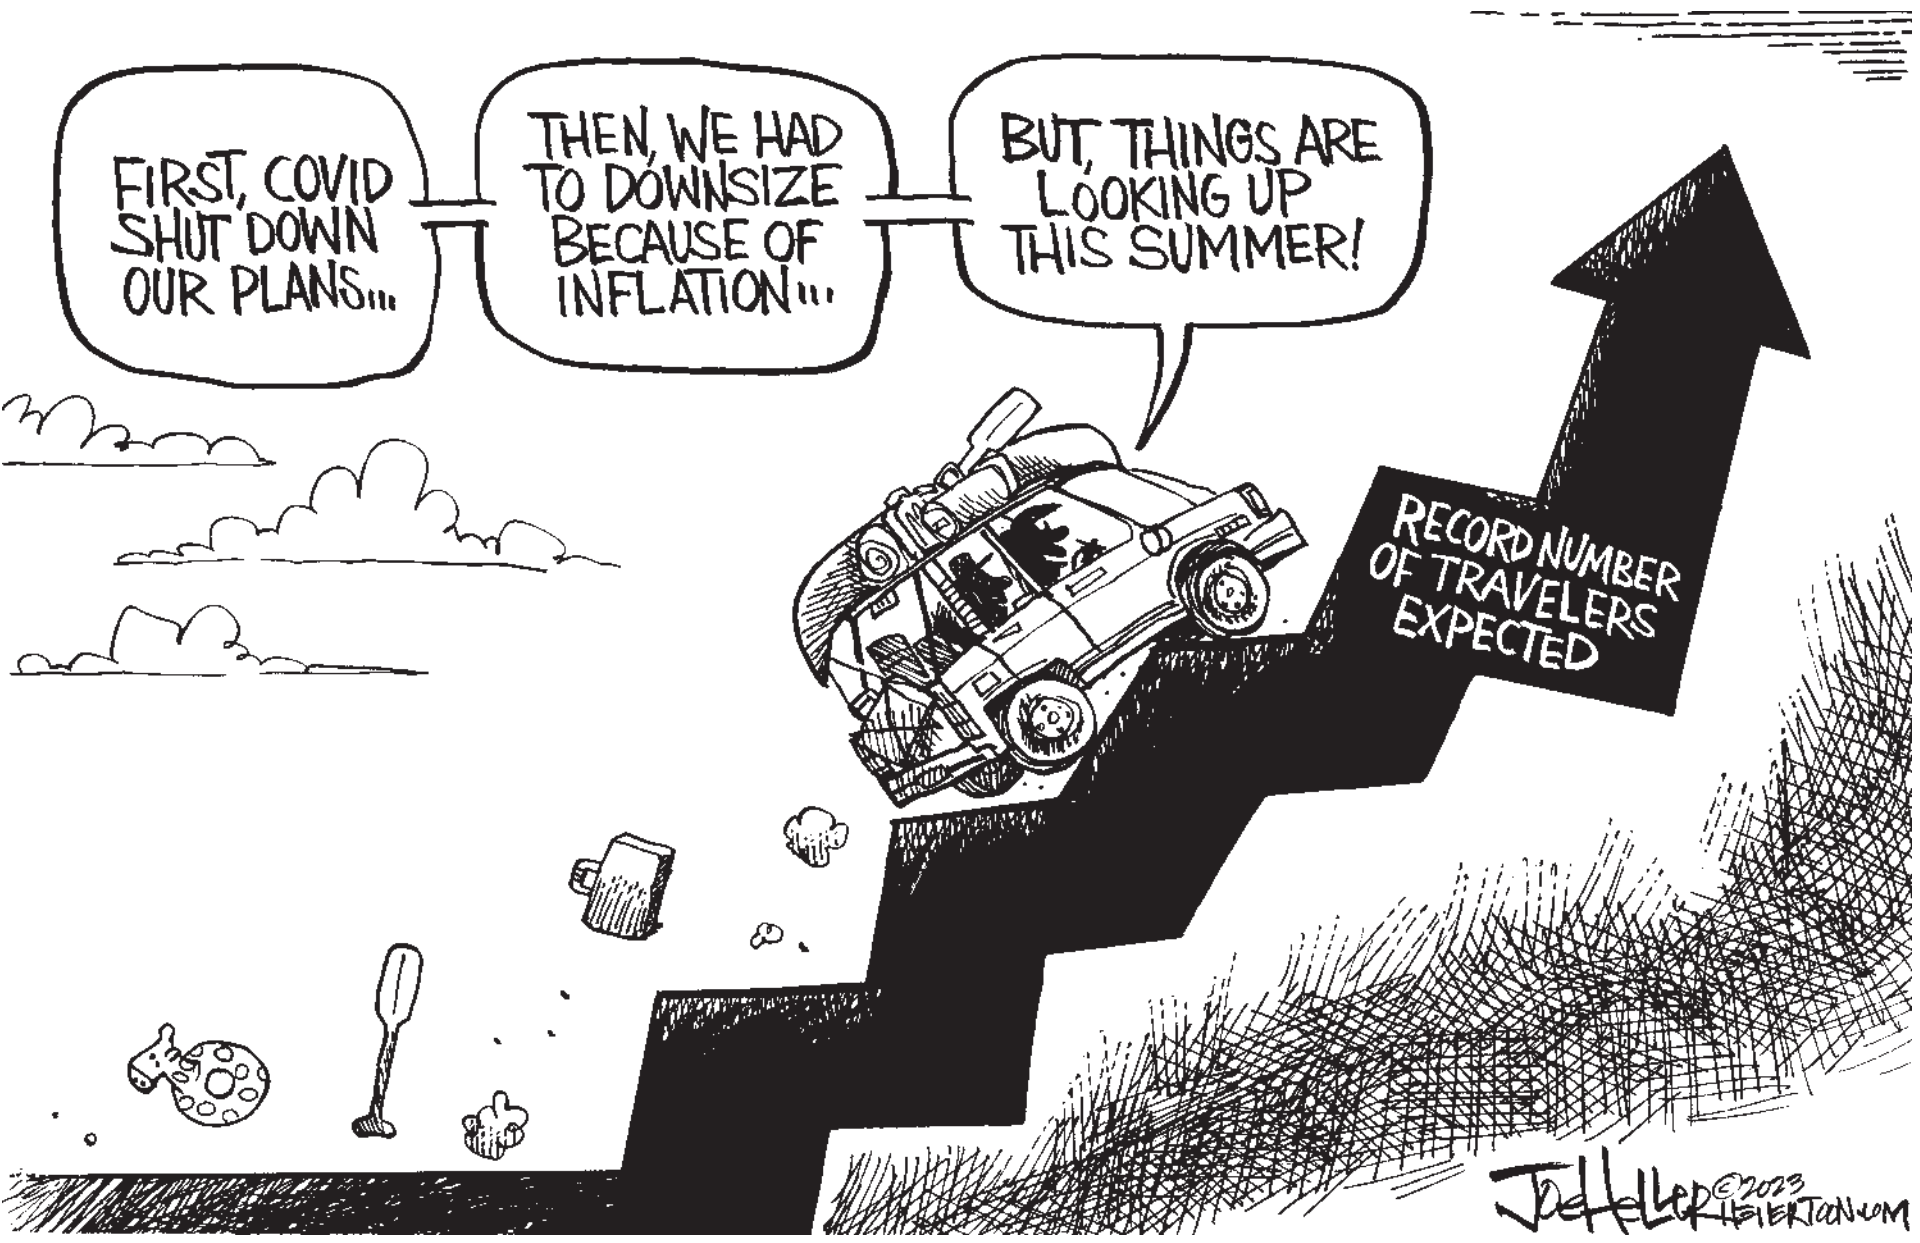
She would have been proud of her first great-grandson and all of her family for sticking together and taking steps to keep her memory alive. I have carried on the tradition of making homemade banana and strawberry ice cream at family events and someday I want to make it a public for all to enjoy.

Mom always cheered us on a supported us and that's why I'm doing everything In can to keep her memory alive. The Berea Chamber of Commerce is putting on a whiffle ball tournament in her honor on June 17 at the Berea Skate Park.

We currently are taking sponsorships and team sign-ups with three- to four-member teams and cost to enter is just $40 per team. The good news is that you don't have to run the bases and we will be using "ghost" runners. We are hopeful to attract a large field for this year's event and I'm hoping you will help sponsor and get a team in this fun tournament for youth, young adults and older adults.

Hopefully I will see many of you in a couple of weeks.

Keith Taylor



Enjoy your 'stuff'

Glenn Mollette

One of the perils of life is putting too much value on "stuff." Stuff can be about anything. It can consist of what we have or what we don't have.

Much of life is about our stuff. Our house, cars, things in the house. Things around the house and things in the garage, storage building, barns and more barns. If we work hard, it's possible to accumulate lots of stuff. Often, we have more than we need.

We paint, stain, groom and polish our stuff. Sometimes we put in in cases, drawers, cabinets and even safes. We know how difficult it is to buy and accumulate. Stuff is expensive.

We take pride in our stuff. We admire, adore and feel good about what we have. We remember days when we didn't have much, wanted more and maybe felt poor. It felt good to get a check and even better to put a few dollars in the bank.

Me, me, and I often became our most significant heroes. We applaud ourselves because we did it, whatever it is. It's all good because we know where we could be or what could have been or what even might be if luck, circumstances and health had changed or still might change.

The problem with stuff is that it does change. It fades, erodes, rots, burns, is stolen, or simply becomes worthless. What might have been valuable may have changed. Life is always changing.

If you have a lot of stuff then you have lot to worry about. You can't keep from worrying some.

In time, all of your stuff will belong to someone else. Your land. Your prized possessions. All that you have worked to collect and preserve. Stuff is passed on or gained by someone else. You can make a plan of passing your stuff on to someone else but they may not really care about it and immediately hand it over to a complete stranger. Once anything is out of your hands then who knows what will happen.

We all die sooner or later and we take nothing with us. All of our stuff is left behind and eventually, sometime down the road of life, everything will end up in a junk or trash pile. Fifty years from now people you have never heard of might sleep in your bed in your house, if your house is still in existence.

There once was a man who had so much stuff that he had to build multiple barns. One day he was self-talking, "I have so much stored up for many years. I'm going to take it easy, eat drink and be merry." Later that day he died. Jesus talked about this guy in one of his stories found in Luke chapter 16. Chances are anyone might identify with the man Jesus talked about if our existence becomes too wrapped up in all of our stuff.

Enjoy your stuff but be prepared to let it all go.

The eighth-grade graduation ceremonies were held on May 26th in the Tabernacle. The graduating class presented a play entitled, "John G. Fee and the Growth of Berea," which they had written during the year. The performance was under the direction of Ms. Lyn Hartgrove. The three-act play portrayed the home and school of John G. Commencement ceremonies were conducted on Sunday, May 27th for 63 Berea Community High School students. This was the first graduating class to have spent four years at the New Berea Community School. Debbie Pierce was named valedictorian and Chris Levey was named salutorian. This graduating class included six seniors who completed their requirements in January and four juniors who completed their requirements a year early. The commencement address was given by Warren Lambert of Berea College, who was a historian who once served on the faculty of the old Foundation School. The invocation and benediction were given by Dr. Mossie Wyker, who was past president of Church Women United. James K. Miller of principal of Berea Community High School presided over the ceremonies and Dr. Dwight L. Blackburn, chairman of the Berea Board of Education presented diplomas. The community school band played "Royal March" by John Kinyon as the processional and "Pomp and Circumstance," by Edward Elgar as the recessional. The band and chorus combined to present "The Pledge of Allegiance," arranged by Alfred Reed.

New sirens coming

Fire Chief Bob Davis said that three new warning sirens were expected to arrive and be installed. They were to be placed near Walnut Meadow Campground on Highway 21 West, at the old sewer plant below the golf course and at the new fire station on Glades Road. The Berea City Council approved recommending to Disaster and Emergency Services that the old sirens be installed in Garrard and Rockcastle Counties. According to Davis, the installation of the new sirens would provide coverage to most of Berea.

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

ANSWER:

Heaven will be awesome but don't count on baseball

There's the story of the elderly man who was pondering what heaven will be like.

"I wonder if there will be baseball up there?" he asked a friend.

At that moment, a voice came booming down, saying "I've got good news and bad news for you. The good news is there is baseball in heaven."

"What's the bad news?" the old gentleman asked.

"You're pitching tomorrow."

I love reading about heaven. What an incredible place awaits all those who have put their faith in Jesus.

The Apostle Paul said heaven is so amazing that it has never been adequately described.

Roger Alford

"Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for those that love him" (1 Corinthians 2:9).

The Apostle John was given a tour of heaven and he described some of the things he saw there, gold and gems galore.

"The building of the wall of it was of jasper; and the city was pure gold, like unto clear glass. And the foundations of the wall of the city were garnished with all manner of precious stones" (Revelation 21:18-19).

He went on to describe gates that were made of pearls and he talked about seeing a street of pure gold.

Perhaps best of all, John described heaven as a place of happiness and smiles for the people there.

"And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away."

In this world, we become way too familiar with death, sorrow, crying and pain. It's good to know that in the world to come those things are no more. It's a pleasant thought that there'll be no need for hospitals, funeral homes nor cemeteries.

I love songs about heaven, too. One of my favorites is titled There is Coming a Day, and words are so uplifting:

"There is coming a day when no heartaches shall come, no more clouds in the sky, no more tears to dim the eye; all is peace for evermore on that happy golden shore, what a day, glorious day that will be.

"What a day that will be when my Jesus I shall see, and I look upon His face, the One who saved me by His grace; when He takes me by the hand and leads me through the promised land, what a day, glorious day that will be.

"There'll be no sorrow there, no more burdens to bear, no more sickness, no pain, no more parting over there; and forever I will be with the One who died for me, what a day, glorious day that will be."

The Bible makes no specific mention of baseball in heaven, but everything we have seen makes it clear we're going to love the place.

Church honors church honors hero killed in final days of World War I

By Roger Alford
Christian Index

Sharon Reid is proud of her great uncle Harry Spratlin, a Georgia soldier killed in action in the waning days of World War I.

Reid and her cousins gathered this Memorial Day weekend to lay a wreath at the base of his headstone in a rural cemetery just up the road from the farm where he was raised.

Spratlin's family is among countless Americans who are taking time this Memorial Day to honor fallen heroes.

"Memorial Day should be a time of solemn reflection, giving thanks to God and honoring those who gave their lives for the value we cherish and the many freedoms we enjoy as a nation," said retired U.S. Army Chief of Chaplains Douglas Carver, a native of Rome, Ga., and director of chaplain services for North American Mission Board.

The congregation at Hull Baptist Church outside Athens, Georgia, concerned that Spratlin had been inadvertently left off local war memorials, made sure he was recognized in a major way this year.

The church's interim pastor, historian Charles Jones, spent a month pouring over records to write a full account of the young hero's life and produced a video that was shown in Sunday morning's worship service.

Spratlin had left behind his newlywed wife, Leonie, when he deployed to the frontlines of what came to be known as "the war to end all wars." His wife anxiously awaited his return. Instead, she received the awful news.

"I just can't imagine," Reid said. "She had dreams, and they were all dashed in that moment. My heart goes out to her."

Records don't reveal precisely how Spratlin died, whether from a bullet, a grenade, or poison gas. What they do reveal is that his outfit was heralded for its tenacity in combat against the Germans in France.

Jones said Spratlin's division earned the nickname The Rock of Marne.

"It just makes me melt," said Spratlin's great-great nephew Morris Bullock, standing over Spratlin's grave. "He gave his utmost."

FUNDS

will provide a boost to Berea.

"We are very grateful for the Cleaner Water grant of nearly $1 million dollars, which will enable us to rehabilitate one of our older wastewater pump stations," Fraley said. "As Berea continues to grow, investments in our community like this will be very beneficial to our efforts to attract new businesses, help our existing business grow and support residential growth, and will ultimately lead to a better quality of life for our citizens. Additionally, the significant investment in so many Berea-based nonprofits helps them tremendously as they work to serve others in our city and region. This too results in a better quality of life for our community. When we work together, collaborate and focus on advancing the Commonwealth of Kentucky, days like today are possible."

Beshear announced the commitment of $958,126 to the City of Berea to rehabilitate a pump station and replace over 3,000 feet of sewer main.

The Governor also awarded $142,132 to the Berea Tourist and Convention Commission and $20,000 to Richmond Tourism to support travel marketing and promotion. The awards are part of the $75 million in federal American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA) funding announced by the Governor in July to boost the state's tourism industry and economy following the decline in visitors brought on by the pandemic.

"The ARPA funding will play a substantial role in recovery along with future new and expanded projects that we have wanted to do for a long time, however, lacked the immediate funds to do so," said Donna Angel, executive director of the Berea Tourist and Convention Commission. "Through these funds, we will now be positioned to attend new group tour marketplace meetings and conventions, opening the door to untraveled pathways for the motorcoach industry into Berea. It also allows us to develop new videos, photo stills and digital ads highlighting Berea's truest assets of arts and crafts, including all the great and exciting outdoor trails. Most importantly, we will have the opportunity to request assistance on analysis studies that will help select Berea as a destination point across Kentucky."

Funds are distributed by the Kentucky Department of Tourism to eligible tourism organizations throughout the commonwealth.

Beshear also announced the Brushy Fork Leadership Institute at Berea College will use $320,000 for the Brushy Fork Community Leadership Program – People Ready Communities. This program will train leaders in Appalachian Kentucky on how to attract new workers from diverse sectors to Eastern Kentucky. The project is expected to result in 120 participants trained, eight communities improved and eight programs implemented.

"As communities experience declines in population, local leaders recognize strong economies depend on quality-of-life issues that will attract industry and small business, support tourism and retain workers," said Donna L. Daniels, executive director of the Brushy Fork Leadership Institute. "The People Ready Communities Program engages local people from all sectors in positioning their community to say in their own way that they are open and ready for a diverse workforce. Brushy Fork Leadership Institute is pleased to work in partnership with communities as they define what it means for them to be People Ready."

The funding comes from the Appalachian Regional Commission and is administered at the state level by the Department for Local Government.

Beshear awarded more than $527,000 in awards to local nonprofits in Berea. The awards come from the Team Kentucky Nonprofit Assistance Fund, which is helping organizations across Kentucky recover from the impacts of the pandemic. The funding comes from ARPA, and Gov. Beshear supported the allocation of funds by the 2022 General Assembly. This funding will provide one-time direct relief payments to support the mission and long-term sustainability of each eligible nonprofit. The awards include:

- $100,000 to Community Farm Alliance
- $100,000 to Hospice Care Plus
- $100,000 to New Opportunity School for Women
- $100,000 to Saint Joseph Berea Foundation
- $53,121 to Sustainable Berea
- $22,908.50 to the Berea Arts Council
- $16,351.89 to the Kentucky Guild of Artisans and Craftsmen
- $15,609.43 to Room in the Inn – Berea
- $7,859.00 to the Berea Christmas Country Dance School
- $7,128.00 to Berea Makerspace
- $4,975.00 to Madison Southern Band Boosters

swimming in the pool, walking the campus, watching highlight films," Newton continued. "Wierwille also gave away a couple of bikes yearly for prizes, which we hope to continue."

Newton said one of his goals since being named head coach in October 2022 was to institute the popular camp's rebirth for young players interested in becoming better basketball players.

"(Since October), I've tried to learn as much about how Wierwille set it up so we can emulate it the best we can," Newton said.

The camp will utilize both gyms at the Seabury Center and should be able to accommodate between 100-120 campers.

Newton said hosting youth sports camps is a great way to develop skills while having fun.

"I always say as a basketball coach, I will ask players what they were doing all summer," he said. "During the basketball season, you are more focused on developing your team, running plays, scouting opponents, etc. The summertime is the best time to develop individual skills, but most importantly, these summer camps create memories that last forever."

While the camp will help develop the skill level of each participant, Newton said the Wierwille Camp would afford campers a glimpse into college life.

"Campers can expect to be instructed by a college basketball staff and team, eat lunch at Berea College Dining daily, receive a T-shirt and basketball to keep, camp picture, highlight videos, and an awards ceremony," he said.

In addition to the kids' camp, Berea College will also host a one-day Elite Camp on July 29.

"The Elite Camp on July 29 was created for high school players serious about taking their game to the college level," Newton said. "The competition should be top-notch, and it's also a way for us to get potential recruits to our campus and spend time with them while we evaluate their game."

Newton called Berea College a hidden gem in the college basketball world, and camps afford his staff a fantastic opportunity to network and recruit potential Mountaineer players.

"It allows us to attract kids in our community, high school players, parents, friends, and family to see the Seabury Center and our beautiful campus," he said. "It also gives them the ability to learn about the no tuition mission of the school, something that is invaluable to our recruiting efforts."

AUDIT

ensure election integrity and transparency in the Commonwealth," said Assistant Deputy Attorney General Amy Burke. "Our Department of Criminal Investigations (DCI) conducts these important inquiries, and we have tremendous confidence in our team and their work."

Kentucky law requires the Office of the Attorney General to administer post-election inquiries in no fewer than 12 counties. These 12 counties were randomly selected in a public forum within 20 days of the primary election.

After completing independent investigations in each of the 12 counties, the Attorney General's Office will present its findings to grand juries and chief circuit judges in each selected county.

State law prohibits counties from being the subject of two consecutive inquiries. Counties that were ineligible for audit following the May 2023 primary included: Anderson, Breathitt, Christian, Daviess, Jefferson, LaRue, Laurel, Oldham, Owen, Rowan, Shelby, and Webster Counties.

The post-election inquiries previously conducted in these counties revealed no criminal conduct.

Kentucky Governor Andy Beshear admires the COVID-19 Memorial following a dedication ceremony on May 24 in Frankfort.

Memorial dedicated

FRANKFORT (KT) – A public dedication ceremony for the Kentucky COVID Memorial was held last Wednesday afternoon at its site, located within the Kentucky State Capitol Memorial Garden in Frankfort.

During opening remarks, Lt. Gov. Jacqueline Coleman said, "We gather today to remember just how much our lives have changed since March 2020. We gather today to honor 18,000 Kentuckians we lost."

Jacqueline Woodward, a member of the COVID-19 Memorial Advisory panel that chose its final design, said, "I cannot express how much this has helped me to move forward in my life after the loss of Gary Woodward, my husband of 45 years."

It would be difficult to find any Kentuckian who didn't lose a loved one or friend who died from COVID. That includes Kentucky Today Sports Editor and Berea Citizen Publisher Keith Taylor, who served on the panel and still grieves the loss of his mother, Donna Reed.

"I was honored to be chosen to be on the advisory committee and thankful Governor (Andy) Beshear took the steps to make sure we remember and never forget those we lost during the pandemic. I lost my mom to COVID-19 and am forever grateful she and the many Kentuckians who left us are honored with this Memorial. They weren't just a number, but they were a name and made an impact during their earthly journey."

Dr. Jason Smith, Chief Medical Officer of U of L Health, noted that while the Memorial will honor all those lost to COVID, "The other thing this represents is some of the best of who we can be. You saw healthcare professionals from across the commonwealth come together in an unprecedented way."

Beshear noted, "Generations of Kentuckians will come to this area of the Capitol to learn about our heroes, as well as reflect on the many great challenges we face together, such as the once in every 100 years pandemic."

Beshear also pointed out when he took office in December 2019, he knew it would be a difficult job. "But I don't think anyone could have predicted a pandemic that would shake the entire world, in just a few short months."

The memorial was built through private donations, with no state money involved.

The Kentucky Transportion Cabinet reminds participants that no sales or parking on state right of way. It is a safety hazard and also illegal under KRS.177.106. The Cabinet wants to ensure that drivers have the proper amount of sight distance for intersections, driveway entrances and curves. Any encroachment on state right of way requires a permit.

Other reminders:

- Watch for parked cars, slowed traffic and vehicles turning into or out of side streets and driveways.
- Park a safe distance from the highway, preferably outside a 22-foot "recovery zone" extending from the white line on the pavement edge. This area gives motorists room in which to maneuver in case of trouble.
- Watch for pedestrians, and especially for children and pets in the area of yard sales.
- Use seat belts, obey posted speed limits, other traffic laws, and refrain from drinking and driving.

Out of the Blue

Cats host region

LEXINGTON (KT) — For just the third time in history, the Kentucky baseball team will serve as host for an NCAA Regional set for Friday-Monday at Kentucky Proud Park.

The Wildcats, seeded 12th nationally, will host Ball State, Indiana and West Virginia in a double-elimination regional. Kentucky (36-18) will play Ball State (36-21) at noon Friday. Indiana (41-18) will take on West Virginia (39-18) in the second game of a doubleheader at 7 p.m. Friday. The losing teams will play each other at 1 p.m. Saturday, while the winning teams from the opening round meet at 7 p.m. Friday. The event continues on Sunday and again on Monday, if necessary.

Overall, 10 teams from the Southeastern Conference earned a spot in the NCAA Tournament, with eight of those, including Kentucky, serving as regional hosts. Florida (No. 2), Arkansas (No. 3), LSU (No. 5), Vanderbilt (No. 6), Kentucky (No. 12), Auburn (No. 13), South Carolina (No. 15) and Alabama (No, 16) received one of the top 16 seeds. Tennessee and Texas A&M each received an at-large bid.

Kentucky will serve as a regional host for the first time since 2017. The Wildcats are 18-19 in the NCAA Tournament and reached the Super Regionals in 2017, where they where swept by rival Louisville.

"I think we have maybe one guy who has played in the postseason before," Mingione said. "And that doesn't bother me one bit. They have been really good at focusing on what's in front of them at that moment. It's a very selfless team. They don't have personal agendas, it's all about Kentucky."

Pitcher Darren Williams agreed.

"We don't want to just be here, we want to win this thing," Williams said. "And that takes winning this weekend and that takes beating Ball State in game one."

Murray, Nuggets making history

LEXINGTON (KT) — Jamal Murray wants to keep making history.

The former Kentucky guard has played a big role in the Denver Nuggets' success in the NBA playoffs this year. Murray averaged 30-plus points in the Western Conference finals, a 4-0 sweep of the Los Angeles Lakers. The rare sweep over LeBron James, Anthony Davis and the rest of the Lakers marked the first time Denver had reached the NBA Finals.

"It's incredible. It's a lot of fun (and) it's surreal," he said. "I know we're going to keep making history. That's the thing. We want to keep that mindset and enjoy the moment. But we've got more work to do, so that's the mindset right now."

The Nuggets are 12-3 in the playoffs. Denver defeated Minnesota 4-1, edged Phoenix 4-2 before ending the Lakers' season earlier this week.

The former Kentucky guard turned in his best performance of the series when he scored 23 points in the fourth quarter in Game 2. He finished with 37 points, 10 rebounds and five assists in a 108-103 win. During the postseason, Murray is averaging 27.7 points and 6.1 assists and 5.5 rebounds per game as a complement to superstar Nikola Jokic, the runnerup for MVP in the NBA.

"We just want to make the most of the opportunity, the first Nuggets team to do that," he said. "We want to go all the way and stay locked in. I think our chemistry is at an all-time high, the way we play, the way we read the game without even speaking. We talk that language on the court. It's just beautiful basketball, honestly. It's so fun to play with this team and with him (Jokic) and with the coaching staff that has groomed us into the team that we are."

He overcame an ACL tear in 2021 and didn't play during the 2021-22 season but came back this year and helped the Nuggets make history.

"I had some ups and downs during the season, some sore days where I couldn't play, and those sucked," he said. "(I) Played my first back-to-back in January or something like that. It's just been trending. Every month I feel my knee get better and more solid and more consistent in the way it's going to feel. Wo just to be here and be playing this many minutes at this time has been -- we've prepared for this…. I'm just glad I put the work in during the rehab to be able to perform and be at my best."

The Nuggets will take on the Miami Heat, which edged Boston in the Eastern Conference finals, 4-3.

Murray and the Nuggets have their sights set on the next series against the Heat, that starts Thursday.

"We've got four more wins to go," he said.
