One Beam Comes Down, Another Goes Up

City council members, firefighters, and city staff were invited to sign the red beam two weeks ago, as a memorial "raising of the beam" for the new city hall building on Chestnut Street right. Berea Firefighters watched with big smiles and cell phones recording as the beam was placed. Above, Rock Trucking started taking down the stadium beams on Tuesday morning, as the start of the removal of the entire Duerson Stadium. Workers stated that the concrete beams weighed approximately 3,000 pounds each. Rock Trucking will be repurposing the beams, which is why their bid came in so low at $38,000, almost half of the highest bid.

Vandalism Spurs March & Protest at Human Rights Meeting

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

Members of Bereans for Fairness and KFTC (Kentuckians for the Commonwealth) organized a march and a presentation to members of the Berea Human Rights Commission (HRC) on Monday, to raise awareness of an incident of vandalism that took place against a member of the LGBTQ community in Berea.

Whitney Preston, a young woman who moved to Berea in the past year, woke up on Thursday, March 23, and discovered the word "lesbian" and "lesbo" spray painted in red on her garage door and back patio. Preston lives on JD Circle. The sheriff's department estimates that the vandalism took place between 11 p.m.

"I only moved here six to eight months ago," Preston said Monday, when addressing the members of the HRC. "I thought I had gotten away from the bigotry of the world. This has been a real eye-opener to me . . . these days lesbian is not an insult but it was used to hurt me. It was used to put fear into me."

Preston called the Madison County Sheriff's Department, and Lex 18, a Lexington T.V. station, did a story of the vandalism. After that became public, Preston said, several people from Bereans for Fairness reached out to her to give support.

"We wish to raise concerns about the fear that members of

Lucinda Cindy Isaacs

Lucinda (Cindy) Isaacs passed away peacefully on Monday, April 3, in Berea with her daughters by her side.

Lucinda had an adventurous spirit and thoroughly enjoyed the outdoors. She enjoyed hiking, watching birds, and pruning her rose garden. She also loved airshows and flying with stunt pilots; her eyes would light up when she described how it felt to be upside down in an airplane.

Lucinda would often take her grandchildren to the airport to participate in flying programs. She loved telling the story about having to make an unexpected landing in a cornfield. At the age of 50, she took up skydiving, mountain biking, and white water rafting.

Lucinda was a wonderful mother, resilient and independent, and she also made the best iron skillet cornbread. She collected and sold antiques and was a cosmetologist who would often practice hair updos on her daughters. Perpetually happy, sometimes silly, and always thoughtful, Lucinda will be missed.

She is survived by daughters, Bonnie, Bridgett, and Beverly; grandchildren, Alaina and Levi; great grandchildren, Alyssa and Conner; her sisters, Delta, Pearl, Irene, and Edna; her brother, Bill; and many nieces, nephews, and other family members.

She was preceded in death by her parents, Ethel and John; her brother JT; and her grandchild, Tabitha.

Helping others was important to Lucinda and drove her decision to bequeath her body to the University of Kentucky's Department of Anatomy and Neurobiology. The immediate family will honor Lucinda's life in a private outdoor service. In lieu of flowers, donations are suggested to the national or local Alzheimer's Association or Hospice.

Judge Taylor is on the right track

When I first heard our County Judge Executive's phrase, "Heal them not house them," something immediately clicked and thought, finally someone gets it. Heaven knows the current system is failing big time.

Unless you've been living on a different planet for the past many years, you know how devastating the drug issue has become. It's quite literally bankrupting our society, not just financially but spiritually, emotionally and physically. We're losing a generation, likely more than one, to the effects of addiction.

Jailing drug addicts is not solving the problem. It doesn't help them nor does it really help society. Aside from the practical aspects of the unmanageable costs associated with treatment programs that aren't working and the dilemma of trying to build jails with enough room to accommodate the ever-increasing number of drug offenders the bigger problem is the tragic cost in broken lives.

It's never just the person with the drug issue that's affected. Thinking about broken hearted parents and children who are abused and neglected because of someone's addiction is beyond mind numbing. And it's no longer just someone else's problem. You'd be hard pressed to find any family that isn't touched by the drug epidemic in some way.

I really believe that Judge Taylor is on the right track and I'm anxious to follow what happens as the county goes forward in considering a healing center. Beth will be working on detailed report for next week's edition.

We all need to get behind this effort and pray that finally something can be done to actually heal these hurting lives.

From our readers

Why I am a Moderate: Freedom

Dear Editor,

We all want freedom! Liberals and conservatives differ, though, on from whence come the most important threats to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, and correspondingly, where we need to be on guard.

Liberals are more worried about abuses of power from corporations and wealthy interests, while conservatives are more worried about the loss of freedom due to a government that is trying to impose constraints and restrictions. Both sides see these differing infringements as incompatible with their broader convictions about society and the relation of individuals to it, and as diminishing their prospects for "pursuit of happiness", their economic wellbeing, and their participation in civic affairs.

I am a moderate because, as in the case of my prior letter (on chickens and wings), I believe that both sources of limitations on our freedoms are important and matter. The problem with taking a strong position on either side of the divide is that it tends to blind one to the legitimacy of the other set of worries. Even more importantly, strong ideological commitments, as one may find on both the left and the right, can also represent a loss of freedom. Isaac Sharpless, a proud moderate and former president of Haverford College, made this point in a commencement address in 1888 (!) using the bracing phrasing of 19th oratory.

I suggest that you preach truth and do righteousness as you have been taught, where-insoever that teaching may commend itself to your consciences and your judgments. For your consciences and your judgments we have not sought to bind; and see you to it that no other institution, no political party, no social circle, no religious organization, no pet ambitions put such chains on you as would tempt you to sacrifice one iota of the moral freedom of your consciences or the intellectual freedom of your judgments.

Our Founders were also worried that certain powers might try to restrict the freedom of the citizens of the new country, but their worries were directed differently than those of conservatives and liberals of today.

They were worried, for example, about the power of the Church to impose one set of religious beliefs on all, and chose for that reason to emphasize the separation of Church and State. That seems a lesser worry today, but a moderate would still insist that each person should have the freedom to practice his or her own religious beliefs.

The Founders were concerned about the power of the British Crown, and so installed a form of government that provided checks and balances on each branch, and made the whole enterprise answerable to the people. We still benefit from that wisdom today, and a moderate continues to be wary of any undue or unchecked concentration of power.

Perhaps most interesting of all is that the great concentrations of wealth and power present in the world today had not yet arisen, and so could not have been envisioned by the Founders. The British East India Company might have been behind the increased tax on tea that led to a celebrated party in Boston Harbor in 1773, but that company, in terms of its ability to influence the government, surely was not in the league of Big Pharma or the AARP. A moderate, in response to this unanticipated element of the world order, favors interpreting the Constitution in ways that take account of both the long-standing and the later emergent challenges to our individual freedoms.

Freedom is everyone's desire and everyone's responsibility. My favorite moderate said, "Those who deny freedom to others deserve it not for themselves." (Abraham Lincoln.)

Lyle D. Roelofs, Ph.D., became the ninth president of Berea College in 2012. The views expressed here are his own, not those of the College. Some of the ideas advanced here first emerged through a dialog with other college presidents.

Empathy: The Path Through Division

A couple of weeks ago, there was an incident of vandalism in Madison County, where a woman in a same-sex relationship had "lesbian" and the word, "lesbo" spray-painted on her patio and garage door.

My immediate response was to think of how this would affect Berea politically, and my heart sank to imagine what type of reaction may occur. I also quickly thought of how to cover it in the newspaper, and what types of sources I would need to check with.

When I talked to a few others in the community about it, their reaction was similar. They thought immediately of how this would affect the division in our town and whether there would be drama concerning it.

It wasn't until I attended the Berea Human Rights Commission meeting on Monday evening, where the victim of the vandalism stood up to speak, that my thinking switched to really think about how the actions affected her personally. I wish that empathy had kicked in right away, that my first thoughts were of this person in my community who had her property violated, and herself mocked and jeered. Unfortunately, this job has made me more political than I would like, and the tension around the past Fairness Ordinance has made me too leery of dealing with aggressive actions around same-sex relationships.

Two things the woman said really struck me. First, that she moved and expected this to "not happen here." Second, that she was a regular person, trying to live a good life, and didn't flaunt her lifestyle or make a point of it.

It struck me that she never wanted to be an advocate, she never wanted to make her lifestyle a political point. But since she is a woman from Kentucky -- and in my experience that usually refers to feisty and tough -- she's not going to take this treatment lying down. She reported the incident to the police, and she will demand that local leaders pay attention that this happened.

When my empathy kicked in, so did my memories of high school when classmates continually mocked me for being a lesbian. I've shared before about someone writing "dyke" on the posted honor roll beside my name, but it did go beyond that. For several months I was mocked for it -- I don't think anyone actually thought I was a lesbian, but it was the worse slur they could think of. To be jeered at for who you are, not your behavior, is a particularly demeaning act. It means that you are unwelcome, you are a public embarrassment. And that feeling of being exposed, of being shamed, happens regardless of your age or circumstance.

I hope people, regardless of their viewpoint on same-sex relationships, can feel empathy for her, for the fact that her home was violated and she was mocked for who she is. Most of the people who were against Fairness would be vehemently against this vandalism, I know they would. Because that's not who they are either, and they want all people to feel safe and welcome in Berea.

Empathy -- the ability to understand and share the feelings of another; perhaps it can hold us together despite the defenses we can build up so quickly, the defenses that keep breaking our community down.

"Let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not."
- Galatians 6:9

the LGBTQ community and others have experienced because of this vandalism and expression of hate," David Shroyer said. "We also wish to raise concerns that community and official city council support for the protection of all citizens must be clearly expressed."

No specific requests were made of the Human Rights Commission, though a couple people stood up and stated that they were tired of Bereans saying that, "this doesn't happen here." No presenter asked for the Fairness Ordinance to be reconsidered, though Judith Faulkner said she believed in the law, and talked about the inability of members of the LGBTQ community to "go to court."

"We don't want that here, we don't want that in Berea, we don't want that weed to take hold," Faulkner said.

Mim Pride, the chair of the Berea HRC, asked audience members to report incidents when they happened. She said she was told, by people who "matter" in Berea, that since this happened in the county it wasn't a Berea concern.

HRC member Janice Blythe said that as an elderly, African-American woman, she had faced difficulties in Berea.

"It has not always been a welcoming experience for me," Blythe said, commenting that she thought about leaving Berea when the Fairness Ordinance was not approved by city council. "Berea's not dreamland, it's not utopia, it's an okay town but it can be better."

Gene Stinchcomb, the vice-chair of the HRC, encouraged people to report when instances of discrimination or harassment happen, because "until instances are reported, we have nothing to work on." Pride also spoke of the lack of an HRC in Madison County -- both Berea and Richmond have an HRC -- and suggested that people may want to push for the establishment of one.

"We should probably be working in the direction of getting fiscal court to act on that," Pride said.

Stinchcomb made a motion to study further the possible harassment or discrimination, and HRC member Ali Blair suggested a motion that she had written up earlier, which is as follows, "As the Human Rights Commission seeks to conduct or arrange for research projects into and publish reports on discrimination and progress and equal opportunity in the community, and to improve community relations and ease intergroup tension, the Berea HRC move to monitor and research hate incidents within the community in order to design educational programming to ease intergroup tensions and to draft memos concerning issues within the community to be sent to city leadership."

Blythe asked the word "document" be added after the line of "monitor and research."

The motion passed unanimously.

The act of vandalism against Whitney Preston was classified as second-degree criminal mischief by the sheriff's department. They are asking people to call Detective Lieutenant Todd Allen at 623-1511 if they have any information about the incident.

In other news of HRC: Members of the HRC welcomed Peter Hille as their newest member. He joins Pride, Stinchcomb, Blair, Eef Fontanez from Berea Community, Gilbert, and Blythe.

Kim Kobersmith was present at the meeting to present about the Berea Leaders Experience that Union Church is sponsoring this summer. It is a one-week day camp for children from ages 6 - 13. The commission voted to donate $500 to the camp, which they stated seemed to have similar goals as the Alternatives to Violence project they sponsored last year.

The commission also voted to purchase a laptop for $2,010.66.

They will be interviewing for the position of assistant to the HRC. Michael Harrington previously worked in the role, but left to work for KFTC. It is a 24-hour a week position.

Pride announced that the Berea tour sponsored by Fair Housing of Kentucky will occur on April 25. Fair Housing is funding the entire venture. Jackie Burnside and Sharyn Mitchell will be working on the tour, which will involve the African-American community and its housing situation.

The commission voted to move their meetings to council chambers so they could be videotaped.

teach youth conflict resolution skills and team work seemed like a perfect way.

"We want to create leaders who can non-violently resolve conflicts," Kim Kobersmith, the director of the camp, said.

The camp is called Berea Leadership Experience, and will take place from July 24 - 28. Kobersmith will be using a Peace Village curriculum, and has solicited volunteers from the community to work with the youth every day. She is hoping to serve 50 kids.

Registration for the camp will open online next Monday, April 10. The day camp, which will cost $75, will run from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday. There will be scholarships for $25 per week.

Union Church has given some seed money for the project, as a Michelle Tooley memorial. The Berea Human Rights Commission also approved giving the Berea Leadership Experience $500 at their meeting on Monday.

Kobersmith, who led camps in Alaska before moving to Kentucky, is excited by the response from the community regarding the camp. The summer food program will be taking care of the lunches, and other individuals and groups have been pledging support.

"This is really about teaching the kids to live together, and solve problems together," Kobersmith said. "Because of my experience with the homeschool co-op Red Cedar, I'm positive about teaching kids to positively resolve conflicts, to work together, and create their own learning experience."

People interested in registering for the camp, or volunteering, can go to the Berea Leadership Experience Facebook page.

to think about whether she wanted to press charges. The next day she informed the officer she did want to press charges, and showed text messages sent from Miller apologizing for what he did.

Miller agreed to come in for an interview, and he was subsequently arrested for first degree rape.

Unlawful Transaction with Minor

On March 28, Berea police officers responded to a call of suspicious activity at the Berea Arena Theater on Big Hill Rd. The caller said a car with two women and one man were just sitting and possibly were involved with drug activity. The police officer noticed a strong odor of marijuana coming from the vehicle. When he asked who was smoking, the driver Madelyne Roquemore, 18, of Berea said she had just smoked. She handed over some marijuana to the officer. Another passenger, Kendra Dees, 21, of Berea also admitted to smoking marijuana. The officer then noticed two juveniles in the back of the car, who were identified as 14 year old. Both Roquemore and Dees admitted to smoking marijuana in front of them. One of the juveniles had marijuana on them.

Both Dees and Roquemore were arrested for second degree unlawful transaction with a minor and possession of marijuana.

DUI Arrest

On March 31, a police officer was sent to Oak Street because of a report of a black truck swerving on the road. The officer found the truck on N. Broadway, and stopped the driver. There was a strong smell of alcohol, and an open alcoholic beverage.

Edgar Rodriguez, 27, of Berea failed the sobriety tests. He was arrested for operating a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol or drugs, failure to wear seat belts, no operators license, and failure to maintain required insurance.

On April 1, a Berea police officer arrived at an accident at the intersection of Hwy 595 and the exit ramp for southbound I75. A woman had been hit by another vehicle, and then left the scene. Witnesses followed the woman, and gave turn by turn directions to 911. The officers found Carolyn S. Reed, 64, of Berea on Lester St. She failed the sobriety tests.

Reed was arrested for operating motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol or drugs and leaving the scene of the accident.

On April 2, a Berea police officer noticed a vehicle traveling on Richmond Rd. and weaving around. When stopped, the driver slurred and had trouble finding her driver's license. She also tried to hide something in her purse. Jeanette Greer, 48, of London failed the sobriety tests and the officer found a small baggie of methamphetamine in her purse along with a pipe. She also had a pill container with xanax.

Greer was arrested for operating a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol or drugs, failing to maintain insurance, operating with an expired operators license, buy/possess drug paraphernalia, first degree possession of controlled substance -- methamphetamine, and prescription of controlled substance not in proper container.

marketed and concentrated on the arts, including the Learnshops, the Hands-on Workshops, the Artist Accelerator program, the Studio Artists program, and Arts Across the Curriculum.

Council member Billy Wooten asked about the "brand" of Berea, since the arts are not as popular as decades ago, and council member Jim Davis asked if the tourist department intended to highlight anything beyond Berea College and the arts, since those were the only items featured in Hensley's presentation.

"Perhaps we need to expand our brand," Wooten suggested, "such as adventure tourism."

Hensley replied that they were marketing the adventure activities here, but that the arts and crafts were still the major piece of marketing Berea.

Wooten also had some pointed questions regarding the video series tourism has started on businesses in Berea, and how the advertising budget of $350,000 gets spent.

"That's a great video," Wooten said of the Noodle Nirvana piece, "but I could hear some rumblings out in the city. Will every business in Berea who wants to take part get a chance in this kind of video series? Will they have a chance to have a video, which basically looks like a free commercial?"

Hensley replied that any business considered a tourism business would be highlighted. Wooten asked for the criteria of a tourism business, since Noodle Nirvana was a place to eat and not a classic tourist location. Hensley replied that if the business was in the Visitors Guide that was recently published, then it was a tourist business.

Hensley also committed to submitting an itemized breakdown of the $350,000 spent in advertising.

The Tourism Department has four full-time staff and eight part-time staff, which includes five people working reception at the Welcome Center. Hensley invited the council members to participate in the Lunch on the Lawn on April 19 at 10 a.m. The lunch is to celebrate National Tourism Week. She also invited the council to participate in a tour of Berea College with Tim Jordan.

Mayor Steve Connelly, and council members brought up the Healing Center that Madison County Judge Executive Reagan Taylor is promoting as an alternative to the incarceration of drug addicts. Connelly encouraged council members to read the RFP online, that highlights the "audacious and visionary program" of the county.

"There are significant public policy issues intertwined in this proposal," Connelly said. "I would suggest that all Madison County leaders should study and discuss this RFP as the fiscal court really wrestles with this intractable responsibility that they have."

Council member Bruce Fraley echoed Connelly's sentiments, stating that this healing center vision of the county presents an important opportunity, and it will be valuable for the governments to work together.

In other business:

- John Fox addressed the city council about the Boone Trace Trail, and announced the National Park Service will be offering technical assistance in developing the trail. Five workshops will be offered in the communities that host a piece of the Trail, and the first will take place in Richmond in the Perkins Building on May 1 from 6-9 p.m. Fox stated that he felt Berea was the model that other communities needed to follow, with a supportive mayor and a pro-active community with much to offer. The Boone Trace Trail is the path that Daniel Boone blazed in 1775 when he came through the Cumberland Gap until establishing the Boonesborough Fort.

- Randy Coffey presented on the US 25 Yard Sale from June 1-3. He said it would involve 17 towns. He asked for the same two signs from the city that have been offered before.

- City Administrator Randy Stone stated that he and Berea Municipal Utilities Director Ed Fortner met with the Army Corps of Engineers for several hours. They had been asked to fill out permit information, and submit even more documentation. He said the Army Corps is still leaning on the City of Berea getting a pipeline to the Kentucky River. However, Stone said, if Berea gets a pipeline then the city pays for the whole project. If they get water storage in Owsley Fork Dam, then they would share the costs with the federal government. Stone said the Corps has a problem with the dam increase, because such a project "has not been done before."

- Wooten brought up the vandalism that took place a few weeks ago, calling it a hate crime. A woman had her home spray-painted with lesbian slurs. He stated that he was very conflicted about this. He recognized that the Fairness Ordinance would not be looked upon favorably by the community, but he felt it was important for the City of Berea to denounce hate crimes of all kinds. He may bring a resolution to the council soon.

- Laura Wick presented on the Berea Markets Market that she is planning for May 13. She stated that the business licensing requirement could prove to be a barrier for new events trying to get off the ground. Her vendors were already charged a booth fee, Wick stated, and requiring them to pay a $25 business license on top of that could be too much. Connelly asked the council if they would like to form a legislative committee to take a look at the business license ordinance which was both complicated and convoluted. Finance committee chair Steve Caudill said the committee would review it, and come back with recommendations.

- Three bids were received for carbon cylinders for the Berea Fire Department. The lowest bid was $28,000 from Blue Grass Fire Equipment.

- The City of Berea only received one bid for the street resurfacing, from Allen Company for $109,000.

- The council voted to table the Codes Enforcement Board amendment because of language they wanted included on how someone could get a lien removed. Fraley stated that he didn't feel he could approve the amendment if that language wasn't added, and Caudill agreed. The amendment will come back before the council at their meeting in two weeks.

- Emerson McAfee asked the city council what they had decided regarding the street signs that would honor those from Berea killed in the Vietnam War. He said that both Richmond and Madison County had shot him down, even though the didn't express any reservations in the last six months. Caudill said the public works committee was looking at the issue, but they have some concerns and ideas to work through. They have considered that there may be more casualties in future wars, and so they want to look at the bigger picture of honoring all those who have fallen in wartime.

- Connelly declared April as the Month of the Young Child

- Connelly signed a proclamation, making April 4, 2017 National Service Recognition Day. Several volunteers stood up with the mayor to receive the proclamation.

be sure to find spring time farm food like greens, carrots, pastured meat, eggs and that harbinger of spring: ramps (wild leeks). The markets' commitment to a grower-only market will guarantee that the food you purchase is grown by the vendor who sells it. It also means that every canned, baked or processed food will have farm ingredients sourced directly from the vendor's fields.

"We have a deep commitment to building a strong local agriculture economy" says market manager, Margie Stelzer. "Our vetting process for farmers is among the most extensive in the state requiring each farmer to submit a farm plan and to agree to an on-site farm visit. This prevents vendors from re-selling produce bought from other sources. When "local" at big grocery chains can mean up to 500 miles away, we want our customers to be assured that local at the Berea Farmers Market means from that farmer's property."

A guarantee of direct from the farm sourced expands to other market products as well like herb infused natural cleaners, goats' milk soap, alpaca winter wear and bees wax food wraps. Any market in Berea wouldn't be complete without an offering of artisanal crafts and the Berea Farmers Market carries an array of juried, hand crafted items like naturally sourced jewelry, handmade journals, nature inspired watercolors and hand felted scarves. "As a farmers market, we look for non-food products that are sustainably created and reflect the fields, farms and forests in the area," says Stelzer.

Another commitment of the Berea Farmers Market is to make the market more accessible to all income groups. Thanks to grant support from Community Farm Alliance, they will be expanding their double dollars program so that up to $20 of a customer's food stamp benefits are doubled by the market. They are also continuing their partnership with the USDA Summer Food Service Program (SFSP) so that all children can receive free lunches each Saturday throughout the summer months. The SFSP also brings a wide array of kid friendly activities to help connect kids to their food sources, the natural world or to the benefits of eating fresh food. They'll even have blender bicycles where kids can purchase farmers' food and use pedal power to whip it into a delicious smoothie.

"Our partnership with Grow Appalachia and the SFSP is one of the best things that happened to the market," says Stelzer. "Kids are fed and entertained while parents shop, relax and visit. It creates a real community gathering space."

The Berea Farmers Market meets every Saturday from 9 am-1pm. In May, they'll add Tuesdays and will be open from 3-6pm.

Struggling to Understand the Behaviors of Alzheimer's Patients

In Kentucky alone it is estimated that 70,000 individuals have Alzheimer's disease and 271,000 people are their caregivers. 271,000 caregivers are dealing with strange behaviors that they may not know how to deal with. Wandering, hallucinations, paranoia, aggression, shadowing, the exaggerated use of curse words. These are just a few of the many behaviors that can accompany a diagnosis of Alzheimer's disease or a related dementia. What causes them? What can we do about them?

What caregivers do not always understand is that these behaviors communicate messages from our loved ones because of the inability to verbalize their wants, needs, and feelings and because the person with the disease now has a reality all their own. Many caregivers think that their loved one is being difficult on purpose, but in reality, their loved one is having a very difficult time. Rather than being defensive when blamed for something by their loved one, it is much better to apologize, even if the caregiver did nothing wrong. It can quickly ease the situation.

Wandering may often communicate boredom, hunger or thirst or even a need to go to the bathroom. Sudden changes in behaviors may be linked to changes in the person's routine or an infection.

What should caregivers do when their loved ones experience these behaviors? Put on your detective hat. Detect and connect. Join their reality. What might be causing the behavior? Look at the physical needs of the person. Is the person hungry, thirsty, or need to go to the restroom? Is the person sick? Once these needs have been ruled out look at the environment. Has the person's routine changed? Is the person overstimulated? Is the person stimulated enough? What are the person's emotional needs? How does the situation feel to your loved one? Try to identify the feelings behind the behavior of your loved one."

To learn more about behaviors, the class Understanding and Responding to Dementia Related Behavior will be offered on Monday, May 15th at the Madison County Public Library located at 319 Chestnut Street in Berea from 6-7:30pm. To register, please call the Alzheimer's Association's 24/7 helpline at 1-800-272-3900. Designed for family caregivers; please no professionals.

About the Alzheimer's Association

The Alzheimer's Association is the world's leading voluntary health organization in Alzheimer's care, support and research. It is the largest nonprofit funder of Alzheimer's research. The Association's mission is to eliminate Alzheimer's disease through the advancement of research; to provide and enhance care and support for all affected; and to reduce the risk of dementia through the promotion of brain health. Its vision is a world without Alzheimer's. Visit www.alz.org or call 800.272.3900.

City Administrator Gene Stinchcomb asked that the council give Proctor, Davis, and Ray Engineers of Lexington 60 days notice, but the council voted for 30 days. Council member Tom McCay expressed concern about ongoing projects if they were let go in 30 days, including where PDR was defining an area near the proposed I-75 interchange for B-4 zoning. Complaints were lack of supervision, inconsistent billing, and frequent costly mistakes.

Clementine's Bake Shop Opens on Chestnut

By Kim Kobersmith
 Citizen Reporter

After five years of hawking their wares at the Berea Farmer's Market and three years selling to wholesale customers, Drew Elliott and Lindsey Windland have decided to open their own bake shop.

The long-awaited Clementine's Bake Shop is located on Chestnut Street, in the previous home of Street Side Café.

Owners Elliott and Windland have been working hard to adapt the space for their bakery, with their opening date on Tuesday.

"We have outgrown our current kitchen and need more production space. We have had to turn down orders because we didn't have the oven space," said Elliott as one reason for the expansion.

After some of their recipes were published in Tasting Kentucky by Maggie Green, their customer calls increased, with many people asking the location of their storefront. The support of Linda Isaacs, owner of the building, made it possible for them to create such a storefront.

"Linda has been really accommodating," said Elliott, adding that leasing a location needing only minor adjustments was a great business opportunity.

Loyal customers of Clementine's will find their favorites at the new shop, such as fresh baked sourdough bread and chocolate croissants. There will also be new offerings of eclairs and bourbon ball layer cake. One fun feature of the new space is that customers will be able to watch the baked goods made from scratch right in front of their eyes, as the production space reaches into the store with a surrounding bar.

Along with the fresh baked goods, Clementine's Bake Shop will offer more prepared food options. Busy Bereans can pick up a quart of soup, a pot pie, a quiche, or a whole cake to take home. Or they can grab a quick sit-down breakfast or lunch.

The menu will feature sandwiches made from fresh-roasted and sliced turkey and homemade soup, as well as favorites like chicken pot pie and shepherd's pie. They will also include creative vegetarian, vegan and gluten-free options.

For weekend brunch specials, Clementine's Bake Shop will offer breakfast sandwiches like a biscuit with cheddar, country ham, and green apples, and French toast. Many of the fresh ingredients they use come from their family farm, Blizzard Hill, and Windland and Elliott look forward to being creative with the seasonal bounty of the fields.

The owners of Clementine's look forward to joining the growing food hub on Chestnut Street, believing that the local eateries will experience a synergy from their proximity.

Elliott pointed out, "When Native Bagel started selling at the Farmer's Market, not only did they do great, it also resulted in increased sales for Clementine's."

Inspired by neighbor Noodle Nirvana's partnership with a non-profit, Clementine's is following suit. For the first year, they have selected Grow Appalachia, which tackles food insecurity in the region. Once a month for a year, a percentage of their proceeds will be contributed to the Summer Food Service Program for kids in Madison County, one of Grow Appalachia's programs.

"I am happy to know we'll be able to feed kids," says Windland.

Many in the community are supporting the growth of Clementine's. Their successful Kickstarter campaign surpassed their fundraising goal in just two days.

With all the growth and changes in store for Clementine's Bake Shop, they will remain at their core a bakery. They look forward to not only the ability to sell fresh-baked goods at the storefront, but also the opportunity to increase their wholesale and market sales.

Elliott and Windland will continue as a vendor at the Berea Farmer's Market as well, and will expand to the Downtown Richmond Farmer's Market.

Going back to the basics, Elliott said, "We want to draw people in with the smell of fresh-baked bread."

Southern Interact Club Sponsors 5K for Polio

Hayden Knight, vice-president of the Madison Southern Interact Club, made a special presentation to the Berea Rotary at its regular meeting.

Using a district grant, Berea Rotary is sponsoring the upcoming "Run for Polio, 5K/ Run-Walk," the brainchild of the Interact Club. Knight updated Rotary members, noting that registration is occurring online via Active.com.

The fee for participants is $25. This event will take place on Saturday, April 15, at 8 a.m. and will begin at Madison Southern.

The members of the Interact Club chose the title "Run for Polio" to help the public better understand the main goal of Rotary International—to eradicate polio. Last year there were only four cases of polio in Nigeria. Through the Rotary International Foundation thousands of inoculations have been possible worldwide.

In addition to Knight's information, Willie Walker Thompson of the Richmond Rotary extended an invitation to attend a meeting whose function is to save an existing charter for the currently defunct noon Rotary club. This meeting for interested parties will be April 17, 5:30 p.m. at the large room of Gillum's restaurant. The proposed club would need to charge only national dues which might appeal to younger potential members.

Both the District Governor-Elect and the District Governor Nominee will be present.

On the 18th of April, Kathleen Myers will speak to Berea Rotary concerning a special program called "The Berea Leadership Experience."

Berea College Student Wins Watson Fellowship

Berea College Nominee Zakiyya Ashe won the national competition for the 2017-2018 Thomas J. Watson Fellowship prize of $30,000.

Ashe will engage in purposeful exploration—traveling the world for 365 days—after she graduates in May.

Her project, "Hidden Minorities: Connection through Animation and Graphic Novels," will take her through Australia, Singapore, South Africa, South Korea, and France. During this year, Ashe will travel to five countries essential in adding racial, gender, and LGBTQIA+ diversity to the animation pipeline.

She asked, "What are the mindsets of minorities pioneering this new animation art form?"

The countries she wishes to visit encourage audiences to establish networks using animation and graphic novels as a connection medium.

Quilt Extravaganza Back on Schedule

The Quilt & Fiber Extravaganza will be happening this summer after all!

Initially, the Berea Arts Council had cancelled the annual event because of construction at Berea Community School. The school has historically hosted the event in the gymnasium. But Foley Middle ended up available, so the Quilt and Fiber Extravaganza is back on schedule.

"The elementary gym at Berea Community was the only part of the school available and that wasn't enough room for us," Gwen Childs, the arts council director said, "and we didn't think there were other affordable options, but Foley was available and their schedule worked with ours."

The quilting event is scheduled for Friday and Saturday, July 28 and 29. It will showcase a wide variety of quilts, including historical, family, and art quilts. The quilt theme for 2017 is the Wedding Ring pattern and its variations.

Fiber creations such as weaving, knitting, crochet, felting and all other fiber art will also be featured. Community members are invited to display quilts and fiber pieces they have made or are part of their family collection.

Berea Arts Council director Gwen Childs said, "We were worried we would not be able to find another place to hold the event, but the administration at Foley Middle School has graciously agreed to allow us the use of the school. We're making plans and looking forward to another great event."

For more information about the Quilt & Fiber Extravaganza, visit www.bereaartscouncil.org or call 859-985-9317.

Author Laura Frantz to Speak at Lenten Lunch

Award-winning, best-selling author Laura Frantz will be speaking at the final Lenten Lunch on Wednesday, April 12 at the Berea United Methodist Church.

The lunches, which have been open to all Bereans, have featured a speaker, music and a soup-and-sandwich lunch each Wednesday during Lent. There's no charge for the meal, which begins at noon in the Parish House and ends by 12:45 p.m.

Frantz is passionate about all things historical, particularly the 18th-century, and writes her manuscripts in longhand first.

Her stories often incorporate Scottish themes that reflect her family heritage. She is a direct descendant of George Hume, Wedderburn Castle, Berwickshire, Scotland, who was exiled to the American colonies for his role in the Jacobite Rebellion of 1715, settled in Virginia, and is credited with teaching George Washington surveying in the years 1748-1750. Frantz lives and writes in a log cabin in the heart of Kentucky.

According to Publishers Weekly, "Frantz has done her historical homework." With her signature attention to historical detail and emotional depth, she is represented by Janet Kobobel Grant, Literary Agent & Founder, Books & Such Literary Agency of Santa Rosa, California.

Frantz will make an additional appearances in Berea this spring, at the Berea Book Fest on Saturday, March 18, in the Madison County Library from 10 a.m. - 2:30 p.m.

Berea United Methodist Church is located on the corner of Fee and Chestnut Streets in Berea. The Parish House is at 101 Fee Street. Doors for the luncheon will open at 11:45 a.m. For more information about the church, or the Lenten Lunch series, please call 859-986-3485.

From gardening to Yoga and senior wellness to homeschool gatherings, it's all at the Library!

and there are more on the way. The garden tools are all shined up and ready to go. All you need to check out seeds and tools is your library card. Our partnership garden program series with Sustainable Berea is in full swing. And our gardens on the side of the Berea library branch will soon be growing.

For me, April is also a time of personal transformation. That first whiff of freshly-cut grass seems to light a spark in me (and no, it's not just my allergies kicking in!). I throw open the windows to let the sunshine in. I feel like getting up and doing something, creating something, cleaning something. I feel the need to get healthier and stronger.

Thank goodness I work at the Madison County Public Library! Every day I am surrounded by so many resources to help me along that path. Not only do we have gardening and healthy eating classes and presentations, the library also offers a variety of programs on everything from stopping smoking (in partnership with the Madison County Health Department), to Zumba and PiYo classes, and Yoga classes for everyone.

This month's installation of the Senior Wellness Series brings together both. The program starts with some gentle Yoga led by Leah Van Winkle. Then our friends from Sustainable Berea will present an informative session on creating window boxes and planters. There are two sessions in the library - in Berea on April 6, 10-11 AM, and in Richmond on April 20, 10-11 AM. Plus our Outreach department takes the show on the road with sessions at both the Richmond Senior Center and Berea Senior Center.

In fact, the library truly has programs and services for all ages. For example, in partnership with Grow Appalachia, the Berea location offers a free, healthy "Power Up" snack for those 18 and younger Monday-Friday at 3:30 PM. And on April 12 from 11 to 12:30 PM at the Berea location, the library hosts the last Homeschool Get-together for this spring. Homeschool families gather to meet each other and share ideas, support, and resources. A free, simple lunch is provided, and there are activities for self-directed children. This month, Anne Lawson provides a short presentation, "Light at the End of the Tunnel: Wisdom Gleaned from 18 Years of Experience as a Homeschooling Mom."

And don't even get me started on the books.

We have an amazing collection of books to help you with transforming just about every aspect of yourself, your life, even your world. The Berea location has an awesome display right now - From Garden to Table to Library - a whole range of shelves packed with books on gardening and eating fresh and healthy.

Since I'm just beginning my personal Yoga practice, I thought I would see what books the library had to offer on the subject. A simple search of the catalog returned 28 pages of results!

And it wasn't just books, although I counted 47 print titles in my quick search. The Madison County Public Library also offers more than 50 yoga-themed DVDs for all ages and all levels. There are at least 5 yoga CDs, a subscription to the magazine, Yoga Journal, and more than 30 downloadable materials on the subject. A good portion of these are digital video downloads, although there are also plenty of eBooks and eAudiobooks.

And that was just in the non-fiction section, just strictly on the subject of Yoga practice. There are also several yoga-inspired novels and volumes of poetry.

Speaking of books, The Friends of the Madison County Public Library host their Spring Book Sale in both library locations on April 29 (9 AM-6 PM) and April 30 (1-5 PM). It's a great opportunity to stock up on your summer reading material at a great price. Plus, the book sales help the Friends help the library make our awesome Summer Reading Program possible each year.

Although poet T.S. Eliot may have declared that "April is the cruellest month," it looks like April is an activity-filled month at the Madison County Public Library. I hope to see you here soon!

County Pursues Vision of Healing Center

Current Trends Point to 600 Inmates by 2020

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

The two of them remember their meeting in Judge Executive Reagan Taylor's office clearly.

"We were sitting here looking at each other, just looking," Madison County Deputy Judge Colleen Chaney said, "and I remember Reagan leaning back into his chair . . ."

Taylor quickly picked up the narrative, "yeah, leaning back just like this, and I said, '$50 million dollars and we'll be in the same exact place we are now.'"

Then the conversation took a more positive turn, when Chaney suggesting that perhaps they could help the inmates. And Taylor replied with what would become his key phrase, "maybe we could heal them."

From that conversation, the idea of the Madison County Healing Center was born, what Berea Mayor Steve Connelly later called a "bold, audacious plan." Instead of building a bigger jail that would cost $50 million dollars, Taylor posited, why not build a community based Angels, who performed a dance before the rising, bowed down on his arrival. The church has not performed the play, which was written by one of their members, Warren Powlison, for five years. The play starts with Scene I The Marketplace on Tuesday, and ends with Sunday morning's resurrection. The directors and actors have fully committed to the performance, with a dramatic crucifixion scene and dramatic lighting and music. The 2017 Passion Play will start at 7 p.m., and will be performed Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, April 12 - 14.

Golf Course, Parks Look Forward to Increased Activity

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

Reports on the Battlefield Golf Club and the Madison County parks were given to the fiscal court on Tuesday, with warmer weather bringing people outside.

Clay Hamrick, director of the golf club, reported that they had a rougher March because of weather, but April was looking very good.

"We plan to come under our expenses in the budget," Hamrick said.

The pricing for the golf club has stayed the same for 10 seasons, Hamrick announced, with $29 as the highest rate. People can pay $20 to play 18 holes of golf Monday through Friday, and youth 15 and younger only pay $7.

Phillip Seyfrit announced that the pavilions at the parks were getting booked up. He announced that people could bring battered and torn flags to the Battle of Richmond Visitors Center, where they will be disposed of properly. They can be brought by during their office hours, 10 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 10 a.m. - 2 p.m. on Saturdays.

The fiscal court approved both the Kentucky Road Aid amount of $1,455,997.17 from the Transportation Cabinet for county road aid funds, and $143,517.93 for the Municipal Road Aid cooperative agreement. The Kentucky Road Aid increased by $48,000 from last year, and the Municipal Road Aid increased by $7,000. Both are based on the fuel tax.

Grant to Help Families Purchase Homes

Two hundred low-in-come families will each receive a $10,500 down-payment assistance loan to help them with home purchases, thanks to a $2.1 million grant award-ed to Appalachian Com-munity Federal Credit Union (ACFCU).

ACFCU will partner with multiple housing-re-lated organizations across 30 counties in Kentucky, Virginia and Tennessee, and plans to complete the program over two years starting this month.

"Homeownership is one of the most effective paths to building wealth and fi-nancial security, and for many low and moderate-income families it is the only path," ACFCU CEO Ron Scott said. "ACFCU provides members with tools to manage their fi-nances and improve their credit scores. We provide a variety of fair lending op-tions. But many deserving families still cannot must-er the initial resources re-quired for homeown-ership, so we're grateful for this opportunity to help radically change peoples' lives for the better."

ACFCU was one of fewer than 20 recipients in a highly competitive national grant process for the "Project Reinvest" program. The credit union is a federally certified Community Development Financial Institution (CDFI), a status reserved for financial institutions dedicated to responsible, affordable lending to help low-income, low-wealth and other disadvantaged people and communities join the economic main-stream.

Adam Dickson, ACF-CU's CDFI resource co-ordinator, said the grant allows ACFCU to enter a new chapter in its work as a CDFI, and to strengthen regional partnerships.

"We greatly respect the region's community development sector and their focus on affordable housing," Dickson said. "Being a CDFI, we want to leverage our designa-tion to be of the greatest impact for the needs of Central Appalachia. Us-ing this funding together with partners to change families' lives for the bet-ter is one way we see ourselves as good stewards and effective collabora-tors."

Families with incomes at or below the area annu-al median may qualify for the program. For a fam-ily of four, that equates to $46,375 in most of the rural counties ACFCU serves, including 16 in southeastern Kentucky.

In that income range, with good credit and not too much other debt, a family could afford to borrow up to $140,000 us-ing very conservative esti-mates. At a family income of $36,000, the amount is still about $110,000.

All families who receive the loans – which are pay-able only if the owner sells or refinances the home – will have completed eight hours of homeownership training.

Potential buyers, real-tors and others needing further information about program participation should contact Curtis Montgomery, ACFCU's Partner Support Coordi-nator, at (800) 378-3778, (423) 230-2648 or cmont-gomery@myacfcu.org.

Martin to Portray Mary Todd Lincoln

Later this month, Debo-rah Martin from Berea will be portraying Mary Todd Lincoln in the Kentucky Chautauqua's Lincoln's Chief Advisor.

Martin will be offering this exclusive performance on Sunday, April 23, at Mt. Zion Christian Church at 2:30 p.m. There will be no charge for the event, and a light reception will be held following the portrayal. Mt. Zion is south of Rich-mond at 830 Battlefield Memorial Highway.

The Battle of Richmond Association and the Madison County Civil War Roundtable are partnering to bring this performance.

Mary Todd Lincoln lived a life of tremendous tri-umph and great tragedy. A Lexington native, Mary Todd was educated at some of the finest schools, making her one of the most well educated women of the time. While living with her older sister in Spring-field, Illinois, Mary met and married attorney and state legislator Abraham Lincoln.

Mary Todd was ambi-tious, and had high expectations for her husband's political career. Her lofty expectations came to fru-ition when Abraham Lin-coln was elected President of the United States in No-vember 1860.

Deborah Martin of Berea is an associate professor of theater and film and Berea College. She previous served as both the director of theatre and the coach of the Berea College speech and debate team. Martin has appeared in many pro-ductions while at Berea College, including Cat on a Hot Tin Roof, The Invention of Love, The Beauty Queen of Leenane and She Stoops to Conquer.

Because He Lives

Scenter Stage

Teresa Scenters, Publisher

Easter.

Some associate it with bunnies and chicks and candy, nothing wrong in that unless we forget that those are the trivial accompaniments to the true message of renewal, forgiveness and redemption.

It's fitting that this holy day comes in the spring when trees and flowers are beginning to bloom and things are coming to life again after winter. Reminding us that there is life after death.

There are people very near and dear to my heart who are looking death in the face right now. They know Jesus and they know that He is the Great Physician. They also know death is part of life, but the knowing doesn't ease the pain of facing separation.

It's natural to question why a good person has to go through pain and suffering. When the time comes to look death in the face, whether it's our own or someone we love, there is really only one thing that comforts.

Christ, the Son of God, died not for "the righteous, but sinners."

Who is a sinner? Well, all of us. Every single one of us, who has ever been unkind, or lied, or been disobedient. Though we might like to think of sinners as murderers and thieves, it all counts.

Jesus was the only sinless man ever born, and yet, He stepped in to take our punishment and, in the process, conquered sin and ultimately death. He rose to new life and miraculously, through his atonement, offers us a clean slate before a Holy God. That's what Easter is all about.

Sometimes it's tempting to watch while those we see as bad people "get theirs." Maybe to even feel a sense of self-righteousness as lives come crashing down because of bad choices and dishonesty. But we need to remember that, "All have sinned and fallen short of the glory of God."

I am among countless broken humans who over the millennia have claimed Christ's sacrifice for our sins. He is raised for all those who've been exposed in their wrongs and for those who were never caught, and for the ones who are just plain broken.

Jesus on the cross took the punishment I deserve for my sins and now because of His resurrection I stand forgiven by His grace.

He is risen indeed.

From Fear to Strength

Letters from Berea

Beth Myers Editor

I attended the dress rehearsal of the Easter play that River of Life Church is performing, and I appreciated the opportunity to see their creative effort.

The story of Jesus Christ's death and resurrection is such a powerful one; I think we can forget its profound messages since we hear it over and over. Even for non-Christians, it can be understood on many levels, from children to adults. All faiths can appreciate the promise of everlasting life through belief, forgiveness and sacrifice, the betrayal of corrupt religions leaders terrified of something new, and ultimately love conquering fear. For me personally, the story affirms my pacifist stance, as Jesus refuses the mantle of warrior or king to save the Jews from the Romans, heals an enemy's ears while being led to his death, and asks God for forgive those who are murdering him.

When the River of Life production showed the scene of the disciples huddled in their home, afraid, grieving, and doubting, I became a little teary. What a compelling moment, for the power of Jesus, the power of the spirit, to lead them away from fear towards love, from cowardice towards ministry. They expected Jesus to bring the kingdom of heaven, they didn't realize that they were it.

Over and over in history, the power of God, of love, drives people from fear towards strength. It carried the African-Americans through the fight for civil rights with the strength of the church at their backs; it carried Ghandi, Martin Luther King, Jr., it carried people across the ocean to an unknown land. It carried Archbishop Oscar Romero to challenge Salvadoran soldiers, and local Pastor Kenny Davis to minister to sex offenders at the detention center. It may have partially carried the county fiscal court into their current "audacious" plan -- to heal inmates instead of just housing them.

Most profoundly for me, it carried my grandfather, who refused to participate in the military during WWI because of his Mennonite faith. When soldiers in the camp were beating him, and he thought they would kill him, he wrote in his journal that he was ready to die for his beliefs if that was what God willed.

I thought of my grandfather while I watched the Easter play, and took photos of the actors. What extraordinary courage and faith he showed, to be ready to die for what he believed. Even the Son of God cried in fear in the garden, but ultimately drew on the spirit of God to finish his work.

belle hooks mentioned the power of faith when she spoke on Monday while gifting Berea College with her papers. She spoke of not knowing how people kept going, without spirituality to strengthen them.

In a recent flight, she said, when she was trying to get back home to Berea, she was searched multiple times by security and treated suspiciously and disrespectfully. When she finally sat down in the plane, she was in tears. But a Lutheran minister was sitting next to her, and they ended up praying. Taking her from fear and rage to a place of strength.

Like belle hooks, I also wonder where people without religious beliefs or spirituality get their strength. Daily, I find myself drawing from that well, looking to God to transform fear to courage and strength. To live up to the legacy of my grandparents and parents.

And since I started with the Easter play, I'll end with another scripture, which coincidentally is my mom's favorite one.

But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint.

-- Isaiah 40:31

A Blast from the Past

Dear Editor,

A blast from the past. My cousin sent me the picture from your paper of March 22, 2017. It brought back memories of 55 years ago.

Jo Neuber and I were members of the Berea High School class of 1962. We were voted "Most Likely to Succeed," and our pose picture was placed in the high school year book. I assume that we were selected because I was valedictorian and she was salutatorian.

I'm not sure I lived up to that title. I was never elected president, but instead became a local church pastor. I graduated from Berea College in 1966, got an M.Div. degree from Southern Baptist Seminary in 1969. This year I have observed the 50th year of my ordination.

I retired from 41 years of pastoring, the last 33 years as pastor of the Alexandria Indiana First Baptist Church. If success has to do with being rich and famous then I must be a disappointment to my classmates who selected me. But if being successful involves having a meaningful and purposeful life filled with love, joy, peace, and an endless hope, I have succeeded beyond anything I could ever have imagined.

Come to think about it, I would not trade what I have had and still am having for the other. Thanks for the memories.

grade. She was a natural shooter, and averaged 45 percent on 3-pointers. "I love offense," Sandefur said, who played point guard. "I enjoyed playing defense, but offense was what I really loved." During her high school years, different schools tried to recruit her for their teams, including some in Lexington. But Sandefur is glad she chose to stick with Berea Community. "I don't know if I could have reached my goals if I had played for a bigger, more competitive school,"

Sandefur said. "I feel like staying in Berea Community, and playing basketball here, made me the person that I am today." She points out that she may not have started every year for other teams, and also may not have played her preferred position. Sandefur is now contemplating colleges, and is still not 100 percent that she wants to play college ball. It can be very intensive playing basketball in college, Sandefur said, with 3.5 hour practices and five or six hour road trips. She wants to major in nursing, and worries that she won't be able to focus on her studies if she's also playing ball. Her top choice right now is Union College, which is very interested in her as a student and player.

Around 95 percent of their students are athletes, Sandefur said. "I'm really stuck in the middle about playing basketball," Sandefur said. "I just don't want to have any regrets."

rehabilitation and vocational center to actually turn people's lives around.

While the rehabilitation center may be a daring move for the county fiscal court, it could be the best and safest option they have. Currently, the county owes approximately $2.8 million on the Madison County Detention Center, which is housing around 400 inmates in a 184-bed facility. And those numbers have been steadily increasing.

With current trends of crime and population increase, the detention center will need to house 600 inmates by 2020.

"I'm a numbers guy," Taylor said. "I expected, going into this, that we'd have to build a new jail. But we'd spend $50 million for a new detention center that would be full as soon as we opened it. It doesn't make sense."

The statistics are staggering. Drug related crime accounts for 85 percent of the inmate population in the Madison County Detention Center, and currently the center has a 72.27 percent recidivism rate. In the last 20 years, the indictments for Madison County Circuit Court have increased from 102 to 626. Taylor reported that the county is supplementing the detention center's and sheriff's department's annual budgets by $3.1 million annually because of the drug epidemic.

"When we talked about the new jail, I told Reagan that we're not even helping them," Chaney said. "So we thought about working with them, helping to put them back into society."

An RFP for the Healing Center has been put on the Madison County government website, and providers are invited to bid for either the entire program or pieces of it. Chaney and Taylor decided to implement a P3, a private-public partnership instead of contracting the project out so the county would have more involvement and accountability. In the RFP, the Madison County Fiscal Court would be responsible for the facility, and a facility director, with other service organizations handling the programming.

There are three stages listed for the Healing Center - detox/treatment phase, life skills programming phase, and independent living/transition phase. Chaney said the last piece, the independent living/transition phase, was a unique piece of their design.

"Organizations will tell us, 'we do that, we teach independent living,' but we're looking for something more hands-on, more intensive than just a class," Chaney said, and later remarked, "We're not Pollyanna. We understand the success rates with this, the risks, and we understand the clientele."

Both Chaney and Taylor are excited at the possibilities, partly because of the response they've gotten from the community, nonprofits, the Kentucky General Assembly, and other partners in the fight against the drug epidemic. They have even piqued the interest of Deloitte, the National Organization of Drug Policy, and University of North Carolina. Representatives from these organizations have reported that this type of program - the Madison County Healing Center - is one they've been looking for.

Taylor stresses that the Healing Center is currently just an idea. Unless they get the right partners in the RFP process, and a price that makes sense, Taylor said, they won't continue with the Center.

"We may end up building a new jail after all," Taylor said. "If we don't get the right partners, we're not doing it, or if it costs something like $70 million."

Taylor was most excited by the comments from Mayor Steve Connelly and city council members at their meeting on April 4. He had not spoken to anyone from the city about the project, and he was excited that they were already thinking of partnering and working with the county.

"It's going to take this entire community to fight the drug epidemic," Taylor said. "we need everybody, the best people, involved."

"If we said we're not nervous we would be lying," Chaney said, laughing, who was answered by Taylor proclaiming, "I'm not nervous."

After rolling her eyes, Chaney replied, "but we're channeling that nervous energy into the work. . . . when we were talking to representatives from CareSource, they said they wished us the best of luck, but they thought we were kind of crazy. But they said that if it does work, we'll be a model for the nation."

she knew that she wanted her papers in her home state of Kentucky. Copies are kept in the Institute.

"When people acknowledge me, they don't say 'I'm from Kentucky,'" hooks said, who grew up in Hopkinsville. "We get a lot of bad press."

hooks spoke of the importance of valuing one's work, and life. She first thought of her own legacy, she said, at the death of her own sister.

"When my sister died unexpectedly, it broke my heart," hooks said. "I can't even talk about it without feeling that heartache, because she was emblematic of the type of black woman we've been talking about, invisible, silent, prey to addiction and violence, all of those things, and bad health that led to her death way too soon . . . her death led me to think about my own legacy, about the fact that so many black writers, male and female, have gone to dying without having taken care of their work."

hooks, now 68, said it was the thought of her own death that led to her thinking about the protection of her legacy. She thanked the archivists at the Hutchins Library for convincing her that they would care for her work.

"Many of us in Berea have recently lost friends, acquaintances, and colleagues to cancer, AIDS, or other unexplained catastrophes, and we are aware of death in our midst . . . but it is important how we are living right now."

hooks took several questions after her presentation of Revolution and Revelation: An Archival Legacy, and a few students asked her how they should cope with their identity as a minority or with a same-sex sexual orientation. hooks said that her religious faith was what kept her going, and questioned how people without a spiritual grounding could cope.

She related a recent plane trip that proved to be traumatic, when she was searched and treated suspiciously in airport security.

"I just wanted to get home, to Berea," hooks said.

She ended up in a "sea of whiteness," on the plane, and cried in her seat, angry that she was crying. A Lutheran minister was sitting next to her, she said, and they ended up praying together.

KY Registrars Key in Fight Against Cancer

By Pamela Warren
 Citizen Reporter

Cancer has touched nearly everyone, and many people have questions about how doctors know what treatments are more likely to work, what the survival rates are for particular cancers, and who is at risk for getting cancer.

In order to find the answers to these questions and more, states and territories, Kentucky included, have an army of individuals called cancer registrars who collect information on every cancer diagnosed and treated in the United States. This data is used by researchers, doctors, and public health professionals to understand the nature of cancer and how best to diagnose and treat these diseases.

How does this work? When a patient is diagnosed with cancer, the doctor will gather information about the patient's history, the patient's family history, how the patient came to be diagnosed, the details of their cancer, the stage of their cancer, and their treatment. Cancer registrars gather this information from the doctors and enter it into a special computer program allowing them to report the data to the state registry and to do a variety of studies helping the local physicians to better understand the nature of cancer in their area.

Cancer registrars may have different titles depending on where they work, but high standards require them to successfully complete rigorous education and pass a test for certification as a Cancer Registrar. Their education does not stop there. They are required to continually remain up to date in their knowledge by completing approved educational activities for credit in order to remain certified.

Every state has a State Cancer Registry, and every hospital, treatment center, and doctor's office collects and reports this data to their state cancer registry. Working with other organizations using this data, the Kentucky State Cancer Registry helps professionals determine if the cancer in their area is increasing or decreasing. The Registry also helps identify specific groups of people affected by cancer, and what barriers there are in identifying and treating cancer at earlier stages when treatment is most effective, and survival more likely.

Pamela Warren from Berea is a Certified Cancer Registrar. Kentucky Cancer Registrars collect information on every cancer diagnosed and treated in the U.S., and enter the data into a special computer program so studies can be conducted to help local physicians better understand the nature of cancer in their area.

Kentucky cancer registrars have assisted the state registry to be one of the best state cancer registries in the nation, evidenced by achieving the Gold Standard from the North American Association of Central Cancer Registries every year since 1999. This means that information from the 28,000 cases or more collected each year with extreme accuracy in Kentucky provide reliable data to researchers, physicians, and public health professionals in order to address the problem of cancer in the state of Kentucky. (www.kcr.uky.edu)

Those diagnosed with cancer are not alone in Kentucky. The state cancer registry and the many cancer registrars across the state are working together with physicians and researchers to uncover the mysteries of these diseases to be able to answer the questions about cancer in Kentucky.

Young, White Men with Lower Education and Income Have Greatest Increase in Heroin Addiction

From Kentucky Health News

Young, white men with lower education and income levels have experienced the greatest increase in heroin use and addiction, a study has found.

Men 25 to 44 accounted for the highest heroin-related death rate (13.2 per 100,000) in 2015, a 22 percent increase from the previous year, according to the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Silvia Martins, the lead author of the new study, told Lindsey Bever of The Washington Post that increases in heroin use and addiction may be related to several factors, including prescription opioid abuse and market forces that favor cheaper alternatives to pills.

"We saw that most of them had already used prescription opioids," Martins, associate professor of epidemiology at Columbia University, told Bever. "We saw that in 2001-02, only 36 percent of white heroin users reported they had already used prescription opioids before. Now, more than half of them — 53 percent of them — said they had used prescription opioids before. So we believe there is a link to the prescription opioid epidemic. Other potential reasons for that are the fact that heroin has become cheaper in recent years in the U.S."

The study, published in the academic journal JAMA Psychiatry, looked at data from two nationally representative household surveys from 2001-2002 and 2012-2013, analyzing responses from nearly 80,000 respondents. It showed that the number of people who reported using heroin at some point in their lives has climbed over the decade from 0.33 percent of the adult population to 1.61 percent, or roughly 3.8 million Americans.

The number of those who met the criteria for heroin use disorder, or addiction, more than tripled from 0.21 percent in 2001-2002 to 0.69 percent in 2012-2013, according to Bever.

Synthetic opioids, including heroin and fentanyl, are the main cause of overdose deaths across the U.S., according to the CDC. More than 33,000 people died of opioid overdose in 2015. Nearly 13,000 people died last year from heroin overdose alone.

President Donald Trump signed an executive order on Wednesday creating a commission to cope with the escalating epidemic. The commission, which will be led by Republican New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie, will work to "combat and treat the scourge of drug abuse, addiction, and the opioid crisis," the White House said in a statement.

Kentucky Health News is an independent news service of the Institute for Rural Journalism and Community Issues, based in the School of Journalism and Media at the University of Kentucky, with support from the Foundation for a Healthy Kentucky.

Kentucky Circuit Court Clerks'

Organ Donor Awareness Program

Each year, Donate Life America creates artwork for National Donate Life Month that illustrates the power of donation from all sides.

"The image of the pinwheel reminds us that we all have the potential power to save and heal lives. This April, we encourage you to watch the pinwheels transform the breeze into colorful motion. Think of the lives transformed by donation and transplantation and register to be a donor," says Madison Co. Circuit Clerk, Darlene Snyder.

In Kentucky, people can register to be an organ donor by saying 'yes' at the Circuit Clerk's office or joining today at www.donatelifeky.org.

Troop 51 Celebrates 90th Anniversary

Boy Scout Troop 51 hosted their 90th Anniversary dinner on March 25 at First Christian Church.

The troop was initially chartered as Troop 1 through Union Church, but lost the charter when adult leadership served in WWI.

The dinner honored former adult leaders of the troop as well as former Boy Scouts. Webelos from

Silver Creek Homemakers Discuss Self-Care

Silver Creek Homemakers had a wonderful time this month with 20 people present and one visitor, Joyce Hendricks.

A poem was read by Naomi Brandenburg, and Emmanuel Alexander treated everyone with a lovely song that she sang. Mary Ann McCollum gave the leader lesson which was called "taking time for you" -- people spend a lifetime making time for others, parenting, caregiving, working, and volunteering, but how often do they take a personal time out for themselves?

The American Heart Association recommends making a conscious decision to do at least one thing every day that is enjoyable, since doing so will help the mind, body and soul. Life is so busy, and as a result people neglect their own wellbeing, which can lead to stress, irritability, and even depression. Proper self-care such as sleep, nutrition, physical activity and low stress can help improve mood and daily productivity. Taking time for oneself helps with relaxing and contentment.

A person who places an emphasis on self-care is more efficient in their daily lives. There are many ways to take care of oneself such as sleeping, exercise, eating healthy, laughing more, reading a book, and joining a club. People can take a break from their daily routine without feeling guilty.

Regarding laughter -- laughter has the ability to increase the "feel good" hormones in the body called endorphins. It boosts the immune system, it reduces stress, lowers depression, and helps the mind and body heal. Create a bucket list that can act as a road map of "me time" today and into the future. You are important too, taking time for you, even if it's only 10 minutes a day is a healthy lifestyle behavior that influences optimal aging throughout the lifespan.

In conclusion one of our members, Kenneth Tate, said it best as he spoke, "Look where you've been, where you are going, and where you are, It doesn't get much better than this."

Reflections

FROM THE BEREA CITIZEN ARCHIVES APRIL 1967

The Berea City Council took another step to secure electric and water utilities owned by Berea College in April 1967. Seven council members, Hays, Farmer, Baker, Cummins, Rose, Hammond and Stoy all voted to approve working towards purchase of the utilities. Hull abstained because he was an employee of the college. The council decided to first approach Berea College about selling the utilities. If the offer of purchase wasn't successful, the council would move to condemnation to secure the utilities. Each utility would need to be secured separately in an involved procedure that could take a number of years.

The Citizens Party filed their candidates in April 1967 for city council. They were Howell Anderson, Ervin Connelly, Bobby Hart, Danny Logan, Frances Moore, Conley Saylor, John Scully and Richard Stoy. Two Berea youth received Eagle Scout badges -- Robert Tincher and Bobby Green. The city council accepted a federal government loan for the construction of the new municipal building for the City of Berea. The interest rate was 4 1/8 percent. The final plans for the new municipal building on Chestnut Street had been submitted to the architecture. All the council members voted yes for the new building, except for Stoy and Hull. Both said the cost was too much for the city. The basketball team for the Berea Foundation Lions in April 1967 were Billy Bowles, Robert Hutchins, Paul Atkinson, Steve McDermont, Dennis Strickler, Pat Wear, Steve Connelly, Billy Hughes, and Mitchell Romans. Gary Gay and Ken Harber were the managers. Two Berea residents became U.S. citizens in Lexington. They were Lester Hopper and Lissi Plambeck. The Silver Creek 4-H Club met. Donna Lake was the president. On the program were Ina Johnson, Melanie Abbott, Richard Allen, Jerry Lamb, Betty Devere, Paula Peters, Pamela Mullins and John Anglin. The Berea Masonic Lodge honored 17 past members on April 3, 1967. They were Norman Dean, 1966; Charles King, 1957; Lucian Rowlette, 1962; Lloyd L. Anglin, 1961; Reese Puckett, 1945; John Hensley, 1956; Carl Lawless, 1965; John Anglin, 1964; Luther Davidson, 1963; Charles Pauck, 1955; L. M. Isaacs, 1944; Harold Tremaine, 1950-51; James Shearard, 1960; Felix G. Muncy, 1929; Robert L. Bottom, 1937; J. Paul Hooper, 1954; and Oscar Morgan, 1952.

Council Passes Resolution Against Hate & Harassment

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

A resolution denouncing acts of violence and harassment was unanimously approved by the Berea City Council on Tuesday, an action that inspired the attendees to applaud.

Council member Billy Wooten drafted the resolution after a woman in a same-sex relationship had "lesbo" and "lesbian" spray-painted on her garage and patio. After Wooten made the motion to approve, he spoke about the response to the proposed resolution from the community.

"This has gained more controversy than I originally thought," Wooten said. "Not necessarily from members of the council but from members of the community. This past week when Cheryl sent out the resolution, my Facebook page has not stopped."

Wooten addressed two of what he called "misconceptions" of the community. He said the question had been asked of why a new resolution had to be adopted, since a similar one had been approved in 2015. Wooten said he felt that since it is a new council, with five new members, it made sense for them to adopt their own resolution.

"I didn't see a problem with the new 2017 council also affirming the fact that we stand against violence and that we stand against harassment in the

Planting Pinwheels for Prevention

The GFWC Berea Woman's Club put up Pinwheels for Prevention on April 14 in front of Boone Tavern, to raise awareness about child abuse and neglect prevention. April is Child Abuse Prevention Month. The pinwheel was chosen to represent hope and promise. On Tuesday, Judy Halstead announced that there have been 429 substantiated cases of child abuse in Madison County. Above, Isaac Heggen and Ryker Wylie try to get their pinwheels spinning while placing them in the ground.

Tourism Looks at Preliminary Drawings for Former Tolle Building

Commissioner Ken Gastineau said he didn't think the commission had always approved the advertising.

Robertson suggested that tourism commission members make a point of driving the Interstate to see the different billboards, and report back on their visibility and readability. Tourism members agreed that they were very pleased with the other pieces of the advertising presentation, including the commercials which Arnold said were "excellent."

Robertson brought up local communication during the tourism meeting, and the need for more articles in the local newspaper, Berea Citizen. She stated that Tourism was effectively marketing on social media and online, but the majority of people in Madison County were not "using Instagram, Twitter, and other social media sites."

"I thought about our communication at Ker-

Stadium Removed, Classrooms Getting Built at Berea School

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

The Duerson Stadium has been completely removed at Berea Community, and the City of Berea will be speaking soon to school officials about new bleachers.

The city is hoping the school can help with the costs, since they could possibly access Title IV funding if they widen the field so that girls' teams could also use it. The work on the three new classrooms is continuing, and the Berea School Board approved two payments for that project at their meeting on Monday. The new HVAC system for the elementary school will be installed this summer, and the beginning date for school year 2017-18 will start later to allow maximum time for the construction project.

"At least the weather will not be a concern," Berea Superintendent

Mike Hogg said, "since the work will take place inside."

Hogg warned that it would be a bit rough for students soon, when contractors put the new roof on the classrooms. They will try to complete it before the testing window, from May 2-8.

"That's going to be loud, smelly work," Hogg said.

The school board approved the calendar amendment on Monday as well, with May 19 as the last day of school, and staff work days from May 23-25.

Several 7th graders from Berea Community were invited to take the ACT because of their performance on other tests such as K-PREP. Those students were Ella Campbell, Sadi-bou Ceesay, Nicholas Cochran, Jason Combs, Christopher Davis, William Deaver, Sophia Dobbins, Hannah Fair-

BEREA POLICE REPORTS

Police Reports from 4/9/17 - 4/13/17

DUI Arrest

On April 9, A Berea police officer was dispatched to Walmart because a caller reported a black jeep that had been all over the roadway. The caller followed the driver into McDonald's, and believed the driver was drunk.

The officer located the vehicle and approached the driver, who had an active arrest warrant and was also not wearing a seatbelt. The vehicle had cancelled registration.

The driver, who was in the drive-thru at McDonald's, smelled strongly of alcohol. He did not step out of his vehicle when the officer asked him to. When the officer took him out of the vehicle, the driver resisted and kicked him three times in the leg. He also tried to kick the officer in the face.

Several white pills were found in his pocket; driver said he found them and they were in a clear baggy.

Wally Dean Brown, 35, from Berea was arrested and charged with no registration receipt, no registration plates, failure of owner to maintain required insurance, operating motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol or drugs, failure to wear seat belts, possession of open alcohol beverage container in motor vehicle prohibited, prescription of controlled substance not in proper container, and possession of controlled substance.

Shoplifting Arrest

On April 12, Walmart staff asked a Berea officer to come because of two female shoplifters that had been detained by Loss Prevention associate Eric Samples. Samples said that Sierra D. Denova, 20, from Louisville and Shaina L. Melton, 19, from Berea had taken merchandise from the shelves and hidden them in a backpack. They then walked past all the points of sale with the items.

When searching them, the officer found a glass pipe used to smoke marijuana, with residue inside. The officer also found a metal grinder with marijuana in the backpack. Value of the merchandise was $61.46.

Melton was arrested for theft by unlawful taking -- shoplifting under $500. Denova was arrested for theft by unlawful taking -- shoplifting under $500, possession of marijuana, and buy/possess drug paraphernalia

Felon with Firearm

On April 13, a Berea officer responded to Knight's Inn because of a man causing a disturbance. When the officer came, the man was asleep in his bed. He had a handgun inside a drawer in the night stand. Upon a criminal record check, the officer found he had been convicted of arson and served time at the prison in Lagrange. Jimmy C. Johnson, 66, was arrested for possession of firearm by convicted felon.

Thank you note

Dear Editor,

A note to a wonderful group of young teens:

While driving down Opossum Kingdom Road early Saturday morning, April 15, we were pleasantly surprised to see a group of area youth already at work cleaning up the roadside trash.

They gave up their free time on a day of beautiful weather.

What great pride you have shown in your community! Thank you, thank you!

Questions for Tourism Commission

Dear Editor,

The Berea Tourism Commission has sure been in the news a lot lately. It appears they are going to finally support the Berea City Parks and its programs a little--the events Parks have, and possibly additional or improved promotion of events we've had in the past. And I wonder why.....

1) Why is Tourism starting this now? After 8-10 years of the Commission's lifespan, why are they suddenly tossing bread crumbs to Parks? $12,000 is, in fact, bread crumbs to Tourism. Less than 1% of the budget.

2) Why is the Commission taking up issues they have NEVER shown an interest until now?

3) Why isn't the Artist Accelerator Program at least providing us with working artists, not to mention, maybe making a little money--rather than wasting our tax funds?

4) Why do entities like businesses in the Red Lick area, which is 10 miles from Berea, get treated like they are in the city limits--getting sometimes more publicity than a Berea business?

5) Why didn't Tourism hire an inspector to view the Old Berea Hotel building we bought in 2015? It turns out there were a few issues in the building and the upstairs is almost useless.

6) Why did we blow $42,000 on a house and lot on Adams Street--then tear down the house and the garage, only to lease it to the Urban Farm for $1 a year?

7) Why are people from outside the City of Berea allowed to serve on the Berea Tourism board?

8) Why don't we require them to attend the meetings or find a replacement?

Last I heard, they got paid whether they show for the meeting or not.

9) Why did Tourism spend $32,000 on an 800 square-foot rock garden for the Depot building?

10) How did we get $170,000 in signage so fouled up that we are re-doing a bunch of it? And paying to re-do it!

11) Why are we paying big consultation fees for things we shouldn't?

All these things are questions you folks should ask your tourism commission, the mayor or a city council member. Remember--this all happened in the last 4-5 years and is NOT at all the work of the 5 newest of your current city council members. It's the work of a Tourism Commission that seems to be uncontrollable and loaded with $$$$.

community," Wooten said. "It's not trying to supersede that resolution; it's trying to add to it."

The second concern he heard from the community, Wooten said, was that there was a hidden agenda with the resolution. He said it was not meant to be a Fairness Ordinance, and he knew "the community was not ready for a Fairness Ordinance."

"This is simply saying that we as a council will not accept violence or harassment against anybody... we have a lot of different communities that need our support. This is not meant to be the gay resolution," Wooten said.

The resolution stated at the end that, "be it hereby proclaimed by the City Council of the City of Berea, Kentucky, that we wholly condemn all acts of violence and harassment and express solidarity with all Bereans and residents of Madison County, and we commit to ensuring that individuals targeted can turn to their local government without fear and be treated with the courtesy, dignity, and respect everyone deserves."

Wooten thanked the council for passing the resolution, and council member Jerry Little said he appreciated that Wooten spoke of the earlier resolution from 2015, since he wanted to respect the work of former council member Diane Kerby. Council member Tom Schultz expressed appreciation of the resolution during council comments.

Several council members spoke in appreciation of Nicholas Carpenter, a former student of Berea Community who spoke before receiving the proclamation for Autism Awareness Month.

"With special education and multi-disciplinary therapy, persons with autism can have a higher quality of life," Carpenter said in his presentation. "At 3, my parents were told I might not ever walk like other kids. Through many years of speech, occupational therapy and physical therapy, and the help of many wonderful teachers, I went from a kid that had trouble climbing stairs to a kid that was able to run track and cross-country, and from a kid learning sign language to using my voice to advocate for myself and others."

Carpenter said he couldn't report on the number of children with autism in Berea, since schools did not keep records of individual disabilities. He reported that Berea Community had 218 children with special needs.

In other business:

- Spring Clean-Up for the City of Berea will take place from Tuesday to Friday.

- Mim Pride, chair of the Berea Human Rights Commission, thanked the council for approving the resolution against hatred and violence. She also announced the Bus Tour of Berea housing that will take place on Tuesday, March 25.

- Judy Halstead and Nancy Melton accepted the proclamation for Child Abuse Awareness Month.

They reported that there had been 429 substantiated cases of child abuse in Madison County in 2016.

- Mayor Steve Connelly announced the bids for contractor labor bids. Phillip Hurt bid for general contractor and laborer, and plumbing contractor; Shannon Devere bid for drywall contractor and general contractor; Joe Stamper bid for electrical contractor; Dale Ballinger bid for electrical contractor; Brian Caudill bid for HVAC contractor - Brian Caudill; and Bernan Caudill bid for electrical contractor.

- A proclamation was signed for SaraCare. It will take place this Friday, April 21, at Union Church from 6 - 10 p.m.

- The council passed the Code Enforcement Board Amendment. Council member Bruce Fraley stated that he was happy since language had been added about how someone could get a lien lifted. The amendment specified a 30-day period for the lifting of the lien.

- The council approved the amendments to the tariff on net metering for the Berea Municipal Utilities.

- Several vehicles from the City of Berea have been put into surplus, including some tractors, mowers, a wood chipper, and vehicles from 2002 and 2006. The auction will take place online.

- The council approved Madison County's Hazard Mitigation Plan, which needs to be updated every five years.

- Finley Fire Equipment received the bid for fire department equipment. The bid was for $28,253.

- Allen Company received the bid for resurfacing roads in Berea. That bid came under budget for $109,269.

- Two change orders have been made to the city hall under construction, though City Administrator Randy Stone said they were still well within the budget. They removed the old EOC location, and a new elevator will be installed.

- Council member Ronnie Terrill requested a meeting with Berea Tourism, because he wanted them to be aware of cuts or changes the council may make to their budget.

- Fraley reported that the Kentucky League of Cities is asking for cities to participate in an "oral history" project; he was interested in applying. Connelly said he had applied, but told them he wasn't willing for the University of Louisville to own the product. Fraley said he would like to check further into that, and Connelly suggested that they work with Berea College on their own oral history project.

- Wooten announced that his students will have the plans for a new dog park in Berea by May 1.

- Council member Steve Caudill thanked the fire and police departments for their response to his wife and child in a car accident. He also announced the Redbud Recovery Ride this Sunday, which is after the Redbud Ride in London. There will be many cyclists in the City of Berea, going on different routes.

"We've never had this many students invited to take the ACT," Wayne Robertson, the middle school counselor, said. "They really raised the bar this year."

The school board approved using the Conkin Gymnasium for the Geocaching Event from Oct. 20-22. They also approved an extension of the auditing contract with Summers, McCrary and Sparks LLC.

Lexington a few months ago to see if their commission was interested in working on the tour. The Berea HRC then recruited members from Berea College, Berea Tourism, the City of Berea, and Kentucky Housing Corporation to collaborate on the project.

"I tried to get a group together who knew the city," Pride said. "We have so many people here in Berea with a strong sense of history."

Pride said that residents appreciated the bus tour in other Kentucky cities, since it gave them a much more expanded sense of where they lived. Many residents, Pride said, are unaware of neighborhoods right in their own backyard.

The City of Berea proved to be quite a different animal than other Kentucky cities, however, because of its early efforts to integrate both black and white families. John G. Fee intentionally organized housing with what was eventually called a "checkerboard" pattern, with white and black families next door to each other.

"For the other cities, they would explore the dividing line between black and white families, and how places seek to ameliorate that history," Pride said, "but I told them in Berea they would get a much different story."

The groups working on the tour did have a head start, because of the work of Dr. Burnside from Berea College. She had already done quite a bit of research into Berea's history, and had published the brochure, "Historic Black Berea: An Interracial Community 1866-1900s." In that brochure, Burnside wrote narratives about different areas of the city, and designed a map that traced historic landmarks. Pride said they plan to publish more of those brochures.

Mitchell and Burnside used the map as their starting point, and wrote the narrative for the bus tour, which they estimate will take a little over an hour. Mitchell, who works in the Berea College archives, has researched different properties in Berea, and Connelly also has a lot of information at hand because of his years of researching the city.

Both Pride and Mitchell talked about how fun it was for the group to meet and discuss historic landmarks. Mitchell mentioned that they discovered the oldest subdivision in Berea was Dixie. Pride read of the architectural history of Berea College, and discovered that President William Frost had moved a many Berea College buildings around in just one year.

"In those days, you would just move houses," Mitchell said grinning.

offered here."

Commissioner Cheryl Stone and Arnold both discussed more local advertising, and the possibility of publishing a quarterly or monthly calendar and update for Berea residents.

The digital marketing has been very successful, according to Brand Advertising, with 413,154 impressions between March 1 and 31, and 12,640 unique views on the website. Of the cities that visited the website, the top ten are Lexington, Louisville, Berea, Atlanta, Richmond, Nicholasville, London, Nashville, Indianapolis, and Barbourville.

In other business:

- Two new tourism videos have been released to Facebook - Todd's Antique Mall and Club Arena Skating Rink. Hensley said they would keep implementing the video campaign until all the tourism-related businesses in Berea were highlighted.

- Applications for the Arts Accelerator program are due on April 26. Commissioner Donna Robertson asked about informing U.K. students about the program. Hensley said they thought to keep recruitment local, since it could be a very competitive program. Stone agreed with Robertson, however, stating that it was about supporting local artists, but it was also about building successful businesses in Berea. Hensley agreed to send the information to the U.K. arts program.

- The Red Bud Recovery Ride, a part of the Red Bud Ride in London, will take place in Berea on Sunday. Local bikers are invited to join in on the different routes.

- The Artist Accelerator program brought in $1,260 for January and February.

- Tourism Department will be reviewing applications for the ambassadors for the trolley.

- Arnold announced the baseball tournament to raise money for cancer was developing. The organizer was scheduling it for late July, and was expecting around 3,000 people with over 32 teams.

Ordinance 07-17

AN ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF BERA, KENTUCKY, PROVIDING THAT THE CODE OF ORDINANCES, CITY OF BERA, KENTUCKY, BE AMENDED BY REVISING SECTION 32.104(H) TO REVISE THE RATES AND TARIFFS ON NET METERING ELECTRIC CUSTOMERS

BE IT ORDAINED, by the City Council of the City of Berea, Kentucky, as follows:

SECTION I

That the Code of Ordinances of the City of Berea, Kentucky, be amended by revising Section 32.104(H), so that such section shall read as follows:

- (H) Class 9 Net Billing Service
- (1) For customers with rated generating capacity not exceeding 10 kilowatts, net energy usage shall be billed at current kWh residential rates.
 - (2) For customers with rated generating capacity exceeding 10 kilowatts, net energy usage shall be billed at avoided cost or wholesale kWh currently charged by KU to BMU.
 - (3) Net Billing Customers shall be subject to the Current BMU Interconnection Policy.

- (a) Applicable: In all territory served by Berea Municipal Utilities (BMU).
- (b) Availability of Service: Available to customers who lease or own, operate, and maintain a generation system located on customer's premises that use as its total fuel source solar, wind or hydro energy, or fossil fuel in parallel with BMU's electric system to provide all or part of their electrical requirements, and who execute BMU's written Net Metering Notification Form. The generation system shall be limited to a maximum capacity of 10 kilowatts for residential customers and 60 kilowatts for non-residential customers. This service will be made available to BMU electric customers, not to exceed 1% of BMU peak system demand, who execute and submit a Net Metering Application and Notification form. The initial limit will be 360kW to be re-evaluated every three years.
- (c) Application: The customer shall submit a completed Net Metering Application Form, including generator sizing with schematic prior to construction. BMU will provide technical guidance and forms within application process.
- (d) Notification: The customer shall submit a completed Net Metering Notification Form to BMU at least 30 days prior to the date the customer intends to interconnect his generator to BMU's facilities. Customer shall have all equipment necessary to complete the interconnection installed prior to such notification. The company shall have 30 days from the date of notification to determine whether the customer has satisfied the ordinance requirements and shall notify customer. The date of notification shall be the third day following the mailing of the Net Metering Notification Form by customer. Customer may interconnect his generator thirty-one days after the date of notification, and begin operation unless BMU provides notification of non-compliance to the ordinance, prior to the 31st day.
- (e) Metering and Billing: Net Metering service shall be measured in accordance with standard metering practices by metering equipment capable of measuring (but not necessarily displaying) power flow in both directions. If electricity generated by the customer and fed back to BMU's system exceeds the electricity supplied to the customer for the system during a net metering period, the customer shall receive no compensation from BMU unless the customer has entered into a purchase power contract with BMU. If electricity generated by the customer and fed back to the system exceeds the electricity supplied to the customer from the system during any monthly billing period, resulting in a Billing Period Credit, the customer shall be required to pay only the non-energy charges for that billing period. Any excess net generation by the customer shall be accumulated, carried forward and applied at the first opportunity to any monthly billing periods having a positive net consumption. Any accumulated Billing Period Credits remaining unused at the end of a monthly net metering period shall be carried forward into the next monthly net metering period for a twelve month period when all credits will expire and zero out. Net metering service shall be measured using a single meter or, as determined by BMU, additional meters.

- (f) Rates:
- (1) For customers with rated generating capacity not exceeding 10 kilowatts, net energy usage shall be billed at current kWh residential rates.
 - (2) For customers with rated generating capacity exceeding 10 kilowatts, net energy usage shall be billed at avoided cost or wholesale kWh currently charged by KU to BMU.
- (g) Liability Insurance: A customer with a generator with a rated capacity not exceeding 10 kilowatts shall maintain homeowners, commercial, or other insurance providing coverage in the amount of at least $100,000 for the liability of the insured against loss arising out of the use of a generator, and for a generator with a rated capacity exceeding 10 kilowatts such coverage shall be in the amount of at least $300,000.
- (h) Additional Controls and Tests: BMU may install additional controls of meter, or conduct additional tests as it may deem necessary.
- (i) Net Metering Service Interconnection Guidelines: Customer shall operate their generating facilities in parallel with BMU's system under the following conditions and any other conditions required by BMU where unusual conditions arise not covered herein:
- (1) Customer to own, install, and maintain all generating facilities on their premises. Such facilities shall include, but not be limited to, necessary control equipment to synchronize frequency, voltage, etc., between customer's and BMU's system as well as adequate protective equipment between the two systems. Customer's voltage at the point of interconnection will be the same as BMU's system voltage.
 - (2) Customer will be responsible for operating generators and all facilities owned by customer, except as specified hereinafter. Customer will maintain its system in synchronization with BMU's system. Customer's equipment must be located in a BMU approved location and may not interfere with the operation, maintenance and access of BMU equipment.

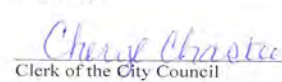

- (3) Customer will be responsible for any damage done to BMU's equipment due to failure of customer's control, safety, or other equipment.
 - (4) BMU, at its discretion, may require a suitable lockable, BMU accessible, load breaking manual disconnect switch or similar equipment, as specified by BMU, to be furnished by customer at a location designated by BMU to enable the separation or disconnection of the two electrical systems. The load breaking manual disconnect switch must be accessible to BMU at all times.
 - (5) Customer agrees to inform BMU of any changes it wishes to make in its generating and/or associated facilities that is different from those initially installed and described to BMU in writing and obtain prior approval from BMU.
 - (6) BMU will have the right to inspect and approve customer's facilities, described herein, and conduct any tests necessary to determine that such facilities are installed and operating properly. However, BMU will have no obligation to inspect, witness tests or in any manner be responsible for customer's facilities or operation.
 - (7) The customer assumes all responsibility for the electric service on the customer's premises at and from the point of delivery of electricity from BMU and for the wires and equipment used in connection therewith, and will protect and save BMU harmless from all claims for injury or damage to persons or property occurring on the customer's premises or at and from the point of delivery of electricity from BMU, occasioned by such electricity or said wires and equipment, except where said injury or damage will be shown to have been occasioned solely by the negligence of BMU.
- (i) Conditions of Interconnection: A customer may begin operation of his generator on an interconnected basis when all of the following have been satisfied.
- (1) The customer has properly notified Berea Municipal Utilities (BMU) of his intent to interconnect by submission of the completed Net Metering Notification Form.
 - (2) The net metering customer has installed a lockable, BMU accessible, load-breaking manual disconnect switch, if required.
 - (3) A licensed electrician has certified, by signing the Net Metering Notification Form, that any required manual disconnect switch has been installed properly and that the generator has been installed in accordance with the manufacturer's specifications as well as all applicable provisions of the National Electrical Code.
 - (4) The vendor has certified, by signing the Net Metering Notification Form, that the generator being installed is in compliance with the requirements established by Underwriters Laboratories, or other national testing laboratories.
 - (5) The customer has had the inverter settings inspected by BMU, if the generator is a static inverter-connected generator with an alternating current capacity in excess of 10 kilowatts. BMU may impose a fee on the customer for such inspection, which will be actual cost not exceeding $50.00 per inspection.
 - (6) For non-static inverter-connected generators, the customer has interconnected according to BMU's interconnection guidelines and BMU has inspected all protective equipment settings. BMU may impose a fee on the customer for such inspection, which will be actual cost not exceeding $50.00 per inspection.
- (k) Definitions:
- "Billing Period" shall be the time period between the dates on which Berea Municipal Utilities issues the customer's bills.
 - "Billing Period Credit" shall be the electricity generated by the customer that flows into the electric system and which exceeds the electricity supplied to the customer for the electric system during any billing period.
 - "Net Metering Period" shall be each successive 12-month period beginning with the first meter reading date following the date of final interconnection of the generator with Berea Municipal Utilities facilities.
- (l) Rules and Regulations: Except as provided herein, service will be provided under Berea Municipal Utilities' Rules and Regulations or Terms and Conditions.

National Honors Society inductees honored at event

On Monday, March 21, a select group of Berea Community juniors and seniors came together at the monthly board meeting to be inducted into the National Honor Society (NHS). Students were chosen based upon five categories: scholarship, citizenship, leadership, service, and character.

The induction ceremony consists of a candle-lighting service, each candle representing one of the four categories. In the beginning, only one candle is lit, symbolizing the eternal light of knowledge, along with five others which were lit directly following the first, representing each of the subcategories that the students were recognized for.

To be invited into NHS, students must maintain a 3.3 GPA, and then must write an essay discussing how they meet the criteria needed to become a part of National Honor Society. Mallory Lakes, a senior member, believes that NHS grants students the opportunity to "continue to strive to be good role models and continue to be leaders in our community."

There were 37 students inducted Monday, including: Taiza Alexander, Taylor Baugh, Joseph Caudill, Estefania Correa, Denasia Denney-Harris, Grace Hopkins, Jocelyn Lee, Destiny McGuire, Alex Mondine, Isabella Moberly, Elliot Sandberg, Elizabeth Tapley, Crystal Williams, Johannes Baatrup-Andersen, Wade Bradford, Dante Clavere, Rider Cveticanin, Madalyn Dodson, Gage Isaacs, Ariel Lopez, Michelle Mecham, Kyra Morgan, Ruth Ramon, Jordan Sandefur, Emily Traw, Dakota Baker,

Shyann Brock, Kaleb Conley, Virginia Deaver, David Gadd, Adam Johnson, Sierra Lurty, Alaina Milam, Mikaela Morgan, Caleb Rister, Amber Stewart, and Cody Warford. Among those who were inducted on Monday, Dante Clavere gave his opinion on NHS, stating: "It's a good experience because it recognizes those that work hard and that deserve to be recognized."

"We do a lot of work with student council, and some of the other service organizations like Beta. A lot of our members are also members of other organizations," stated Eef Fontanez, who is both the high school guidance counselor and the sponsor for Berea Community's National Honor Society.

Each of the five categories had their own description that was recited by a current member of National Honor Society, and, in doing so, gave parents and students the opportunities to understand exactly what NHS is known for.

Together, the categories of scholarship, citizenship, leadership, service, and character define the well-rounded Berea Community High School students who are members, new and old, of the National Honor Society.

Berea Community FBLA chapter attends state competition

On Monday, April 17, Berea Community High School's Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA) traveled to the Galt House Hotel in Louisville, Kentucky to compete in the FBLA State Competition. On Tuesday night, the announcements of the competition's awards were met with elated screams as Berea Community High School senior Jordan Adams placed 5th in the category of "Insurance and Risk Management", and sophomores Tori Williams and Suraya Smith placed 1st in the category "Partnership with Business".

Many members of BCHS' FBLA club qualified to compete in the State-level Business competition after the team won awards across a wide-span of categories in the Regional Competition a month prior. This year marks one of the most productive FBLA State Competitions Berea Community has experienced within the past five years, as the team not only witnessed three students place at the state-level, but also produced sophomore Emy Lovell as the newly-elected FBLA Region 6 Parliamentarian. "I love going to state because it's a good way to not only get closer to your fellow classmates and learn more about FBLA, but a good way to meet other people and get connected with other schools", stated Emy Lovell.

Smith and Williams will be advancing to National Competition in Anaheim, California. "I'm incredibly happy and amazed that we won 1st place. I'm still in shock, honestly... we [Tori and I] worked really well together and made a fantastic team" stated Suraya

Smith.

After a highly productive FBLA competition season, the team returned home in the early hours of Wednesday morning, having been awarded a collective win in spirit; the achievements of the team within the past three months foreshadow that the highly hard-working and dedicated group of future Berea business movers and shakers will blossom even further in the years to come.

Elementary greenhouse project flourishes this spring season

Warm weather is right around the corner, and the kindergartners at Berea Community Elementary School are preparing for it in their own special way. With many tomato plants and Zinnia flowers in the Berea Community greenhouse, there's no doubt that spring is making its appearance at BCES. The thought of incorporating gardening with the common core standards began a few years ago when Mrs. Riddle, the kindergarten science teacher, acknowledged that hands-on activities are an easier way for students to learn. "Every year... part of the common core standards is to work on planting and talking about flowers and parts of a plant. They talk about discussing it and learning about it... but I figured the best way is hands on. The fun way to do it and let kids learn is to actually plant," explained Mrs. Riddle.

Mrs. Riddle stated that she wanted to grow plants for all the kindergartners a long time ago, but simply did not have enough window space. Then, four years ago, a teacher who used the greenhouse regularly said that she would save a space in the elementary greenhouse, and since then it's grown from that. From then onward it has been a tradition every spring for the kindergartners. Not only do the students get to learn more about the anatomy of plants, and how to garden, but they also get to take one of each type of plant home to their mothers for Mother's Day to plant in their own yard. "I tell them that you shouldn't keep secrets from your parents but this is one secret you can have," laughed Mrs. Riddle. "Some of them feel really guilty and tell them [their parents] and tell them about the tomato, but not the flower so they can still give them a surprise."

This year was particularly special for the kindergarten class, due to the types of seeds they planted. Normally, Mrs. Riddle would get walmart seeds for the tomatoes, but this year she was suggested to call Baker Creek Heirloom Seeds, one of America's top source for heirloom seeds. She explained that she started talk to a woman on the phone about what seeds come up quickly and what seeds grow the best in Kentucky. Then, the unexpected happened.

"When I started mentioning my students, she said 'wait a minute, are you buying these for a school?' and I said yes they're for my kindergartener class," said Mrs. Riddle about the phone call. The woman she was talking to turned out to be the grant writer for the company, and gave Mrs. Riddle over $200 worth of seeds for free.

The Berea Community kindergarten students and staff are very thankful for the seeds given to them by Baker Creek, and cannot wait to see how they turn out. Over the next five weeks, Mrs. Riddle and the kindergartners will be watching as their future tomato and zinnia plants grow, until the day where they can take them home and plant them on their own.

BCHS named ACT College and Career Exemplar School

Berea Community High School was recently chosen as Kentucky's ACT College and Career Transition Exemplar school as part of the 2016-2017 ACT College and Career Readiness Campaign. The award is given based on a variety of values identified by ACT, which they feel show that a school has effectively prepared its students for college.

Last March, the class of 2017 completed the ACT. Principal Donna Lovell explained that the class averaged a score of 21.7, a score which she stated is "well above the state and national averages." (the national average as of 2016 was 20.8, while Kentucky came in at 20.7). Despite its small size, the class of 2017 has excelled in academics. This comes as no surprise seeing as Berea has always been successful in test scores. Principal Lovell says "we have been as high as 22.4, and it usually goes between 19.7 and 20.7". Last year's juniors and this year's seniors have seriously contributed to the academic success of Berea Community.

This recognition, however, comes not just because of the average score, but also as a result of the school's focus on providing increased opportunity for underserved students. Mrs. Lovell stated that the school is "continuously increasing the number of underserved students who are meeting or exceeding the benchmarks on the ACT," while also "providing them with more opportunities for dual credit."

Mrs. Lovell explained that the dual credit courses offered by the school allow students to take college courses when they feel they're ready to, a system which "allows students to leave us and go into college with two to five classes under their belt."

Berea Community High School is honored to receive the title of Kentucky's ACT College and Career Transition Exemplar School for the 2016-2017 academic year. This is an award that both shows the merit of the students, and shows that the school's efforts to provide increased opportunity for all students have been successful.

Berea Community tennis team ushers in a new era

By Wynn McDonald
Pirate Managing Editor

As the calendar marks the start of spring, many BCHS student-athletes are once again hanging up their basketball shoes and swim goggles, and picking up their bats, batons, and rackets. The spring sports season is revving into high gear, and the excitement is palpable in the halls of the school.

Traditionally, one of Berea Community's most successful sports programs has been the boys' and girls' tennis teams. This has certainly been the case in recent years, with several students qualifying for state competition. This year, however, expectations are higher than ever, with a roster full of experienced upperclassmen and talented young players.

The coach of the BCHS tennis team is Michael Slaughter, in his second year at the helm; but with the size of the group growing from previous years, Coach Slaughter has been able to rely on some of his seniors and juniors to provide key leadership: "It's really nice, actually, having the older players... especially some of them that are very willing to take charge in practice, and say 'hey guys, pay attention, this is how I'm gonna do this drill'.... I feel like I can trust my older kids to help run and direct for me."

This strategy is clearly starting to pay off. "The seniors are always willing to hit the ball around with you," said Maria Murphy, a sophomore in her second year playing tennis. "It's such a good experience. We're all super close, and the practices are really fun and laid back."

Coach Slaughter's primary goal for the season is player development, particularly for the younger players. This is important because, with so many seniors, the team will be losing a lot of players to graduation after this year.

One of those leading upperclassmen is David Gadd, a junior who has already qualified for state competition three times in his career: he was the 12th regional runner-up in singles the past two years, and he won the region in doubles while in 8th grade, playing with his brother, Steven. This season, he is hoping to once again win the region and make a run in the state tournament.

"This year my mentality is to attack," said Gadd. "In previous years I was more of a baseline player and won matches because of my consistency. I am much stronger this year, and my game is a very aggressive style."

On the girls' side, the team is led by a group of seniors including Candace Elam, Alexandria Horn, and Ruth Ramos.

High school and middle school tennis players attend the signing of senior player, Ruth Ramos (photo by Sam House).

Last year, Elam advanced to the semifinals of the regional tournament in singles, and the duo of Horn and Ramos made it to the semifinals in doubles. Ramos recently signed an official letter of intent to play tennis at Alice Lloyd College in the fall, during a ceremony at the school last Friday.

Early results for the Pirates have been positive. Boasting match records of 3-1 and 1-3, respectively, the girls' and boys' tennis teams have each found some success on the court so far. Along with the strong leadership, Coach Slaughter suggested that much of this success can be attributed to having productive practice time: "Compared to previous years, I think [the preparation] has been pretty good, because we were really lucky to have good weather for like the first month. So going into the season, I feel like we at least weren't as rusty."

Looking ahead, Berea will host this year's Madison County Invitational tournament, on April 22, at Berea College's Evans Tennis Complex. All the schools in Madison County will be participating: Berea, Madison Southern, Madison Central, and Model. In the words of Coach Slaughter: "We're gonna do a big tournament and see who's the best! So that'll be fun."

All signs point to the 2017 spring sports season being a lot of fun for everyone, as the tennis program continues to make Berea Community High School proud.

Berea Girls Softball dominates in game against Paris High School

By Emily Nigro
Pirate Sports Editor

On Monday, April 10, the Berea Pirates softball team lost to Paris High School 6-10 in their seventh game of the 2017 season. According to Berea assistant coach Jarred Penn, "Losing was disappointing but the ladies played really well." Brianna Goodin, who pitched a complete game, had 14 strikeouts. Jordan Sandefur, Malyah Penn, and Abby Ambrose each had a single; Carissa Coy had two hits; Alyssa Carter also reached base. "They hit the ball well," Penn said of the entire team.

Senior Mackenzie Perry, a veteran first and second baseman for Berea, stated that the team this year is very inexperienced. "We have a lot of young people on our team. We just have a few returning players and not very many upperclassmen." Only four seniors and three juniors appear on the Pirates' roster. "Everybody else is learning the game," said

Perry. "We've got a lot of adversity to overcome but I think we can win some games. We gotta learn how to pick ourselves up and keep moving forward." Coach Penn added, "[The new players] are improving with every game. Our seniors are doing their best to help the young ladies learn and improve."

Despite their inexperienced team, Perry is optimistic: "My goal is to make it to the regional tournament. I really think that we can do it."

With enough support behind them, the Pirates might just do the unexpected. Come out and support the Berea Softball Team at their next home game on "March Madness"-style reading tournament excites elementary

By Lydia Zaring
Pirate Staff Reporter

A striking new debate has begun in the halls of Berea Community Elementary School. Which children's book author is the best? Mrs. Larinda Agee, the school librarian, along with Mrs. Jennifer Hopson and Mrs. Lori Mccay, have begun a "reading tournament" for the children of BCES. It is loosely based on the March Madness tournament that concluded recently: instead of 64 basketball teams, there are 16 famous children's book authors.

Mrs. Agee has ensured that the students are very involved with the tournament; she has them vote for their favorite author every week by putting tickets in buckets, and draws a name once a week. Mrs. Agee had several prizes for the students; she had several posters from the book fair for the last name drawing and she now has books written by the competitors as prizes. Not only are the elementary students highly engaged, the Berea Community High School students are heavily involved with the tournament as well. Several high school students dressed up as the characters and read aloud to the elementary students. Sophomores Constance Wright and Ryan Whitt dressed up and read "Click Clack Moo" by Doreen Cronin together for the children. Whitt stated, "The kids were adorable and very entranced by our costumes, so I loved it quite a bit." Elementary students being able to watch high schoolers act a little goofy and read their books is an important experience. Mrs. Hopson and Mrs. Agee both commented on how passionate the children are about the tournament. Mrs. Agee said, "The students are so involved with the campaign aspect, they try to persuade their friends to vote for their author." Mrs. Agee talked about watching the kids discuss this in a similar fashion to politics; she stated, "...seeing the democratic process [with the tournament] is very fun."

Agee's elementary students were given a wonderful opportunity to help students become more engaged, not just with books, but with each other. The BCES students have started having more conversations about books with each other and they have the added benefit of having older students read to them and lead by example.

Movie Review: Jordan Peele's "Get Out"

By Malcolm Davis
Pirate Staff Reporter

Boasting titles such as Logan, Power Rangers, and Kong: Skull Island, 2017 has already set the tone for fantastic films, but Jordan Peele's film Get Out raised the bar even further. Not going into the details of the racial and social commentary of the film, the pure imagery and cinematography were enough to impress audiences. I want to take a moment here to give anyone reading a spoiler alert for the rest of the article.

The basic plot of Get Out follows an interracial couple: Chris and Rose, who decide to take a trip up to Rose's house to meet her family. Once he gets there he is introduced to her father, her mother, and her brother. Her mother, who is a psychiatrist, urges him to let her get rid of his smoking addiction, but he refuses. Chris is somewhat confused and curious about the fact that this all white family has a host of black servants that act strange, but is comforted by

Get Out operates on two different levels of cinematography and film: the Horror genre, and the genre of Social and Racial commentary. The blending of these two genres is the main task that the film accomplishes, and what makes it so special. The horror aspect of the movie lies purely in the actual filming and production of the film, and not so much in the plot. The chorus of spooky sounds and jump scares make sure that the audience never gets too comfortable while watching. The side of the movie that showcases its message, a message of tension with police and the struggles/fear faced by African Americans in interracial relationships, with more accuracy, is the plot. This is where Chris is all at once tokenized, hypersexualized, ostracized, and sold.

These things all echo the struggles of African Americans ranging from the time of slavery to modern day, illustrated succinctly by Jordan Peele.

Reflections

FROM THE BERA ARCHIVES APRIL 1977

Bereans responded generously to the flooding crisis in eastern Kentucky in April 1977, with organizations and individuals donating truckloads of supplies, clothes, household items, and more. One preacher said people were literally donating the shirts off their back.

Basketball awards were given at Berea Community in April. Phyllis Alenderfer won the 110 Per Cent Award for cheerleading, and Robin Taylor won for best free throw shooter. Kim Cornelison won the Most Valuable Player award, and Liz Berry had the highest field goal percentage and was the leading rebounder. Angela Taylor was the Most Improved Player and Alison Chisholm won the 110 Per Cent award for girls' basketball.

Jeff Johnson was the best free throw shooter in boys' basketball at Berea Community, with the most assists. Greg Todd was the leading rebounder, with the highest field goal percentage. He was named the Most Valuable Player. Ricky Bowles won the 110 Per Cent award for varsity boys' basketball, and Joey Poynter won the 110 Per Cent award for freshman and junior varsity basketball. Tim Akers had the best free throw shooting among junior varsity.

There was controversy over the Madison County Jail, with many people pushing the county fiscal court to take care of the numerous problems in the facility. It was 122 years old, and a 3-story building that housed prisoners on one side, with the jailer, Frank King, and his family on the other. There was a drunk tank, three male cell blocks and a floor for femals.

Several Grand Jury reports cited Madison County for leaky plumbing, inadequate showers, poor juvenile quarters, and deteriorating windows. It housed 70 prisoners, and had 27 in April 1977.

Forensic students at Berea Community School won first and second place awards at the Scott County competition. Becky Forbes and David Cook won first place for duet acting, and Steven Robinson won first place for extemporaneous speaking. Alice Weatherford had a superior rating for prose interpretation. Alesia Stolte won a superior rating with prose at the regional festival.

In November, Steven Robinson, Alesia Stolte, Alice Weatherford, Bruce Lawson, Scott Halam, Scott Richardson, and Peter DiTeresa competed in debate.

On April 16, 1977, there were 210 Berea youth registered for the Berea Youth League.

Several Groups Interested in Bidding for Healing Center

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

A large crowd attended the pre-bid meeting for the Madison County Healing Center on Monday, which caused both Judge Executive Reagan Taylor and Deputy Executive Colleen Chaney to express excitement at the turn-out.

Attendees included both nonprofits and for-profits that planned to bid for the Healing Center, as well as community partners and two Berea city council members, Bruce Fraley and Jim Davis. The Madison County Fiscal Court is proposing a public-private partnership (P3) for the Healing Center, the rehabilitation and vocational center proposed as an alternative to incarceration for drug offenders in Madison County.

"I realized after I was elected that we didn't have a jail problem, we had a drug problem," Taylor announced in his

Over 30 people participated in the Berea Bus Tour on Tuesday morning, that took a look at historic interracial neighborhoods and modern housing in town. Fair Housing Lexington financed the tour, and Dr. Jackie Burnside and Sharyn Mitchell, left, spoke of the different important housing locations in Berea during the tour.

Touring the Housing History of Berea

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

Over 30 people participated in the historic bus tour of the City of Berea on Tuesday, which started at the new Forestry Education building at Indian Fort Theater.

The tour took around 75 minutes, with both

Dr. Jackie Burnside and Sharyn Mitchell narrating the tour. Mayor Steve Connelly participated in the bus ride with other local leaders such as Berea Superintendent Mike Hogg and Berea Housing Authority Executive Director Doris Wyatt.

Fair Housing Lexington financed the trip, the ninth tour they have implemented in Kentucky. The tours are locally programmed, and take a look at the history of a city through its housing patterns.

Burnside and Mitchell pointed out the current Glades Christian Church, located near the original Glades Church, where John G. Fee was invited to preach by Cassius Clay. A memorial stands on the original location, now in Clay-Fee Homes. They also pointed out the streets where white and black families were assigned to live next to each other, early in Berea's history.

Outreach Program Builds Bridges between Spanish & English Speakers

By Kim Kobersmith
Citizen Reporter

For 13 years, the Hispanic Outreach Program at Berea College has been building bridges between the Spanish-speaking and English-speaking communities in Madison County.

Noticing an influx of Spanish-speakers into Madison County, organizers created a way that students could provide important services to local Spanish speakers, opportunities for Spanish students to get hands-on experience using their language skills, and introductions to Spanish language and culture for English-speaking residents.

County Faces High Cost for Health, Considers Self-Insured

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

A discussion on health care benefits for county employees dominated the Madison County Fiscal Court meeting on Tuesday, as magistrates debated the best way to be fiscally responsible, and also fair to their employees.

The current health care plan in Madison County is with Baptist Health, and rates are estimated to increase 19.5 percent in the next fiscal year. That amount would equal approximately $250,000. The county was able to avoid a big rate hike last year by agreeing to a plan that stays within the Baptist Health network.

"Your rates have been going up significantly," the county's insurance broker announced. "If you run good, you don't get any money back, if you run bad you get a bigger increase next year."

The broker reported that they received bids

PUBLIC NOTICE

Finding Of No Significant Impact for Red Lick Creek Multipurpose Structure #1, Madison County, Kentucky Department of Agriculture Natural Resources Conservation Service

Agency: Natural Resources Conservation Service
Action: Notice of a Finding of No Significant Impact
Project Sponsor(s): City of Berea
Red Lick Creek Watershed Conservancy District

Summary: Pursuant to section 102(2)(c) of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969; the Council on Environmental Quality Regulations (40 CFR Part 1500); and the Natural Resources Conservation Service Regulations (7 CFR Part 650); the Natural Resources Conservation Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, gives notice that an environmental impact statement is not being prepared for the Red Lick Creek Multipurpose Structure #1, Madison County, Kentucky.

For further information contact: Karen A. Woodrich, State Conservationist, Natural Resources Conservation Service, 771 Corporate Drive, Ste. 300, Lexington, Kentucky, 40501. Telephone 859-224-7350, email karen.woodrich@ky.usda.gov.

Supplementary information: An environmental assessment was undertaken in conjunction with the development of the watershed plan. This assessment was conducted in consultation with local, State, Tribal Governments, and Federal agencies as well as with interested organizations and individuals. The environmental assessment of this federally assisted action indicates that this project will not cause significant local, regional, or national impacts on the environment. As a result of these findings, Karen A. Woodrich, State Conservationist, has determined that the preparation and review of an environmental impact statement are not needed for this project.

The project purposes are to provide for rehabilitation of Red Lick Creek Multiple Purpose Structure (MPS) No. 1 in order to bring it up to current performance and safety standards, augment water supply, and to extend the service life of the dam for an additional 100 years. The planned works of improvement include:

- Modifying the auxiliary spillway of the structure by widening and raising the control section,
- Raising the top of dam by six feet with a concrete parapet, and
- Rehabilitating the principal spillway pipe and raising the normal pool elevation by 6.3feet.

Public and Agency Coordination: State and local stakeholders meetings were conducted at various times throughout the process. Interested parties from applicable local, state and federal agencies were invited to participate.

The US Army Corps of Engineers agreed to be cooperating agency throughout the environmental assessment process for the project. They were invited to all agency related meetings and received copies of the environmental documentation at various stages throughout the planning process in order to provide feedback in relation to water quality impacts as they related to the project.

Specific consultation was conducted with the State Historic Preservation Officer concerning cultural resources and historic properties in the project area. Comments from the State Historic Preservation Officer were used in the development of this plan.

The environmental assessment was transmitted to all participating and interested agencies, groups, and individuals for review and comment in August 2016. Public meetings were held throughout the planning process to keep all interested parties informed of the study progress and to obtain public input to the plan and environmental evaluation.

A limited number of copies of this document are available to fill single copy requests at the above address. Basic data developed during the environmental assessment are on file and may be reviewed by contacting Karen A. Woodrich at the above number.

Conclusions: Based on the environmental assessment completed, I find that the proposed action is not a major Federal action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment, and I have determined that an environmental impact statement for the Red Lick Creek Watershed Plan is not required.

We only received a few phone calls about the photo from last week. We discovered that it was the first basketball team of Berea High School. In the first row are Harold Heskins, musician Red Foley, Curt Pearson, and "Chick" Stivers. In the second row are Thurman Todd, L.M. Oliver, Norman Cornett, cheerleader Pauline Young Hoskins, Bobby Chrisman, and Coach Dudley Roberts.

importance that she see whatever message or Facebook post or who knows what other thing was distracting her from the cars in front of her.

We've all done it, and probably have gotten away with it for years, taking our eyes, not to mention our focus, off the road ahead. Drivers have fiddled with CDs and cassettes, turned to retrieve a toy for a crying child in the back seat or had lunch while driving 70 mph down the highway.

The distractions only got worse with cellphones, and the problem has exploded since many people are glued to a smartphone 24/7. I couldn't find numbers for last year but federal records for 2015 show that close to 3,500 people were killed and hundreds of thousands injured in distracted driving crashes. Taking your eyes off the road for even five seconds at a speed of 55 mph means you drove the length of a football field without looking. Bad things are bound to happen.

I've really appreciated the ad campaign that Kentucky Farm Bureau has going right now. The ads are on TV not in print but they're powerful. Other companies are trying to make statements too. On the interstate was a semi with a Bates Casket Company logo and an additional message printed on the back doors. It said, "Don't text and drive. Yours may be on the next shipment." Which goes along with the message on a church marquee that read, "Honk if you love Jesus, text while driving if you want to meet him."

Correction

In the historical photo printed last week for the article, "Bereans Invited on Bus Tour of Their Unique Housing History," the year that was referenced in the caption was incorrect. The photo was from the early part of the last century. Dr. Jackie Burnside used it as the cover for her book, "Black America Series Berea and Madison County." The people in the photo all knew John G. Fee, and were sitting at the pre-Civil War site of the Glades Church. The monument can now be seen at Clay-Fee Homes.

A Difficult Day in Newspaperland

Letters from Berea

Beth Myers, Editor

Last Thursday when I came into the office, I had an unpleasant shock when I started looking through the paper.

The tourism article on the front page started halfway through the story. I kept looking at it, trying to will it to correct itself. In my mind I'm thinking, "no, you're reading it wrong, that didn't happen, read it again."

When I checked further, I decided that putting my head through the wall would be a reasonable response to what in the journalism world amounts to a mistake of the nuclear bomb variety. I had copied and pasted the article from the second page down, and neglected to put the first page in. And somehow never noticed what had happened.

But that was just the beginning.

When I finally crept towards Teresa's office to confess, I heard her on the phone. A wrong date had been written in one of the articles. After that, we discovered that some historical information for the front page photo was incorrect, and by the time someone called to report that the wrong label was used for the Property Transfers jump, I was ready to forget the wall and bury myself in cement.

Teresa and I left promptly at closing to avoid anymore unpleasant revelations.

I went home and announced to my two sons that I was completely traumatized. They didn't answer me, and when I accused them of not caring, my youngest said very compassionately, "we're care Mom, but we're busy."

So I proceeded to lie on the couch with a pillow over my head. When my youngest came over to check on me, I told him that I started an article halfway through, and it was printed on the front page. He gently patted my hand and said sup-portively, "oh, that is really bad."

While I appreciated his efforts, they only drove me to consider other career options, such as becoming an electrician where mistakes wouldn't matter.

I hate mistakes in the newspaper, absolutely, positively, despise them. They torment me. The only thing that I hate more is zucchini dishes. And I really hate zucchini dishes. I always read the newspaper over on Thursday, and look for errors. It's like the confessional booth, where I review my mistakes and then assign myself psychic damage. If it's a good week, I'll have less than five in the whole paper. I figured I'd have to count the tourism article as about ten errors. Which may have been too generous; I probably should have counted every word not published as an individual error.

I begged my husband to give me a football analogy to help me gain perspective. He's usually pretty good with those, but this time he told me that even a quarterback in the NFL who throws three interceptions a game is still one of the best 50 quarterbacks in the world.

I was not comforted with the comparison to a careless football gunslinger with bad aim, even if he did play for the big leagues. Then he came up with a better one. When a quarterback throws three interceptions, he still has to go back in the game and run the offense.

That worked, and it reminded me of the phrase I try to live my life by. It's not eloquent, and there is a profanity, but it's been a powerful guide for me, "Own Your S__T." And in my defense concerning the profanity, I have brainstormed with several people about a way to express this sentiment without the "S" word, since I'd like to put it on a t-shirt. But nothing else really works. The closest we came was "Own Yours," but that reminds me of "Up Yours."

Own Your S__T means you have to own it all, the errors, the mistakes, the successes, the victories, what's been done to you, what you've done to others, the shameful parts and the honorable parts. They are all part of what must be claimed, instead of locked down, buried, excused, ignored, or thrown on someone else's head.

One time, I completely switched a name around in an article, using a former business owner's name instead of the present one. My Achilles heel as an editor is names. I get them turned around and misspelled, and those errors become hard-wired in my head. Others in the office have learned to carefully check the names in articles because of this.

An involved family member called enraged, since the former business owner didn't even live in Berea anymore. After fussing at me a while on the phone, he told me I should be ashamed of myself. I replied honestly that I was. He thought I was being sarcastic, but I was very serious. I was ashamed, and embarrassed and would have done anything to correct the mistake. But there was nothing I could do except make a correction statement in the next issue. And that, of course, doesn't erase the error. So all I could do was own it -- and put in processes to hopefully avoid the same thing happening again.

But of course it will happen again. No matter how diligent we all try to be, no matter how anal, no matter how careful, those mistakes will slip through in the 52 weeks of the year that we publish the paper, because that is the painful reality of being human. Needing to strive for perfection while knowing that we'll always fall short.

At the end of the day, I have to own my screw-ups on the newspaper, and I have to go into the office and start on the next week's issue, realizing it's only a matter of time before I want to put my head through a wall again. But then the mistakes and errors make the touchdown passes all the better, right?

So have a great week everyone, and I apologize now for all the mistakes I will surely make in the year to come, and I apologize to the walls too.

offered to public agencies and schools is translation services. Hospice Care Plus recently worked with HOP to translate their volunteer training manual into Spanish, as they were seeing an increase in Spanish-speaking volunteers. Diane Smith, director of the Berea Community Family Resource and Youth Service Center (FRYSC), works with HOP and says, "Berea College students work tirelessly to translate documents correctly in order to make paperwork more easily understood. The dedication they share with our community provides a safe and secure place for our families to seek answers."

HOP Students also help Spanish-speakers learn English. They tutor younger students through local public schools and teach adults through English Language Learner ELL classes. Berea College student Lydia Roots is the HOP Student Program Manager. One of her jobs is pairing ELL students and tutors, working with community partners to identify students.

"I will always remember when a community partner contacted me about an adult who had recently moved to the United States and needed ELL tutoring," Roots said. "We paired the woman with a tutor more than a year ago, and she is now able to use English in everyday life."

One of the collaborative partners is the Spanish faculty at the college. Dr. Fred de Rosset, Spanish professor, is one of the founders of HOP and continues as a sponsor. He sees the invaluable benefit to the students of utilizing their Spanish skills in hands-on community experience.

"Berea graduates who have majored in or studied Spanish are now working in careers like public health, social work, and education, in part because of their work with HOP," Rosset said. "By virtue of having the second language and wedding it to another profession, they are more effective professionals and can reach a growing population in our society."

As another way to build bridges, HOP volunteers offer Spanish language and culture instruction to English-speakers. The Spanish classes offered through the Berea Public Library have been well-received this year. Due to so many enthusiastic participants, they are considering adding an advanced class next year in addition to the beginner class.

HOP is a program of the Center for Excellence in Learning Through Service (CELTs) at the college. CELTs provides student-led service opportunities and academic service-learning programs. Some of the other services they offer to the larger Berea community are academic tutoring for elementary students, adopt a grandparent, and a community food drive.

this fall. The center will then serve its main purpose, as a gateway to introduce visitors to Berea College's forest lands and the mission of the college as a whole.

If you can't wait that long to see the Outreach Center, however, on April 29 from 9 a.m.-11 a.m., the public is invited to the first meeting of "Friends of the Berea College Forest." This group will consist of campus and community members who volunteer to serve as caretakers of forest lands and the Outreach Center, in keeping with a community forest model. Many volunteer roles will be available, from trail maintenance to greeting visitors at the center. At 9 a.m. on April 29, foresters Clint Patterson and Glen Dandeneau will lead a hike, giving an overview and history of the Pinnacles area. The group will then return for a brief tour of the center, information about volunteer opportunities available, and an invitation to sign up for a Friends of the Forest mailing list. Those on Facebook will also find a "Friends of the Berea College Forest" page already available.

To serve its mission of outreach, the center is divided into three main sections. The main entrance opens into what will become an interpretive display area, with welcoming of the community, visitors, and school groups. Berea College foresters have already moved into the office space on the east side of the building, and a large classroom, conference, and event space occupies the west side. That space, which can accommodate up to 85 people, is available for various uses. For information about availability, contact Berea College Conference Services at (859) 985-3641 or (859) 985-3025.

Once the center opens to the public, school groups will be welcomed to schedule outdoor education experiences for their classes. Forest Outreach Coordinator Wendy Zagray Warren is an educator who will design learning opportunities tailored to meet Kentucky educational standards and classroom needs. For questions or information about the educational role of Forest Outreach Center, contact Wendy at wendy_warren@berea.edu.

opening remarks. "Arresting people and incarcerating them has not worked for years, and I'm not going to keep kicking that can down the road."

There were over 20 people at the meeting interested in bidding for the partnership. Chaney presented the RFP, and its components, but emphasized that nothing was set in stone.

"If you all have a model of rehabilitation that works for you, and that's all you want to do, then this probably isn't the grant for you," Chaney said, who emphasized that they wanted "dual risk" with the private organization running the programming in the Healing Center, and a working partnership.

Currently, Madison County is looking to house 300 people annually, Chaney said, but they would not be inmates.

"At first, we planned to have them go through the court system, then have the judge order mandated participation in the Healing Center," Chaney said. "But now we're looking at a different point of entry, to referral from the law enforcement or judicial system."

People currently in the Madison County Detention Center have probably already been there multiple times, Chaney said, so they would be looking to work with people earlier in the process who would be more likely to succeed in rehabilitation. Later on, Chaney said, they could look at outreach to current detention center inmates.

They have received support from Leader Mitch McConnell and Congressman Hal Rogers for the project, Chaney said, as well as Congressman Andy Barr, Senator Jared Carpenter, and Representative Jonathan Shell. They have spoken to staff in Governor Matt Bevin's office, but have not spoken to Bevin yet.

At this point, Madison County is looking to move their road department, solid water department and animal shelter to the Healing Center. This would be transitional work for the clients in Phase 3, to work on those "soft skills" needed such as dealing with conflict with co-workers, and punctuality. Multiple industries in Madison County have shown great interest in hiring people from the Healing Center, but they would like some assurance that they have a solid work ethic.

Chaney emphasized that they were open to suggestions on any part of the programming, and that organizations interested in bidding on the RFP should put forth their ideas and back it up with statistics.

"We want the best of the best," Taylor said.

"This is an issue like we have never seen before and we need a solution that has never been seen before," Chaney said.

The RFP is due on July 7.

COUNTY

from both Humana and Anthem, but they were not competitive.

A second proposal was put forth for a self-insured model through United Health Care. Madison County would be the insurance carrier, and would pay $150 a month to United Health to administer all the claims and keep everything accurate.

Deputy Judge Colleen Chaney reported that they would need to purchase Stop Loss Insurance, so they would only pay a maximum of $100,000 per member. This would keep the county from going bankrupt because of a huge insurance claim.

"If claims are less than projected with this plan," Chaney said, "the county banks that amount and rolls the balance over for the next year."

Madison County would also purchase Aggregate Loss Insurance, in the event the cost of coverage for the entire pool of employees is above $1.8 million. Under the self-insured model, the county would pay $499.17 per employee per month.

Magistrate Tom Bokin expressed concern for the cost to employees, however, who would need to pay $50 a month for the plan that they previously received without charge.

"For everybody sitting up here with me, $50 is not going to break the bank. But the guy down in the road department who's making $10 an hour, that's a bag of groceries and that's important . . . we could be talking people jumping ship to work somewhere else," Botkin said.

The insurance broker pointed out that people would be able to access a much larger network with the new plan, since United Health was much bigger than the Baptist Health options. The fiscal court members decided to hold a special meeting to discuss the issue on Friday. Judge Executive Reagan Taylor has the authority to call one. They wanted to discuss the issue with Madison County Treasurer Glenna Baker present. It will take place at 9:30 a.m. at the courthouse.

In other business:

- Scott Tussey recommended that Rick Childers Excavating receive the bid to clean up the illegal dump site on Chapel Road, within Berea's annexed property. They received funding for the clean-up of $66,000 through Waste Management Funds. Childers bid $900 more than the lowest bidder, but the county has had more positive experience with Childers. Magistrates talked of the mess on Chapel Road that had been there several years.

- A Proclamation for Child Abuse Prevention Month was signed, and accepted by the executive director of CASA. Pinwheels have been planted on the courthouse lawn, to represent the children with cases of substantiated abuse in Madison County.

- Madison County will apply for funding under the land and water conservation act. This funding would be used for an amphitheater at the proposed Veterans Memorial Park.

- The fiscal court approved the second reading to purchase the property across the street with a bond issue. It will be a 15-year bond instead of 20.

- Madison County negotiated the AT&T contract, so the company will pay $1,100 in rent to the county instead of $700.

- Some discretionary funds were received by Madison County through the Transportation Cabinet. The money will be used to resurface two roads.

- The Madison County Fire Chief proposed Wynn Fire Equipment out of Corbin receive the bid to supply rescue equipment. Their bid was $31,000. The other bid received was lower, but did not meet bid specs.

- Taylor will go into negotiations with Dale Fortney to be the county's electrical inspector.

- Chris Graham is retiring from the Madison County Fire Department.

- Shelby Dunnigan was hired for the Road Department as a CDL driver.

to integrate Berea's neighborhoods were turned around at some point, Connelly announced, who found a city ordinance before 1950 that dictated that a black person could not purchase a home in a city block if there was a higher percentage of white people residing there. The ordinance proclaimed that the efforts were for the health and safety of Berea residents. More modern housing efforts were highlighted as well during the tour, including the Hope Estates that Habitat for Humanity built on Scaffold Cane, with the intention of creating an interracial neighborhood, the Berea Industrial Park, and the income-based housing developments.

On the return to Indian Fort Theater, Burnside said, "In Berea, we have our challenges, but we have always faced them together."

Tourism Commission Reviews Status of Buildings

Only the last part of this article was published in last week's edition. This is the full text without the bullet points.

Members of the Tourism Commission looked at preliminary drawings of the renovated parking lot and building of the former Tolle property on Wednesday, April 12, and expressed approval for the basic ideas.

The Berea Tourism Commission purchased the building with the idea of moving the Welcome Center to the Chestnut location from N. Broadway. City Administrator Randy Stone said they knew the building would take a lot of renovation, since it had served primarily as a gallery and retail space for Mitchell Tolle.

The architect from Brandstetter Carroll said they considered multiple options for renovating the parking lot to allow large tour buses to enter. Their final proposal was to widen the entrance from Chestnut Street for the buses to enter, and then guide them around the perimeter of the parking lot until they could turn and park parallel to the building. A second entrance with a canopy for disembarking passengers would be built facing Hwy 25.

The architectural drawings also featured island parking, with greenery surrounding it, giving the new Berea Welcome Center 52 parking places. An elevator was also proposed, with the architect commenting that existing codes almost always required renovations of multi-storied building to install elevators.

Commission members asked about the possibility of having tour buses drive up Chestnut Court, and turn right into the property. However, there was not enough space for buses to make the necessary turn toward the building.

Offices for the tourism staff would be on the second floor, with the first floor open for receiving and welcoming tourists. The reception area would be angled so staff could see both entrances.

Stone also reported on the Broadway Center, and the proposed renovations that would create eight classrooms for Learnshops. He stated that the work could be done in-house; the City of Berea had recently put out a RFP for contractors in such areas as plumbing and electricity.

Stone encouraged the tourism commission to take action if they were interested in using the Broadway Center for Learnshops. The city council had expressed interest in using the Center for a possible tech center where home-based employees could share conference and office space. Stone also reported on the old Berea Hotel building that tourism owns. Commission members had discussed at an earlier meeting the possibility of using the second floor as a commercial space, but Stone reported that the only possible use, according to the contractor, was apartment renting.

Brand Advertising gave their report, and presented commercials, the Berea Craft Festival poster, and the new billboards. The new billboards show the word "Berea" in all caps, with photos of the town inside the letters. They are south and north of Berea on Interstate 75, and also in London.

Commission Charles Arnold asked Tourism Director Kerri Hensley when the billboards were approved by the tourism commission. Hensley replied that she thought the images had already been presented to the commission, which indicated that they could go ahead with the plans.

"We have always discussed everything that gets sent out for advertising," Arnold said, who commented that he didn't remember seeing the images before. "These things need to be debated and discussed as a group."

Arnold said he was not happy with the billboard images, because the lighter photos at the top of the "B" and "E" in the word Berea make it difficult to read from a distance.

Commissioner Ken Gastineau said he didn't think the commission had always approved the advertising.

Robertson suggested that tourism commission members make a point of driving the Interstate to see the different billboards, and report back on their visibility and readability. Tourism members agreed that they were very pleased with the other pieces of the advertising presentation, including the commercials which Arnold said were "excellent."

Robertson brought up local communication during the tourism meeting, and the need for more articles in the local newspaper, Berea Citizen. She stated that Tourism was effectively marketing on social media and online, but the majority of people in Madison County were not "using Instagram, Twitter, and other social media sites."

"I thought about our communication at Kerri's presentation to city council," Robertson said. "A few council members expressed concern about what's communicated locally, and offered here."

Commissioner Cheryl Stone and Arnold both discussed more local advertising, and the possibility of publishing a quarterly or monthly calendar and update for Berea residents.

The digital marketing has been very successful, according to Brand Advertising, with 413,154 impressions between March 1 and 31, and 12,640 unique views on the website. Of the cities that visited the website, the top ten are Lexington, Louisville, Berea, Atlanta, Richmond, Nicholasville, London, Nashville, Indianapolis, and Barbourville.

Recommending the Book, "A Rifleman Went to War"

As our nation begins its centennial observations of America's entry into the Great War, I saw it fit to make a book recommendation. Herman McBride's A Rifleman

Went to War is a work far more beneficial in understanding the men who fought World War I than is the traditional public school reading assignment on the subject.

Herman McBride was the son of a Civil War veteran and was raised in small town Indiana. As a boy, some of McBride's earliest memories were of his father and fellow Civil War veterans gathering on a side street in town to hold marksmanship competitions. My Pap, Earl J. Morris told me of watching similar contests held in Sand Gap during the 1920s. Those matches were elegantly simple, as the closest man's shot to the center of an "X" scratched onto a board took the prize.

As a young man, Herman joined the Indiana National Guard and competed in the National Rifle Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio. The National Matches are sponsored to this day by our nation's oldest civil rights organization (pre-dating the NAACP by some three decades) the National Rifle Association (NRA). The NRA was founded by former Union general officers who had been disappointed by the general lack of marksmanship among Union troops during the late war. When war broke out in Europe in August 1914, Herman McBride took his marksmanship skills to the aid of our Canadian cousins.

A Rifleman Went to War is a man's man reading delight. McBride was a hunter who relished his role as a sniper against the Germans. A Rifleman Went to War is a treasure of snipercraft without the pacifist slant as found in All Quiet on the Western Front. Of particular interest to this reader were McBride's insights into the strengths and weaknesses of various Allied rifles used to kill threats to friendly troops. As well, there's very matter-of-fact evaluations of the performance of handguns put to use in the bad breath combat distances of the Western Front trenches.

With America's entry into the Great War in 1917, Herman McBride resigned his commission in the Canadian Army and re-enlisted in the US Army. The last chapters of his book detail his role in training US snipers at Camp Shelby, Mississippi. So succinct was McBride's writings on the art of precision marksmanship that his book served as the manual for training US snipers during the early days of WWII some twenty-two years later. For those who strive to earn the title of "Rifleman," McBride's masterpiece should to this day be considered required reading.

 Charles Wesley's raised beds, above, are tilled with top soil added. Wesley utilizes the French Intensive gardening method for his tomatoes, which required the ground to be dug 18 to 25 inches deep in order to give the roots room to grow. His other raised beds are tilled 12 inches down.

Exploring the Various Gardening Styles of Berea

By Pamela Warren
 Citizen Reporter

"In Appalachia, gardening is a family value, a point of pride", says Pat Brunner.

Those new to gardening may not be feeling very proud when their attempts fail due to poor ground, lack of funds, or lack of space. While failure is part of gardening and often due to events out of one's control such as weather, drought, and pests, it is easy to feel a sense of shame and resignation that gardening is just not possible.

Pat Brunner grew up gardening with her immediate and extended family, sharing the work and the bounty. Like her family, she began by tilling the ground. When life experiences required she be wheelchair bound, Brunner did not give up. She changed her methods to container gardening and now grows a variety of vegetables, herbs, and flowers throughout her yard.

Container gardening is also great for small spaces, small budgets and bad soil plagued by shale and clay. The Berea library has a variety of books on container gardening and a seed library.

Charles Wesley has grown a garden for over 50 years in Berea. His garden consists of raised beds tilled with top soil added. He uses the French Intensive method for his tomatoes, a method he went to California to study years ago which requires the ground to be dug 18 to 25 inches deep in order to give the roots room to grow. He tills his other raised beds to a normal depth of 12 inches.

The thinking about soil depth has changed over the years and according to Mel Bartholomew, who authored a book called Square Foot Gardening, most vegetables require only about six inches of soil, making raised beds without tilling an ideal choice for those who have poor soil. Bartholomew's raised beds do not require any tilling, just a box with soil added. This is another great option for those with ground not suitable for growing.

Even with poor soil, however, time and patience can work wonders. Following

 The soil in Laura Robie's garden has been improved over time by mixing compost into the soil.

Laura Robie's example from her Campfire Girl days growing a Victory Garden in New York, it is possible to enrich the soil by mixing compost into the soil. Over time the soil becomes enriched and perfect for growing. Patricia Lanza, who wrote Lasagna Gardening gives easy and inexpensive ways to enrich soil.

While failure is a part of the gardening experience, it does not have to mean that gardening is impossible. Regardless of poor ground, lack of space, or limited budget there is a way to experience the pride and satisfaction of gardening. Check out the Berea Library or the local bookstore or talk with neighbors who use a variety of gardening methods for information to get started.

Happy Growing.

Word From Berea Streets

"What is your garden looking like so far this spring?"

Brandi Cornelius said, "I just got a couple of plants from my friend, Judy, and I haven't set them out yet."

Dennis Sparks said, "We're doing a container garden this year. We have about a dozen containers with plants. Cold weather kind of stunted it at the start, but, they're looking good now!"

Tom McCay said, "I only set out a couple of tomato plants this year and they are doing great."

Berea Banks to Compete With Food Bank Collection

Amanda Crossland and Heather Resor of Park Community Credit Union will be competing with seven other Berea banks to collect the greatest amount of food in the month of May for the Berea Food Bank. It has been dubbed "The Battle of the Banks."

the month of May will receive a plaque with the winning name. The plaque will stay at that bank until the next year's drive. Berea Food Bank volunteers will be weighing food at each location as the month progresses.

The Berea Food Bank will be the ultimate winner, but coordinator Heather Resor of Park Community Credit Union says, "This provides a great service to the local food bank and is also a friendly-competition among the banks."

"Each bank will do their own drive, so to speak," says Resor. "Our friends at Peoples Bank have four locations of course, more than the rest of us. But they will be judged individually."

The eight participating banks are Peoples Bank, Park Community Credit Union, Central Bank, US Bank, Appalachian Community FCU, Citizens Guaranty, Woodforest (at Walmart), and Community Trust.

"The Battle of the Banks is a great idea," Berea Food Bank director Jerry Workman said. "Several of those banks do random drives occasionally, but the competition during May will add focus to our needs. This is just a tremendous thing."

The month of May will see a lot of activity in Berea's banks, though not the usual monetary kind.

Eight banks and branches in Berea will compete in the "Battle of the Banks" in May, when these finance institutions will all try to solicit the most pounds of food for donation. The bank that gathers the greatest amount of food throughout

Taaffe & Ó hAirt Perform in House Concert Thursday

This Thursday, April 27, traditional musicians Brendan Taaffe and Brian Ó hAirt will perform at a special house concert in Berea.

The concert will start at 7 p.m. Thursday evening with doors opening at 6:30 p.m. It will be held at the Carlberg home at 128 North Broadway Street in Old Town above the fudge shop. This event is open to the public and all are welcome to attend. A $10 donation is suggested to benefit the performers.

Reservations are encouraged but not required. Please email Brendan at brendan@brendantaaffe.com.

Currently a Sound Archives Fellow at Berea College, Brendan Taaffe is deeply versed in Irish and American traditions. It is on the mbira that Brendan Taaffe found a distinctive voice, blending old-time ballads with traditional Zimbabwean rhythms. A multi-instrumentalist on guitar, fiddle, banjo, and mbira, Taaffe has toured with many different groups, including nationally acclaimed dance band Magic Foot and the internationally acclaimed vocal ensemble Northern Harmony.

Brian Ó hAirt was born in Saint Louis, Mo., to parents from rural southern Indiana. He grew up exposed to the older dance music and songs of the Upland South. A natural singer from very early on, he ventured into the singing traditions of Ireland later in his youth. Along with songs, Brian learned old-style step dance and dance tunes on the tin whistle, button accordion, and concertina in his late teens while involved with a cultural organization whose aim was to promote the pairing of Irish traditional music with dance.

Brian became the only American to ever win the coveted Sgiath Uí Dhálaigh shield at the 2002 Fleadh Cheoil na hÉireann in Listowel, Co. Kerry; adding his name to the award's long list of noted All-Ireland Champion singers including Joe Heaney, Frank Harte, Paddy Berry and Brian's current singing partner Len Graham.

Reflections

FROM THE BERA CITIZEN ARCHIVES APRIL 1966

There were increased cost estimates of construction and other problems with the building of the new city school, but faith and truth remained strong, Dr. Pat Wear from Berea College announced in April 1966.

Dr. Wear represented both the college and the school merger committee at the PTA meeting. He reported that the contractor's estimate for construction costs was about a million more than the $1.5 million estimate given by the architect the year before.

A united Parent-Teacher Association for Knapp Hall and the Berea City Schools was organized. Nearly 100 parents and teachers attended to vote on new officers for the joint association. Norris Woodie was elected president, Louise Hart was elected vice president, Leigh Jones was elected secretary, and Thurman Calico was elected treasurer.

Two presidents retired -- Bob May from Knapp Hall and Lewis Botkin from the City School.

Students who made the Berea Junior High School Star Roll (straight A's) in April 1966 in the 7th grader were Shearle Furnish, David Bess, Steve Clark, and Jane York. In the 8th grade, students on the Star Roll were Ruth Barton, Brenda Croucher, Robin Tincher, Retha Anglin, and Connie Anderson.

Students on the Honor Roll (average-B or better) in Berea 7th grade were Jay Anderkin, Bradley Arnett, Becky Botkin, Teresa Caudill, Beverly Cummins, Alice Curtis, Judy Engle, Donna Estridge, Robin Hamilton, Kathy Pingleton, James Rowlette, Swecia Webb, Connie Bowman, Linda Cain, Vicky French, Dolores Hazelwood, Daphne Moore, Paula Jo Neeley, Saundra Sander, Dale Whiteford and Brenda Wyatt. In the 8th grade, they were Paula Bowman, Kent Clark, Linda Crawford, Mario Mieres, Jackie White, Bobby Green, Mike Fothergill, Donna Moore, Brenda Owens, Kay Wood, Patsy Cox, Darlene Barrett, Pam Baker, and Phillip Malicote.

Several personnel from the Berea College Hospital attended the 37th

Annual Convention of the Kentucky Hospital Association in Louisville from April 25-28, 1966. Attendees were Lillie Mae Walters, medical records librarian; Barbara Coyle, dietitian; Beulah Maupin, executive housekeeper; Reinette Howell, X-ray technician; Kathy Culbert, director of nursing service, and W. Leon Hisle, administrator.

Officers for the National Honor Society of Berea High School were chosen on Monday, April 4, 1966. Albert Scruggs was elected president, Steve Kiteck was elected vice-president; Belle Jackson was elected secretary; Rietta Jo Botkin was elected treasurer, and Larry Wyatt was elected reporter.
