Cemetery Hill project on track, to be extended

Scott Powell
teknohillbilly@yahoo.com

MUNICIPAL CENTER — A new sidewalk on Cemetery Hill is closer to completion and will be extended.

Crews have been at work constructing a sidewalk and re-vamping drainage on Ky. 1016 at Cemetery Hill since late July. On Tuesday, the Berea City Council approved a change order that will extend the project another 465 feet.

The original plan called for construction of a sidewalk from the Berea Cemetery entrance to Rockcastle Street. Since the plan was approved, city officials mulled the idea of extending the sidewalk to connect with one at the intersection of Glades Road and South Powell Avenue. The change order, in the amount of $43,880, will allow for that extension. The measure passed unanimously, with councilmen Jennings and Burnside absent.

City administrator Randy Stone said the project is on schedule and the roadway, which has been closed since July 28, should reopen in time for the opening of school.

A change order for construction on the City Park addition was also unanimously approved.

Mayor Steven Connelly explained the change was necessary so construction crews can see CITY page A6)

"Boomer" games coming to Berea in September

Tanya Stewart
celticfire@windstream.net

BEREA — After Saturday, Sept. 6, no one in Berea will dare refer to anyone over 50 as a "geezer."

That's when the 2008 Bluegrass Regional Boomer and Senior Games will be held, at the athletic facilities of Berea College, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.. A preliminary for the State and National Senior Games, the Regional Games are being presented under the auspices of the Bluegrass Area Agency on Aging and Independent Living.

For several years, BAA had sponsored "fun games" through area senior centers, with events like walk-runs, horseshoes and corn hole. This year, Berea College physical education professor Martha Beagle, who has taught Body Recall for 15 years and was a volunteer at last year's National Senior Games in Louisville, offered the college as a venue.

"This changed the whole picture of the games," said Randy Lawson, the agency's program specialist. "It's a big deal."

Events were upgraded to standard athletic competition, following the rules of the state and national senior games, altered only to reflect the regional's one-day status. Anyone age 50 and over (and there is no upper age limit) is eligible to register see GAMES page A10)

Madison County schools offer students dual credit courses

BEREA — Some Madison County students in the upcoming 2008-2009 school year are being given a chance to graduate and leave with part of their college freshman year already under their belt with the Madison County School District's dual credit distance learning program.

In collaboration with Eastern Kentucky University, Madison

Southern and Madison Central high school juniors and seniors have the opportunity to take college level English (101 and 102) and Math (107 and 109) classes, earning both a high school and college credit, while sitting in a classroom at Southern or Central, said Randy Peffer, chief academic officer for Madison County schools.

"What an opportunity this is for our students," Peffer said.

Economic downturn has local nonprofit groups reeling

Anna L. Homa

BEREA — With the rising costs of almost everything, like gasoline, produce and milk, it's hard for most people just to get by. For many people it can be a choice of buying food to eat, putting gasoline in the vehicle or heating the home.

For many years not-for-profit organizations have been around to help those people in their time of need. Different groups and organizations have come together to help clothe the naked, feed the hungry or help keep a family warm at Christmas time.

Admiring a quilt at the Flora Allen Community Quilt show at the Acton Folk Center is Denise Lewis of Richmond. A quilter herself, Lewis said she's much better at hand-quilting than quilting on a machine. She came to Berea Saturday to "admire everybody's perfect work," she said. For more photos from the 2008 Quilt Extravaganza, see page B1.

This year's Extravaganza is on point

Tanya Stewart
celticfire@windstream.net

BEREA — "Everywhere you looked, there were women with bright green programs," said Berea Arts Council director Gwen Childs, of last weekend's Quilt Extravaganza. "I was really pleased."

There were more quilt enthusiasts in Berea this year than last, according to Martha Davidson of Berea Tourism. Six hundred and seventy-seven visitors came through the Berea Welcome Center in Old Town over last Friday, Saturday, and Sunday; at least 1,000 people, said Childs, came to see the "Quilts With a Kick" exhibit at ArtSpace during the weekend event alone.

"I know we had a lot more people than last year," she said.

The Acton Folk Center saw 520 people pass through its doors, said Mimi LaPorte, see QUILTS page A2) coordinator for the Flora Allen Memorial Quilt Exhibit there. Many people, she noticed, were taking the day Saturday exclusively for the Quilt Extravaganza, proving by the number of visitors asking for directions that "we can move people through town for events like this."

Plenty of grownups, as well as their offspring, attended the children's activities run by Judy Receptor, and visitors finished a happy number of blankets at the booth for the Linus Club, which makes "security blankets" for children entering hospitals for treatment.

"People registered in the [visitors] book from all over," said LaPorte, with the majority of out-of-state travelers coming from Ohio. Childs mentioned that an Ohio newspaper, featuring an article on weekend events an easy drive away, drew at least one Akron couple to Berea.

Quilt Raffle A Success
The winners of the First Christian Church's quilt raffle to benefit their building project for a new sanctuary and multi-purpose room were drawn on Saturday, Aug. 3

The winner of the Dresden plate quilt is from Atlanta, and the winner of the faux snowball quilt is from Mt. Sterling.

This first raffle netted the building project over $2,000. The church appreciates all who entered the raffle.

This is the fourth year for the Quilt Extravaganza, which was born through a meeting of city officials and tourism-related businesses searching for ways to offset a downturn in tourism by organizing events during "off" months.

16 killed on state's roadways

Preliminary statistics indicate that 16 people died in sixteen separate crashes on Kentucky roadways from Monday, July 28 through Sunday, Aug. 3. Twelve of the fatalities involved motor vehicles and nine of those victims were not wearing seat belts—the seat belt status of one victim has not been determined. Motor vehicle crashes occurred in Allen, Bath, Boone, Christian, Floyd, Franklin, Grant (2), Graves (2), Jefferson and Magoffin counties. Three of these crashes involved the suspected use of alcohol.

A pedestrian fatality occurred in Madison county and alcohol was a factor in that death.

Through Aug. 2,

preliminary statistics indicate that 441 people have lost their lives on Kentucky roadways during 2008. This is 68 fewer than reported for this time period in 2007.

FROM THE FRONT

be taught during the fall semester while English 102 and Math 109 will begin in the spring, said Madison Southern Principal David Gilliam.

"This challenges the students academically and gets them a head start in college," Gilliam said.

The classes are taught by Adjunct Professors from EKU. Karen Devere teaches the English courses at Madison Southern while Melanie Scott teaches the Math courses at Madison Central, said Erin Stewart, community education director for Madison County Schools.

An adjunct professor works for the university but isn't necessarily full time faculty. Adjunct means an associate or assistant of another; something joined or added to another thing but not essentially a part of it.

Before students can enroll in the classes, which are still openly enrolling until August 20, they must have taken the ACT and need to enroll at EKU. Administrators at the high schools will help parents and students with enrolling at EKU, Stewart said.

Students must also pay EKU tuition, but only 20 percent of what a part-time student at EKU pays. Students also have other options that would make the classes free, like if they participate in the Jump Start program as well, Peffer said. But the Jump Start program is only open to high school seniors, he said.

"Students enrolling in these courses will get their first taste of what college courses are like, but with the advantage of a high school teacher's help," Stewart said in an e-mail.

In the future years, the school district and EKU will be looking at expanding the program to incorporate other classes for dual credit, like Social Studies, History or Science, Gilliam said.

"Dual credit opens the door for many students to try their hand at post-secondary education," said Superintendent Tommy Floyd in a newsletter on the Web site. "It also gives our students the ability to test their academic skills at a faster pace and higher level of expectation."

Students in both high schools sit in on the lessons at EKU via the distance learning technology. Both classes are on a Monday, Wednesday, Friday schedule at EKU, but will also be taught at both schools on Tuesday and Thursday to meet the high school requirements that may differ from the college course, Stewart said.

While English is being taught in an intelligent classroom at Southern, the students at Central will be in their classroom listening and watching with the help of microphones, speakers and cameras placed in the rooms. The students at one school can still participate in the class and ask questions even though they are in a different city, Gilliam said.

Many roads to enlightenment?

Everybody's heard at least a dozen answers to the joke questioning how many blondes it takes to change a light bulb. My favorite answer is three, one to hold the bulb and two to turn the ladder.

Scenter Stage
Teresa Scenters, Publisher

and tinted, all of which are equally valid paths to luminescence.

How many radical left wing Gaian atheists does it take to change a light bulb? One, for compact fluorescent bulbs or Twenty-five for the more sustainable method, twenty firefly catchers to capture enough bugs and five gatherers of recycled bottles to put them in.

Now I'm not in the least offended by the jab at blondes so I'm hoping no one will take this denominational version of the same joke in the wrong way. It's delivered with nothing but fun.

How many Charismatics does it take to change a light bulb? Only one, her hands are in the air anyway.

How many Calvinists does it take to change a light bulb? None. God has predestined when the lights will be on.

How many Baptists does it take to change a light bulb? No one knows for sure, it depends on how many members of the bulb changing committee show up for the meeting.

How many Pentecostals does it take to change a light bulb? Ten, one to change it and nine others to pray against the spirit of darkness.

How many televangelists does it take to change a light bulb? One. But for the message of hope to continue to go forth, send in your donation today.

How many Roman Catholics does it take to change a light bulb? None: Candles only.

How many Amish does it take to change a light bulb? What's a light bulb?

How many Polygamous Mormons does it take to change a lightbulb? Five. One man to change the bulb, and four wives to tell him how to do it.

How many Jehovah's Witnesses does it take to change a light bulb? Three. One to screw in the bulb, and two to knock on your door and ask you if you've seen the light!

How many Unitarians does it take to change a light bulb? The Unitarians choose not to make a statement either in favor of or against the need for a light bulb. However, if in your own journey you have found that light bulbs work for you, that is fine. You are invited to write a poem or compose a modern dance about your light bulb for the next Sunday service, in which we will explore a number of light bulb traditions, including incandescent, fluorescent, three-way, long-life

Berea Swimming Pool doesn't suck

I knew that headline would get your attention.

You may remember last week's front page story about safety and sanitization at the Berea Swimming Pool. Well, one thing was left out of that story — something I would never have thought to ask.

Being neither a pool expert or a plumber, I assumed all pool drains suck water through the filtration system. I remember the drain at the old Berea Swimming Pool on Maple Street sucked, and the side intakes in my mom's pool will take the hair right off your leg if you get too close.

My Accent
Scott Powell, Editor

At Tuesday's city council meeting I was talking to parks director Maggy Kriebel, and she pointed out that the drains at the city's swimming pool don't suck, as opposed to older pools (such as the one involved in the tragic Lexington incident). Drains at the city's pool is powered by gravity.

Who knew... not only is our pool on top of safety, it doesn't suck.

Last week's story about Mother Earth News naming Berea one of the best unheard of places generated some interesting feedback. Actually, most of it was stuff I've been hearing and thinking for years.

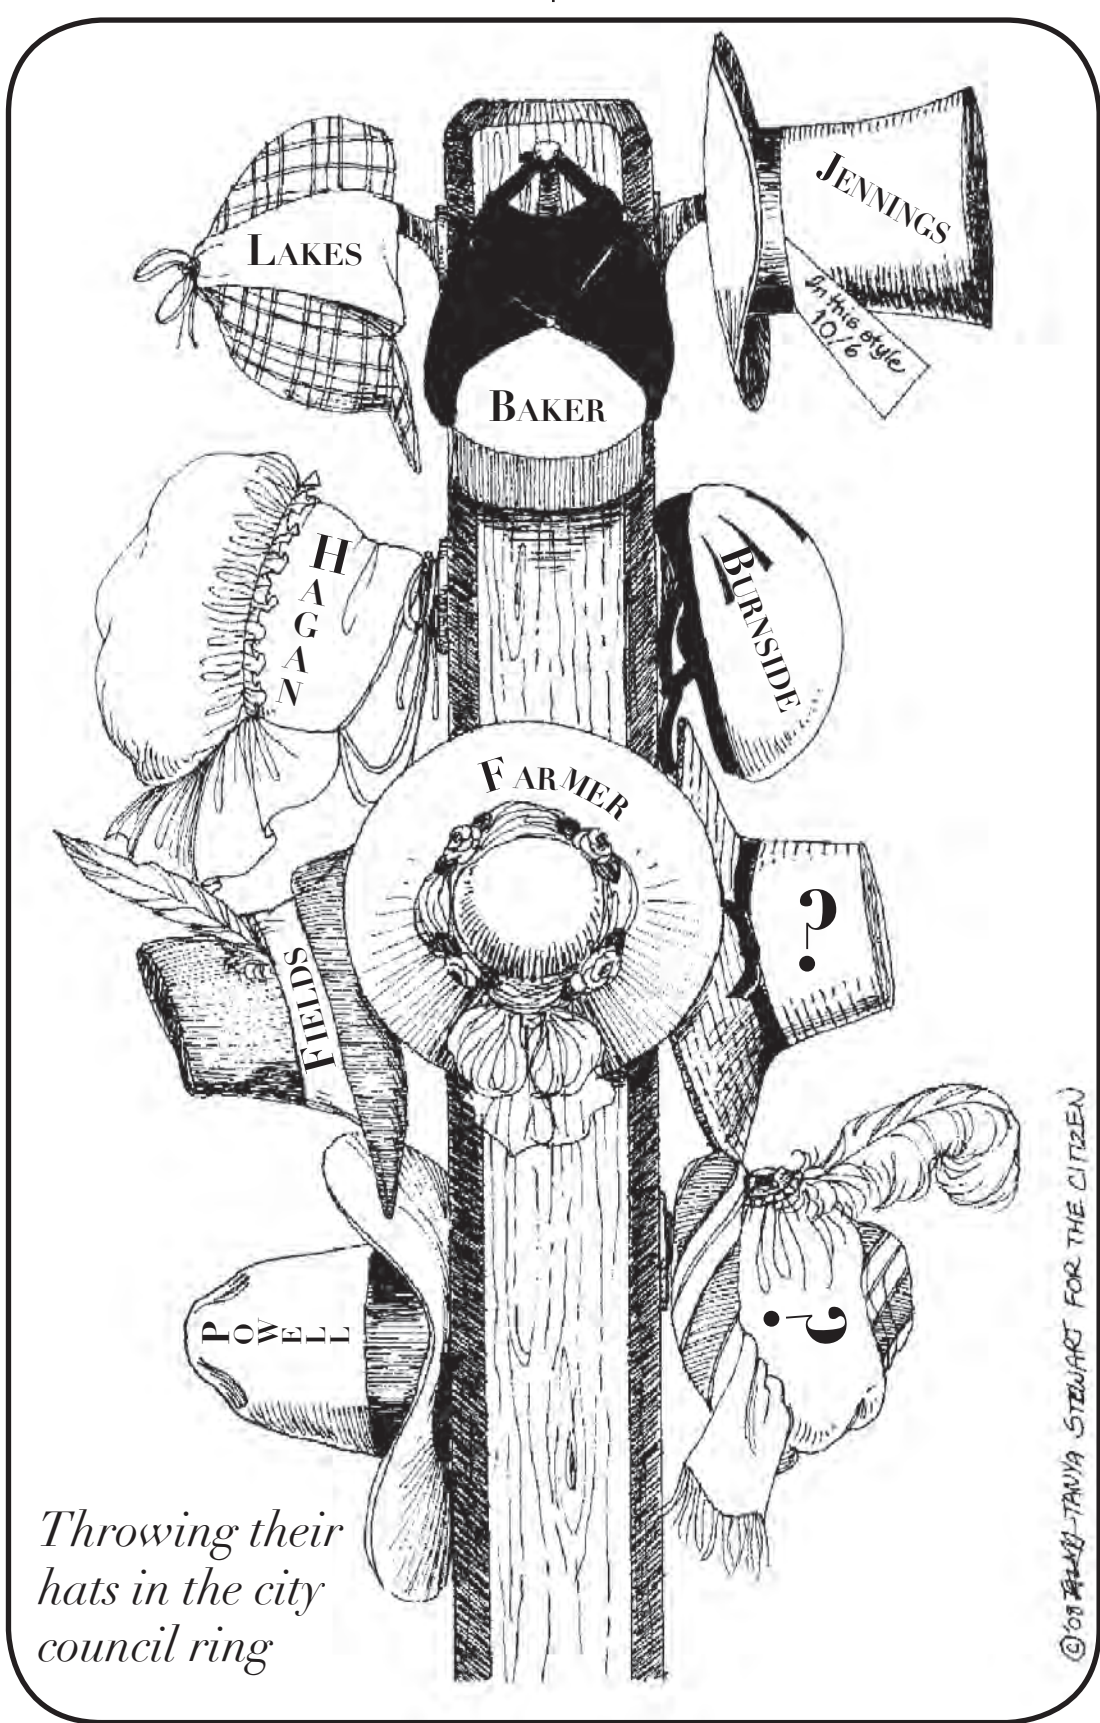

One of the biggest factors the magazine used in naming cities to its list was environmental sustainability — or the potential to use resources at a level that would sustain human existence indefinitely. As everyone in Berea has been made very well aware of, some of these methods of sustainable living include installation of rain barrels, recycling and organic farming.

One thing that tickles me, and apparently quite a few people I've spoken with, is the fact that sustainability is actually interchangeable with old-fashioned.

Not too long ago, people in this region grew their own food without pesticides (because they couldn't afford or find them), collected rainwater (because running water wasn't available) and reused and recycled everything they could (because they couldn't afford not to).

While "sustainability" may seem like a new concept to those who have moved in to Berea and the surrounding area from other places, many people my parents' and grandparents' age grew up living just that way, and not because they were made to feel guilty or told the world would come to an end if they didn't.

It makes me wonder... If we encouraged people to get back to their roots, instead of preaching environmentalism at them, more people would live a sustainable lifestyle. The "we're right, and you're going to kill us all" approach just turns people off.

Throwing their hats in the city council ring

Loss of Wal-Mart's fabric department...

Dear Editor:

In a town that's known for its arts and crafts and that celebrates hand made quilts Wal-Mart has almost done away with their fabric department.

Richmond Wal-Mart was the first to have the fabric department downsized. Perhaps the fabric department was losing money for them. Seems to me they make enough on the rest of the store to carry the fabric department as a service to their patrons.

I haven't checked but I am sure high school home economics still teaches sewing. With both of the stores without a good selection of fabrics customers have to go to Lexington or Mt Vernon. Then again someone who's is looking to open a business might open a fabric shop to serve Richmond and Berea.

Seems like a good opportunity to me.

Edna Lake, McKee

Editor's Note: I'm not much into sewing, but I did notice this weekend that The Quilt Shop on College Square has quite a selection of fabric. You may check them out.

Tennis is going to the dogs... and cats...

Dear Editor,

The Fourth Annual Berea Friends of the Animals, Inc., Doubles Tennis Tournament at the Berea College Wilson Evans Tennis Complex on July 26-27.

Once again it was a great success, there were over 100 players and visitors in attendance from all around the state. We raised over $1,200 that will be going to the Madison County Humane Society and two other local animal rescue programs.

We would like to thank our wonderful business and personal sponsors for their generous donations that helped to make our event a success again this year. Special thanks go to Chiropractic Health Solutions, Community Trust Bank, Mario's, Mitchell Tolle, Peoples Bank of Madison County, Jeff Morrison, Hosfeld's Jewelry, The Glass Studio, Rosann Effron, Mary Jo Stahl, Wal-Mart, and The Berea Citizen.

Check out the event photos at www.bereafriendsoftheanimals.com to see our players in action! Thanks also to our special volunteers who worked the event. Look for us again next year!

County schools meet No Child Left Behind goals for consecutive second year

For the second year in a row, the Madison County School District has reached Annual Yearly Progress (AYP) as required by the No Child Left Behind Act (NCLB).

As a district, Madison County Schools reached 100 percent – 16 out of 16 – of its target goals which are needed to qualify for AYP. Last year, Madison County Schools also reached 16 out of 16 target goals, which means the district has successfully reached AYP two years in a row. The district is now out of tier consequence as outlined by NCLB.

“Making AYP again and coming out of tier consequence is tremendous news for the Madison County School district,” said Superintendent Tommy Floyd. “It indicates our commitment to student achievement is paying dividends. We are consistently moving our students in the right direction. Making AYP confirms we are moving toward a goal of proficiency for all of our students.”

Act was authorized in 2002 to close the achievement gap for all students nationwide. The goals of NCLB are:

- All students will obtain proficiency or better in reading and mathematics by 2014.
- All limited English students will become proficient in English.
- All teachers will be highly qualified (according to areas of expertise) by 2005-06.
- All students will be educated in safe, drug-free environments.
- All students will graduate from high school.

Madison County Schools made gains in reading and mathematics across the district, with a 1.11 point gain in reading and a 4.17 point gain in math as a district. With regards to NCLB reporting, the state of Kentucky uses the results of the Kentucky Core Content Test (KCCT) in the areas of reading and math. The four levels of performance on the KCCT are novice, apprentice, proficient and distinguished. For all Kentucky schools – and schools nationwide – AYP is reached when students perform in the areas of reading and mathematics at the proficient or distinguished levels in sufficient amounts to reach pre-set goals.

It isn't enough to reach the goals for the entire school. But rather that all federally identified student populations reach proficiency. For Madison County Schools, these groups include all students, students that participate in free and reduced lunch, students with disabilities and minority students. Goals and student populations are not the same at each school so reporting is based on the populations that exist at each school.

“NCLB results are an early opportunity for our schools to examine their student performance in the areas of reading and math, and it is a great place to begin looking at data for each of our schools,” Floyd said.

Key Findings for the NCLB report

- The district met 16 of 16 target goals to meet AYP for the second year in a row. That removes the district from tier consequence.

- 9 out of 10 elementary schools met AYP.
- 2 out of 3 middle schools met AYP.
- Clark-Moores Middle made AYP for the second year in a row, bringing them out of tier status. Foley Middle School came out of tier status last year.
- Madison Middle made significant gains in both math and reading.
- All middle schools made gains in math and two of the three made gains in reading.

“Student achievement is the focus of Madison County Schools,” said Chief Academic Officer Randy Peffer. “That focus has been set by the Board of Education and clearly communicated to all staff and students by Superintendent Floyd. Meeting AYP validates the hard work and dedication of the entire Madison County staff and their belief that every student can be successful.”

What sets the MadCo. district apart?

Madison County Schools is continuing to make strides toward proficiency for every student. Through efforts district-wide such as a full day of professional development for school leadership teams and a new format for eWalks, the district anticipates making gains again this year.

School leadership teams have been developed by each building principal so that our leadership can train leaders and the district can grow from within. The leadership teams spent a day in professional development this summer learning and talking about assessments.

The new eWalk format allows district administrators to continue to observe instructional practices and provide feedback on those observations. District eWalks will be conducted this year by building principals. The principals will visit schools that follow their feeder pattern within the district. As feedback is gathered, principals will be able to meet together to discuss best practices and help each other make the process of learning for our students a continuous process.

Middle and high school students will soon have access to Apex Learning software. Apex Learning software is a web-based software system that allows students ranging from struggling to gifted to enhance their learning experience. Intervention and enhancement opportunities can be accessed through the web at home or at school to give students the opportunity to continue their academic development.

This year, the motto for the Madison County School System has changed from “Literacy for All” to “Every Student Counts.” The change in wording represents a shift in thinking across the district. District-wide, the belief has become that we have to reach each one in order to reach them all. Every student is important in Madison County and the focus will continue to be on every student individually.

“Madison County is definitely heading in the right direction,” Peffer said. “Coming out of tier status proves that all student populations are learning and meeting the targets set by the No Child Left Behind legislation.”

Messer First Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Messer celebrated their first wedding anniversary on August 04, 2008. Chrystah and Michael were married in a double ring ceremony at Nash Chapel in Grayson, Kentucky, on the campus of Kentucky Christian University.

Chrystah is the daughter of Tracy and Carol Dollins of Cartersville and the granddaughter of Clay and Doris Dollins and Garnett and the late Ruby Short of Berea.

Michael is the son of Lisa Conley and the grandson of Tobe and Hazel Messer, all of Olive Hill.

For the wedding Chrystah wore a sleeveless gown of ivory satin trimmed in seed pearls. The back was accented by covered buttons and a long flowing train. She wore a princess tiara with pink crystals and a matching veil accented with seed pearls. The bride carried a bouquet of ivory, pink, and fuchsia roses highlighted with several shades of purple. Chrystah was escorted to the altar by her father, Tracy, and given in marriage to Michael by her parents.

Michael wore a black pinstriped Ralph Lauren tuxedo with a matching ivory shirt and tie. His boutonniere complimented the bride's bouquet.

The chapel was decorated in shades of pink and purple. An arch highlighted the center and candles filled the entire stage. Baskets of flowers completed the decor and petals were sprinkled across the stage. Pew bows decorated the auditorium in complimentary colors.

As the guests were seated, a slide show depicting the bride and groom and their families was presented. The presentation was accompanied by music highlighting the events in their lives. Other special parts of the ceremony included recognition of Kenny and Robin Harold (special friends of the bride); the bride's grandfather, Garnett, escorting her mother, Carol; Frieda Wrenn lighting a candle in memory of the bride's late grandmother.

guest register attendants. A reception followed the ceremony in the McKenzie Life Center on the campus of Kentucky Christian University which was decorated in the bride's chosen colors of pink and purple. Food was provided by the groom's family. M&M's and Hershey Kisses displayed the names of the bride and groom and the wedding date.

Bubbles filled the air as the couple enjoyed a first dance to "Love of a Lifetime". The bride and her father shared a dance to "I Loved Her First". During the reception, the bride presented her bouquet to her dear friend, Kendra Harold. She then tossed a smaller replica to the awaiting single females. That bouquet was caught by Terri Locker, aunt of the bride. Following was the tossing of the garter. It was caught by Craig Dollins, brother of the bride, who handed it off to his grandfather, Garnett Short.

Following the reception, the happy couple rode away in a white limousine. After a honeymoon trip to Pigeon Forge, Tennessee. The couple resided several months in Grayson, Kentucky.

A wedding shower was given in honor of the bride and groom by Robin Harold. Another was given by Paula Dollins (aunt of the bride). The rehearsal dinner was given in honor of the bride and groom by Kenny and Robin Harold.

Decorating of the chapel and reception, all flower arrangements, including the bridal bouquet, bridesmaid bouquets and corsages were done by Robin Harold, Kendra Harold and Carol Dollins.

In other council business:

- council members are reviewing the proposed Bypass Area Overlay District, which has already been approved by the planning commission. If approved, Stone said the plan would eventually become part of the city's land management ordinance. Connelly said the plan was developed after a series of public hearings, with many of the points raised at these hearings being included in the plan.

- economic development committee chair Howard Baker said a draft copy of the city's economic development plan should be ready for review in about two weeks.

- public works chair Chester Powell said the committee is reviewing acceptance of some streets in the Homestead Estates area, studying street lighting and safety concerns on Scruggs Street and may place signs directing visitors to schools in the city.

- human resources

chair Vi Farmer said the committee will conduct interviews for positions at the utilities department on Monday.

- parks chair Greg Lakes said the Berea Dolphins Swim Team seasons ended July 27 with no major incidents or complaints, between 125 and 200 people have attended each of the Arts Alive concerts sponsored by the parks and tourism departments and the pool season will end Aug. 10, but the facility will remain open on weekends through Labor Day. Also, the committee continues to research the possibility of offering family passes for the pool, and is looking at ways to prevent abuse of the passes.

- the council loosely declared support for the Madison County Walk of Fame project in Richmond, and will decide on a financial contribution in the future.

(Economy)

FROM THE FRONT

But with the hard economic times right now, even not-for-profits are having problems keeping up with the needs of the people they serve.

"Donations are drying up," said Ike Adams, director of development for Habitat for Humanity in Madison and Clark counties. "Everyone in non-profit is suffering and it's all directly related to petroleum."

Businesses make up a good part of Habitat for Humanity's donations. People are spending less, businesses are making less profit than they used to and so they aren't able to donate as much as they once did, Adams said.

"Their business is down and we're paying for that," Adams said.

One problem the Appalachian Ministries Educational Resource Center is having is many of the grants and foundations they rely on for funding have dried up or not doing so well, which in turn affects them.

With the stock market and housing issues, some foundations are having horrible yields on their investments, which equates to less money they can give, said Lon Oliver, executive director of AMERC and Kentucky Appalachian Ministry.

One of Oliver's biggest fears is being able to help people heat their homes this winter. It's not something most people think about in the middle of the summer, but it is a real problem that gets worse as it gets colder.

"A lot of families have to make the choices between heating or driving or buying medicines," Oliver said.

But individual donations, especially to specific programs, haven't had much of a drop. People are still finding ways to give to programs, charities or organizations they were already a part of, even if it's less than usual, but no one is taking on any new causes, Oliver said.

"People don't have the income to take on a new project right now," Oliver said.

But giving to organizations and charities isn't all about money. Sometimes one of the greatest donations is time, Oliver said.

Many organizations do need monetary donations, but if the disposable income is low or non-existent and someone still wants to help, there are plenty of other ways to do it.

If, while out grocery shopping, you find a good deal on a food item, buy just a few extra and give to the food bank. Or while out buying back to school supplies, pick up an extra pack of pencils and some paper and donate that, Oliver said.

Go through the closets at home and give away the coat that hasn't been worn in years or the blanket that has done nothing but keep the back of the closet warm. Or donate your time and help someone in need winterize their house for the season, Oliver said.

Habitat for Humanity is always looking for volunteers to help with building houses for families in need. Even if they aren't in the process of building one, there is always something in the works, and just letting them know you would be available to help is a great donation, Adams said.

Donating household furnishings, like old light fixtures, appliances, or furniture, to the Habitat ReStore helps because the profit goes to building a house in the community, Adams said.

Another big donation for Habitat for Humanity is collecting cans and dropping them in one of the little houses or bins set up specifically for aluminum, Adams said.

Alcan/Novelis will match what Habitat gets for recycling aluminum cans, so essentially your donation is doubled when donating cans, Adams said. Those bins or houses are located at Union Church, behind City Hall and in front of the ReStore in Berea. In Richmond, houses are set up on Eastern Kentucky University's campus and E.W. James Supermarket, among other locations.

When it comes to donating, every little thing helps, be it items, money or time, Oliver said.

"People tend to give seasonally, but the needs are ongoing," he said.

If interested in donating food, clothing or your time, contact AMERC at 986-8789. Habitat for Humanity can be contacted at 625-9208.

(Submitted to the Citizen)

Calvary Apostolic Church is taking the phrase "A place to belong" out in the community to the people of Berea.

On Saturday, July 26, CAC hosted a "block party" at Silver Creek Apartments that was a tremendous success with a total of 90 visitors joining in the fun.

With the motto "The greatest church in your city is the church that serves your city," Outreach Director, Joshua Hampton and his wife Tiffany have endeavored to do just this.

"The church will set up in an apartment complex or neighborhood that is interested and offer free food, drinks, games for all ages, singing and encouragement to those who attend," Joshua said.

During the block parties there are give-aways such as McDonald's gift cards, gas cards, Wal-Mart gift cards and MP3 players to add to the excitement.

"Not that there is any needed," he said.

According to CAC Pastor Alan Peevler, a feeling of belonging is something that everyone needs. Peevler strives to get the word out that CAC is the place you can belong.

At the Silver Creek Apartment block party, some of the City of Berea's finest firefighters were there with a fire truck for all of the kids to tour. They were able to see just what the firemen must wear to a fire, how much it weighs, and the equipment they have that helps them locate people in a house fire. The children received firemen hats and thought the fire truck was "really cool."

For more information about the church or if you would like to host a block party, please contact Joshua Hampton at 302-3926. Calvary Apostolic Church is located on Ky. 21 West, one mile from Interstate 75.

Fire truck tours were a big hit with children during a recent block party at Silver Creek Apartments on Melody Lane hosted by Calvary Apostolic Church in Berea. The parties have become a part of the church's outreach in the community.

and compete in sports such as badminton, half-court basketball, 20K cycling, golf, racquetball, softball, swimming, track and field, volleyball and tennis.

"Our main bottom line is to maintain the health and wellness of all older people," says Lawson, "and to enable them to stay at home as long as possible."

This is also the first year that, in reflection of one of the nation's largest demographics, "boomer" has been added to the regional's title.

"Senior' sounds like you're in your 70s," says Berea Senior Center director Paula Woodman, who is a "boomer" herself. "People in their 50s, 60s, and 70s are still active---we're not sitting on the porch in our rocking chairs."

"A lot of boomers' don't want to be associated with the word 'senior,'" concurs Beagle. "This will educate the 'boomer' generation about the agency and what it can do for them."

The games will also be a learning experience for Beagle's phys-ed majors, who will be involved as part of the college's service learning program.

There will be a boomer and senior arts and crafts exhibit as well, "Arts At the Games," on display at Seabury Center.

"This is the cultural part of the games," said Beagle, "a way to involve more older people."

All media are accepted, with first, second, and third place awards in each category.

Registration is required for both participants and luncheon guests, with late registration on September 6, from 8 to 9 a.m. in the Seabury Center lobby. Entry fees are $10 for participants, which includes a T-shirt and lunch, $5 for guests (lunch only), and an additional fee of $16.50 for golf participants, which covers the grounds fee at Berea Country Club and a cart, or one's own can be brought. Registration forms are available online at www.BGADD.org.

Hard copies of registration forms and waivers for participants are available at Seabury Center, Berea Senior Citizens Center or call Bluegrass Area Agency to have one mailed.

The games' organizers hope that this can be an annual, extended event, especially since the state games, which qualify competitors for the national games, are held a week after the regionals: This year, the state will be in Ashland, Sept. 17-21.

Some cultural rethinking is certainly in order, for which the Boomer and Senior Games may provide an impetus: That age is only chronology, rather than a measure of worth; and that the older generation of the present need not be invisible---and will not be ignored.

For more information on the Bluegrass Regional Boomer and Senior Games, contact Randy Lawson at the Bluegrass Area Agency on Aging and Independent Living: (859) 269-8021; Paula Woodman at the Berea Senior Center: 986-8350; Martha Beagle at Berea College: 985-3573.

✦ Quilt Extravaganza draws visitors from far and wide

With white gloves on their hands, Gloria Boerman of Holland, Mich., and Mary Ann Handrick of Indianapolis look at "The Cherry Blossom Riddle Song," one of many quilts by Berea's Virginia Piland at Union Church during the Fourth Annual Quilt Extravaganza. The duo were part of a group visiting Berea with Interlude Tours.

Caroline Mathis and Jamie Carter of Lexington discuss a quilt at the Flora Allen Community Quilt Show, held at the Acton Folk Center. The show is held in memory of local quilter and educator Flora Allen. The folk center was also used for children's activities and lectures over the course of the two-day event.

Images of Santa in Old Town was the winner of the quilt display contest sponsored by the Berea Citizen. Pictured is owner Lindy Evans. Second place went to Something Olde Antique Mall, and third place went to Peoples Bank. Pictured above is a polar bear quilt by Pat Jennings.

Also wearing white gloves is Esther Hay, who came in from Winchester for the Quilt Extravaganza. She didn't come just to look however, as she brought along five quilts for the Kentucky Heritage Quilt Registry. Her mother brought two quilts for the same purpose.

MSHS teacher receives national award

Martha Collins Scarberry, an accounting teacher at Madison Southern High School has received the 2008 Special Recognition Award from the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants for her curriculum innovations in accounting education.

Collins Scarberry was presented with the award in New Orleans today at Interchange 2008, a professional staff development conference coordinated by the AICPA and CPA/Society Executives Association.

The AICPA Special Recognition Award is given to an individual who has performed or contributed significantly to the success of a particular project or initiative that benefits the profession.

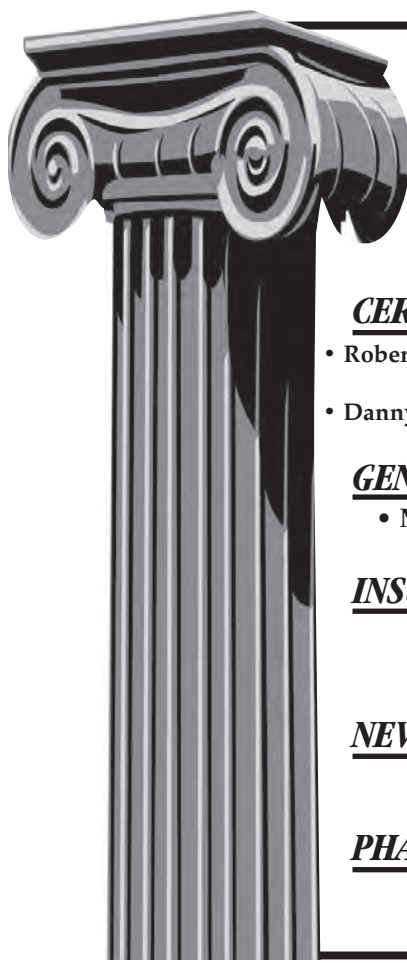

"Martha has made a remarkable contribution to accounting education in Kentucky's high schools," said Randy Fletchall, chairman of the AICPA. "As a member of the Kentucky Accounting Foundation's Curriculum Task Force, Martha was a leader in paving the way for innovative and exciting ways to teach accounting, nurture interest in the profession, and raise accounting education to its deserved place as a key course for college-bound students."

Collins Scarberry wrote a text, Accounting and Finance Foundations I, and helped develop the curriculum guide, Accounting and Finance Foundations II. Both evolved into new accounting courses that replaced Kentucky's original 1930s-era curriculum. As a result of her accomplishments, the Kentucky State Board of Accountancy and the Kentucky Society of CPAs petitioned the legislature to allow $125,000 surplus state board funds to be used for teacher training stipends. These funds were earmarked for training in 200 Kentucky schools.

Collins Scarberry holds a Bachelor of Arts degree from Lincoln Memorial University in Harrogate, Tenn., and Master of Arts and Master of Educational Leadership degrees from Eastern Kentucky University. She is studying for and intends to take the uniform CPA examination in the near future. Collins Scarberry and her husband reside in Richmond.

The American Institute of Certified Public Accountants (www.aicpa.org) is the national, professional association of CPAs, with more than 350,000 CPA members in business and industry, public practice, government, education, student affiliates, and international associates. It sets ethical standards for the profession and U.S. auditing standards for audits of private companies, non-profit organizations, federal, state and local governments. It develops and grades the Uniform CPA Examination.

The AICPA maintains offices in New York, Washington, D.C., Durham, N.C., Ewing, N.J., and Lewisville, Texas.

The Value of Estate Planning
Provided By Richard "Ricky" Reynolds, Financial Advisor, UBS Financial Services Inc.

An estate plan is one of the best ways to help assure that, after your death, your assets will be handled as you intended. The estate planning process typically involves working with your financial, tax and legal advisors and may lead to:

- Creating a will, trusts and various other related legal instruments
- Purchasing one or more types of life insurance or investment solutions
- Developing a strategy for making lifetime gifts

In developing a plan, the following should be considered:

1. What will happen to your assets upon your death?
2. How and when do you want your heirs to inherit your assets?
3. Whom will you want to manage your estate?
4. Who will be your executor and your trustee?
5. Who will care for your minor children?
6. What is your anticipated estate tax liability and how do you want to fund that liability?
7. How do you want to manage your retirement accounts?
8. How have you set up the beneficiary designations on your retirement accounts?
9. Are you interested in giving part of your estate to charity?

Identifying Appropriate Strategies
Your Financial Advisor can help you assemble a team of professionals, including legal and tax advisors, to work with you, if you so choose. Together with these advisors, your Financial Advisor may help determine which strategies and investment solutions are most appropriate to address your specific estate planning needs. You and your team of professionals may discuss and analyze issues such as:

- Is it appropriate to purchase life insurance to meet this need?
- If so, what type of insurance and how much?
- Are you healthy enough to qualify for insurance?
- 2. What is the best strategy for you to consider when funding the educational needs of children and grandchildren?
- What kinds of wills and trust instruments are needed to meet your needs?
- What kinds of wealth transfer planning should be considered for making lifetime gifts?
- 3. What is the best way to pursue your charitable objectives?

There are a variety of vehicles and services that can be utilized to implement your estate planning strategies:

Life Insurance
Life insurance can play an integral part in providing for your family after your death. It can be used to address many needs, including:

- Income replacement
- Estate liquidity (to help pay any estate taxes or other liabilities that may be due, either by your estate or your beneficiaries)
- Business succession planning

Personal Trust Services
As part of a comprehensive estate plan, a personal trust can help you preserve your wealth during your lifetime. And, in the event of death or disability, a personal trust usually provides for the ongoing management of your assets. It can also facilitate the transfer of assets to your loved ones or to charity and may help to protect your wealth for several generations.

Consider a "Lifetime Giving" Strategy
You may also want to consider adopting a "lifetime giving" strategy designed to reduce your taxable estate. There are a number of ways in which assets can be "gifted" to loved ones during your lifetime without incurring any federal gift tax.

The Importance of Titling Your Assets Correctly
It's important to make certain that your assets are titled correctly so they pass to your heirs as you intend. You should review all of your beneficiary designations so they are up-to-date and consistent with the provisions outlined in your will. While your will may state your intentions, the ownership and subsequent transfer of your certain assets may be legally dictated by how they are titled.

Adapting Your Current Estate Plan to Tax Law Changes
In June 2001, the Economic Growth and Tax Relief Reconciliation Act of 2001 ("The 2001 Tax Law") was signed into law. The 2001 Tax Law made substantial changes to the transfer tax system (estate, gift and generation-skipping transfer tax), which create many estate planning challenges and opportunities. For example, between 2007 and 2011, the amount of assets exempt from federal estate taxation will fluctuate between $2,000,000 and $3,500,000, with estate and generation-skipping transfer tax rates repeated entirely for the calendar year 2010. In 2011, however, if Congress does not act to make the repeal permanent, the highest estate tax rate may revert back to 55% with a $1 million estate tax exemption.

Some of these changes may dramatically impact a pre-existing estate plan and alter the amounts that pass to different beneficiaries.

Review Your Strategy
Your needs and goals may be very different tomorrow than they are today. That's why it is important to meet with your Financial Advisor at least annually to review and re-examine your strategy and make adjustments when necessary once your estate plan is in place. Your Financial Advisor, in conjunction with your other advisors, can help you to address new needs as they arise. For example, what if:

- You have a birth or death in the family?
- Your choice for executor, trustee or guardian is no longer appropriate?
- You buy or sell property or business?
- Your marital status—or that of any of your designated beneficiaries—changes?
- The estate tax laws change in a way that may impact your situation?
- You change your mind about the charitable organizations and causes you'd like to support?

UBS Financial Services Inc. does not offer tax or legal advice. The information in this article is intended to provide general information about estate planning strategies and is not meant to be all-inclusive or to provide specific advice. You should consult your attorney and tax advisor regarding your personal circumstances before implementing any estate planning strategies.

The Early Days of Your Hometown Newspaper

The first issue of the Citizen was published June 21, 1899, and was "devoted to the interests of the home, student and farm." Records show T.G. Pasco is credited with being the first editor, but other accounts say C. Rexford Raymond was the editor for the first year of the paper's existence, after being directed to plan the newspaper by Berea College President William G. Frost. (Berea College owned the paper's controlling interest until 1984.)

Three thousand copies of the Citizen's first edition were printed for circulation. The subscription list of The Reporter, a predecessor of the Citizen, was purchased for the Citizen's use. The Reporter soon died.

As to physical make-up, the initial Citizen was very different than today's newspaper. It was four pages long, with the front page reserved for advertising, personals and local stories of prominence. One front page ad read "whiskers dyed for 50 cents." The second page contained poetry, a short story and notes on temperance. The remaining pages were used for county correspondence and school notes.

On June 28, 1899, the paper boasted a circulation of 1,000. An ad on the front read "live stock guts furnished." Other writings included a piece on the evils of wine and how "it is not creditable for any young girl to have several young men on a string."

The first printed retraction came on July 19, 1899, and read "By mistake last week, Dr. Robinson instead of Dr. Cornelius was mentioned as inserting an eye for Joe Purvis."

On Sept. 27, 1899, a front page story read "The College has decided to eject the Citizen from the Shop Building, will provide better quarters in the Hanson Building, which the College just purchased."

The first recorded gift to the Citizen workers was Nov. 6, 1900, when Tutor Leeten sold his turkeys and permitted the office staff to take a few feathers home for quilts.

In July 1904, the college purchased its first lot on Richmond Pike and began constructing a home for the editor. Also that year, papers were filed with the Kentucky Secretary of State for creation of Berea Publishing Company to own and operate the Citizen. Shareholders and members of the board were all faculty of Berea College. The largest amount of liability the new company could incur was $200.

The Citizen's first competitor came on Dec. 21, 1904, with the printing of The Berea News, with M.L. Spink as editor. The two papers were friendly rivals, and the Citizen made use of the Berea News' press when its own was on the fritz. On Aug. 13, 1908, it was announced the Berea News would move to London to become the Democratic newspaper there.

A second competitor came in 1930, also called the Berea News. This paper was headed up by H.L. Dahl of Boone Street. The paper was printed in Richmond and only lived to see one birthday.

The Sept. 12, 1906, edition of the Citizen was the first to remove all advertising from the front page, a policy continued with today's Citizen and many newspapers across the nation.

In 1906, the college began work on a new printing plant and Citizen offices, which was actually an addition to the Bruce Building. It opened in July 1907, and was named for David Bruce, a great pioneer in printing.

On April 9, 1908, came the first full-page advertisement. It was from R.H. Chrisman who publicized "buggies, surreys and runabouts." In December of that same year came an apology from the Citizen staff for allowing an article advocating women smoking was accidentally printed with foreign correspondence.

Despite this incident, it wasn't until 1912 that the Citizen stopped using "patent inside," a term meaning inside pages were actually printed by a larger newspaper, then shipped to smaller ones to be inserted.

Average circulation that year had grown to over 2,700, and in June that year the paper purchased a new 1910 edition of Webster's International Dictionary.

An Oct. 16, 1913, advertisement stated "The Citizen is the poor man's college, circus and automobile. Any person who sends us $1 for a new subscription or a renewal may, by adding 25 cents, receive a premium worth $1; there are three premiums to choose from: jack-knife, pair of scissors, and the book "Household Guide."

The Women's Suffrage movement caused difficulties in the community. While Berea College was partially dedicated to educating both sexes, articles printed beginning Feb. 12, 1914, disapproved of the idea that "women might have the intelligence to vote."

Those views continued for several years, some saying women's work was more important than politics, and other warning against handing the ballot box to the "uneducated Negro woman of the South, or the indifferent woman of the North."

By April 1, 1920, the Citizen had changed its tune:

"Let us reconstruct our opinions regarding women, and look for the solution of the world's problems — other quarters than those dominated by the solid women's vote."

There are a lot of reasons why our customers like us so much. Here's two of them.

Deal struck for Berea retirement community

United Church Homes buys 153 acres off Slate Lick

Tanya Stewart
celticfire@windstream.net

BEREA — A greater number of older residents may be able to live out their lives in Berea, says Mayor Steve Connelly, once a senior housing development proposed by United Church Homes becomes a reality.

"It represents a niche where Berea has lacked," says Connelly, referring to a rapidly increasing "boomer" and senior demographic, in need of both medical assistance and independent lives, having to move from Berea to senior-adapted housing in Richmond and Lexington. "There's been a gap in Berea's infrastructure for over 40 years. That gap can be filled by a quality, church-related institution."

This summer, United Church Homes, an Ohio-based non-profit organization affiliated with the United Church of Christ, purchased 153 acres in Slate Lick, directly adjacent to the Berea city limits. The group specializes in building campus-style senior housing, tailored to various levels of lifestyle capability: Independent, assisted, and full-time medical care.

According to its Web site, www.unitedchurchhomes.org, UCH currently houses over 2400 residents in 55 communities, in Ohio, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Mississippi, New York, Tennessee, and West Virginia. The Berea location would be the group's first in Kentucky.

Over the last five or six years, says John Buck, UCH project manager and local liaison, UCH representatives have met with Berea community leaders, "town folks and [Berea] College folks," hosting a "town meeting" last year.

"This purchase is the culmination of a lot of efforts by a lot of people," Buck said.

One of those people is Rev. Kent Gilbert, pastor of Union see DEAL page A3

Practice Makes Perfect

Decontamination exercise keeps emergency crews prepared

BEREA — Big red trucks and bright yellow tents dotted the parking lot of Church on the Rock Aug. 12, but not for any carnival or fun festivity. They were there because that parking lot is one of a few places designated throughout the county as a decontamination site for any hazardous material situation and it was time for a practice run.

Berea, Richmond and Madison County fire departments, Berea and Richmond city police, the sheriff's department, state police and Madison County EMS get together a couple times a year to practice, making sure everyone knows their role in case a real life situation should occur, said Michael Bryant, director for the Chemical Stockpile Emergency Preparedness Program.

"Practice just makes you better prepared and that's better for the citizens," said Carlis Richards, director for Madison County Emergency Management Agency.

Emergency workers from Madison County watch as a portable decontamination tent is inflated during practice exercises this week in Berea.

CSEPP obtained a new set of decon tents and they needed to make sure they new how to set them up and that they had everything to them before they do the full scale graded exercise in October, Richards said.

Madison County has two full sets of decon tents and equipment and could have two decon sites set up if it were needed. The city of Berea, the city of Richmond and the county all have access to the tents and equipment, Bryant said.

No matter where something happens, be it at the Blue Grass Depot, on Interstate 75, somewhere between Berea and Richmond on U.S. 25 or at one of the 19 industries in Madison County with extremely hazardous materials, a unit see PRACTICE page A10

Johnson Elementary School principal leaving for new post

Anna L. Homa

NORTHSIDE — It was confirmed by the Madison County School Board Tuesday that Jim Hamm is leaving his position as Shannon Johnson Elementary principal sometime this year, said Tommy Floyd, superintendent of Madison County Schools.

Hamm has accepted the position of Chief Academic Officer for the Washington County School District. His last day at Shannon Johnson has yet to be determined and he is working with Floyd and others to find a time that is suitable for everyone involved, Floyd said.

"It was a good move and opportunity for him," Floyd said.

They will be meeting with the sight based decision making council, which will do mandatory training to look for a new principal. They will look through the list of qualified applicants and go from there, Floyd said.

Locals learn the ropes through Leadership Madison County

bondgirlee007@yahoo.com

RICHMOND — This past weekend, students from all four high schools in the county participated in the orientation meeting for Youth Leadership Madison County.

The meeting was to introduce the 35 students, 18 from Madison Central, six from Madison Southern, five from Model Laboratory and six from Berea Community, and help them build a trust and learn to communicate with each other, said Vickie Moberly, project director for Youth Leadership Madison County.

Students met at the Eastern Kentucky University challenge course for a day of fun activities that were also team building exercises. Some of the students were a little apprehensive about parts of the obstacle course at first, but as they became more comfortable with the situation, they had no problem putting on the harness and climbing through the course, Moberly said.

"Orientation is a good experience and gives you some insight into each of those individuals," Moberly said. "Seeing what they do in different situations is interesting."

The students learn about taking on leadership roles and how to be an effective leader, but learn how to take on see MADISON page A10

Alcohol leads to 89 fatal crashes so far in '08

Preliminary statistics indicate that 12 people died in eleven separate crashes on Kentucky roadways from Monday, Aug. 4 through Sunday, Aug. 10, 2008. Seven of the fatalities involved motor vehicles and six of those victims were not wearing seat belts. Motor vehicle crashes occurred in Carlisle, Hardin, Harlan, Jefferson, Ohio and Pulaski (2) counties. The crash in Pulaski county was a double-fatality and involved the suspected use of alcohol.

There was an ATV fatality in Clay county and the victim was not wearing a helmet. The suspected use of alcohol was a factor in this crash.

There were three motorcycle fatalities and two of the victims were not wearing helmets. These crashes occurred in Graves, Harlan and McCracken counties and two of the victims were not wearing helmets. There was one pedestrian fatality in Warren county.

Through August 10, preliminary statistics indicate that 461 people have lost their lives on Kentucky roadways during 2008. This is 68 fewer than reported for this time period in 2007. Of the 354 motor vehicle fatalities, 218 victims were not wearing seat belts. Of the 54 motorcycle fatalities, 33 were not wearing helmets. Fourteen people have been killed in ATV crashes and 13 of those were not wearing helmets. Thirty-seven pedestrians have been killed. A total of 89 fatalities have resulted from crashes involving the suspected use of alcohol.

Citizens can contribute to highway safety by reporting erratic drivers to the Kentucky State Police toll-free at 1-800-222-5555. Callers will remain anonymous and should give a description of the vehicle, location, direction of travel and license number if possible.

These statistics are still preliminary as KSP waits for all local law enforcement agencies throughout the state to report any crashes and fatalities.

 Church, who is one of the leaders in what he calls the "third, if not fourth generation attempt" to create intermediate housing for Berea's aging residents.
 "Members of Union Church have been working on this for 20 years," he says, along with other local churches and individuals, including former Berea College President Francis S. Hutchins, who had first made the proposal.

 "There are many people who need [medical] assistance, or who are downsizing," says Gilbert. "They either have to go to a nursing home, or live alone---there's nothing in the middle in Berea. We solicited UCH; they're very highly respected in the industry."
 "It's very exciting to see it begin to bear fruit."
 UCH's next step, in what Buck calls "continued due diligence," is to present building plans to the Berea City Council and the Planning Commission, as well as having public review of the project. The group has already contacted the city for information on utility services, and has picked up an annexation request.

 "We haven't settled on the type of development," says Ken Young, vice president and general counsel for UCH. "We're at the very, very early stages, determining what the market will support. We'll need the community's support and the support of its leaders. We'll make sure that this will work for us and for the community."

 "When you're talking about the economic future of Berea, one part is the senior demographic," says Mayor Connelly. "They're still vital and active. Having post-50 living opportunities is really what it's about. [UCH] is very interested to harmonize with the
 "There's been a positive response by folks in Berea, and we're committed to making this happen," Buck said.

Big boy, boos, ballots and baring

First day of school, the Olympics, copious number of city council candidates, nursing in public and skimpy dresses. Most weeks have me scrambling for a column topic but not so this one. The list is long. The question is where to start.

First things first I suppose. I've been a little weepy this morning. Today is our little Canon's first day of kindergarten. Deb called right after she dropped him off and assured Tex and me that he was fine. The little guy didn't shed tear, that's left to the sappy grown-ups in his life, we're watching him grow up at a pace that seems to us much too fast.

On to the next, The Beijing Olympics, especially the entertainment during the opening ceremony has been amazing to see. There have been a couple of sour spots for me though, 36 years after the Munich Summer Games I'm over Mark Spitz. As a teenager I had a huge crush on him, kept a poster with his good-looking face on my bedroom wall, right beside the one of Bobby Sherman.

The egocentric comments he's making bellyaching about not being personally invited (and I suspect having the trip financed) have shown me his true colors.

Apparently he thinks the Olympic Committee or NBC should have been kissing his ring or something. Spitz told the media, "I never got invited. You don't go to the Olympics just to say, 'I am going to go.' Especially because of who I am. I am going to sit there and watch Michael Phelps break my record anonymously? That's almost demeaning to me. It is not almost - it is."

The other sour note was finding out that the little girl who appeared to be singing China's national anthem at the opening ceremony was lip-syncing to the voice of another girl who was heard, but not seen because she was deemed not cute enough. How very sad.

Moving right along. We've heard rumblings of discontent around here for a while but who'd have thought there'd be enough contenders to conceivably seat a whole new city council next year. With all eight incumbents seeking re-election it's highly unlikely but this is the first time in my memory that it's even a possibility.

I feel fairly certain there are current members who'll still be serving but I wouldn't be shocked to see new faces on the next council. It's going to be interesting.

Finally, this is going to surprise some people who see me as prudish, pedantic and above all a conservative fundamentalist, all of which I freely admit to being on at least some level. People should just get over the breastfeeding in public thing. Nursing mothers are not exhibitionists.

Neither did it appear to me was the young lady who was asked to leave the Richmond Mall because her dress was too short.

I personally wouldn't have breastfed my children with anyone in eyeshot and

I'd prefer that women and girls and men and boys for that matter, dress more modestly. But as my husband reminded me, I had dresses that short back in the day when Mark Spitz was my hero.

Can't we just get back to "normal" here?

Few things in recent years have generated as much talk around town as the recent breast feeding incident at McDonald's. Well, except maybe that whole sunburn fiasco a few weeks back.

I first learned of the incident on the television news and, I must admit, my head dropped when I heard the reporter say "Berea." I fear our image may be altered a little by the things happening here that have wound up on the television news this year. There's been the naked woman at the laundry, that whole sunburn mess, and now this breast feeding incident.

My Accent
Scott Powell,

If there's anything that can be garnered by out-of-towners hearing this news, it's that Berea is not boring, maybe even a little weird—something those of us living here have long known.

At least we're not shooting at each other like in other cities in the region. But I digress.

Kentucky law clearly states a woman cannot be prevented from breast feeding in public. However, the ill-conceived law failed to provide for penalties to those in violation. What's the point?

Many of my friends have chosen to breast feed which, like it or not, is the best option for both mother and baby. I won't go into the benefit here since there are numerous resources out there on the subject. We are one of only a handful of nations on this earth where bottle feeding is considered the norm, and breast feeding is seen as dirty or inappropriate. And none of that started until good infant formulas were developed after World War II.

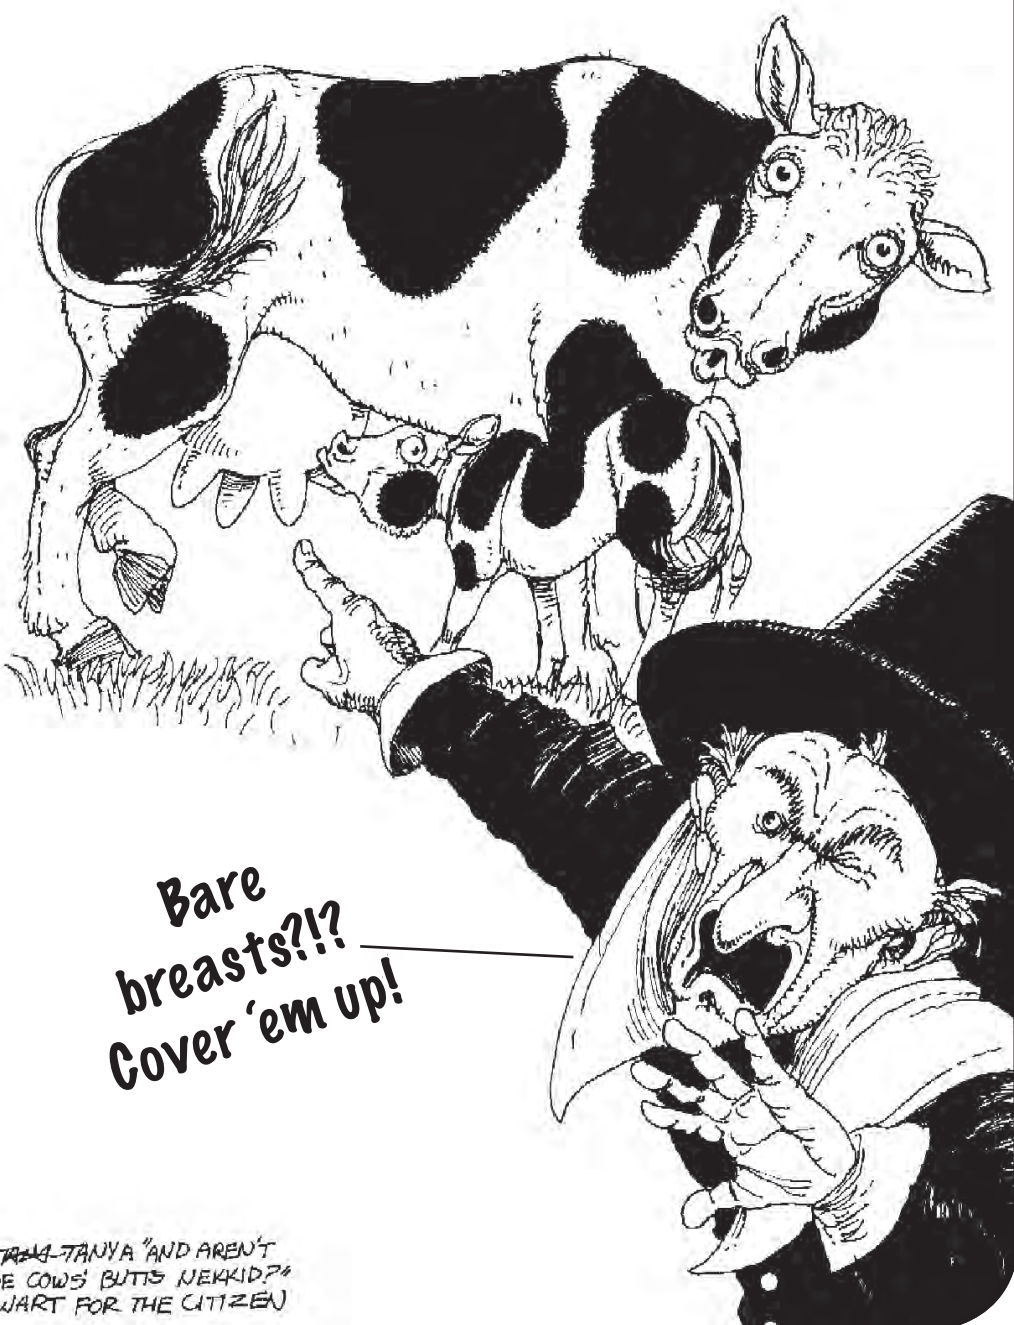

Maybe making breast feeding a "dirty" thing was a ploy by these formula companies to increase sales. Maybe some people don't like it because it reminds them that they are human, humans are animals at the end of the day, and as a result they feel inferior.

One woman I spoke with this week had the nerve to tell me no good Christian woman would ever do "something like that." I just shook my head. I asked her if she had any proof that the nipple Mary fed the Christ child with had Playtex written on it. I didn't get an answer.

I have had many friends who chose to breast feed their children, and I've even seen people do it in public. I've had friends who would only do it at home or in private, I've had friends who would do it in public, but you would never have known, and I've had friends who wouldn't care to flop it out and breast feed in the middle of a hardware store.

The thing is, it's natural. In God's perfect design, there's a reason for everything. There's a reason breasts produce milk, and there's a reason our necks were made to turn 90 degrees... If you don't want to look at something, turn your head. Let's get over this and let things get back to normal so we can just be the town where we press charges over a sunburn and do our laundry in the nude.

Opinions from Our Readers...

Breastfeeding incident a shame...

Dear Sir,
I would never have thought an incident that happened Wednesday in Berea would be possible.

I think of Berea as a folksy and family friendly community. For that manager of McDonald's on Glades Road to not know about a law that pertains to her business is stupid. For her to handle the incident with such uncouth behavior just amazes me. She ought to be ashamed of herself!

What do you say about the response from law enforcement? "I am the law!"

How can we encourage our mothers to take the best care of their babies when they can be treated this way?

Education on breastfeeding needed...

Dear Editor,
I am a breastfeeding mother and the facilitator of Berea Mothers' Forum. In honor of Kentucky Breastfeeding Awareness month, and in response to the recent McDonald's incident, we are exploring ways to better support breastfeeding in Berea. As a first step, we would like to inform readers of why breastfeeding is important and how asking a mother to cover up can impede it.

There is no substitute for the superior nutritional, immunity-boosting, and brain-building benefits human milk offers human babies. For mothers, breastfeeding helps prevent certain cancers, can be a form of birth control, aids weight loss, and releases relaxation-inducing hormones. Breastfeeding also encourages mother-infant bonding and helps prevent child allergies, eczema, and jaw misalignment.

Breastfeeding is most successful when done on demand. Nursing when the baby cues keeps mother and baby in sync, supports adequate milk supply, and teaches baby her needs are valued. Planning nursing around a public outing or having to relocate delays the response to baby's needs, which is why breastfeeding in public is a natural part of breastfeeding at all.

Kentucky law states that no one may interfere with breastfeeding, including asking a mother to cover up. This simple request is obtrusive on many levels.

First, breastfeeding, which involves skin-to-skin contact, produces much heat. Putting a blanket over the breast and baby's face can make the baby uncomfortable or even dangerously hot.

Second, if a mother is using her hands to keep a blanket in place, likely while baby is pushing it away, what hands remain to hold her baby and her breast to ensure good positioning and comfort?

Third, a cover can prevent mother and baby from seeing each other. New mothers, especially, need to see that the baby is properly latched. Eye-to-eye contact during breastfeeding builds trust. See LETTERS page A5 baby's trust and enhances mom's attachment.

Fourth, relaxation is key to breastfeeding. This is true in an immediate, physical sense, as well as on a deeper, psychological level. Fumbling with a blanket can cause tension, which inhibits milk flow. The underlying message in asking a mom to cover up is that what she is doing is unaccepted. Not having support for breastfeeding in her surroundings will make a mother less likely to continue this age-old practice.

The plusses of breastfeeding, too numerous to cover here, extend beyond the nursing pair. Improved infant health means reduced healthcare costs, fewer days of parents' missed work, and less family stress. Because breast milk requires no packaging waste, transportation costs, or use of natural resources beyond mothers' slightly increased food intake, breastfeeding saves families, communities, and governments much money, while alleviating environmental burdens.

Despite so many compelling reasons to breastfeed, Kentucky ranks second to last in country-wide breastfeeding initiation.

As Berea Mothers' Forum investigates how we can improve this statistic, we ask other Bereans to do the same. Berea, where tradition and natural living are much esteemed, is primed for breastfeeding awareness to blossom and spread across the state.

Sincerely,
Rachel Dorroh, on behalf of Berea Mothers' Forum

The search for fabric...

Dear Editor,
I, too, was sorry to learn of Wal-Mart's decision to eliminate their fabric department. We do have a solution here in Berea though....just drive a couple miles to the College Square and visit Donald Graham's Quilt Shop. There you will find a great selection of quality fabrics, books, floss, threads and accessories.

The shop is neat and clean as well as nicely arranged. The walls are covered with beautiful quilts to inspire one to go home and sew!

The clerks are cheerful and helpful. The fabrics may not be $1 and $2 per yard, but when a quilter invests her time in making something, spending a little more to have a quality product is well worth the extra cost.

As Scott said last week....go check out the Quilt Shop....you will be pleasantly surprised!

Wants moratorium on coal power plants...

Dear Editor,
The League of Women Voters of the United States has called for a moratorium on new construction of coal-fired power plants, based on concerns about climate change and other damaging impacts of coal. Local LWV leaders say the national position can help usher in clean energy solutions in Kentucky and around the nation.

"Global warming is happening now," said national League President Mary G. Wilson. "If we wait for federal action from our congressional leaders, it will be too late. We must take immediate and aggressive action to halt climate change," she said.

Elizabeth Crowe,
President of the League of Women Voters of Berea and Madison County said the statement is highly significant for Central Kentucky.

"Central Kentuckians suffer some of the worst air quality in the nation due to pollution from coal-fired power plants and inefficient use of the electricity we get from these facilities," she said. "Dirty air results in poor health, whereas clean energy from renewable sources like solar and wind, plus using electricity more efficiently in the first place, preserve our health and the environment, and can spur economic development as well."

LWV suggests five mechanisms that can ensure we have enough electricity without use of additional coal-fired plants: 1) energy efficiency of lighting, heating and cooling systems, and better insulation and efficient construction of buildings; 2) increased efficiency of current electric generating facilities; 3) decreased losses of electricity in transmission lines; 4) use of excess heat from electricity generation at existing power plants for heating buildings; and 5) use of renewable energy such as solar or wind power.

Kentucky is facing requests for several new coal-fired power plants, including a proposal by East Kentucky Power Cooperative to build a new facility in Clark County.

"League's position on climate change, and now the call for a moratorium on new coal-fired power plants, affords us a great opportunity to pursue

will be able to set up a decon site quickly, Bryant said. On average it takes anywhere from 15 to 20 minutes, once the crews get onto the scene to fully set up the ZUMRO tents, which are air inflated, and get all the hoses and vents connected to them, Bryant said.

The older tents have been used for about five years, but still have just as many years left in them. If taken care of properly, the tents can last up to 10 years or longer, Richards said.

In a real life situation, the scene is a controlled chaos, which is why practicing is so important. Everyone is given a chance to be the lead team, so everyone knows what needs to be done and where everyone needs to be, Richards said.

"There are all kinds of extra people in a crisis situation, it keeps everyone on the same page," Richards said.

For the graded exercise in October, evaluators from the Federal Emergency Management Agency and other agencies will come down to watch as the different departments work together in a mock situation, Bryant said.

They give comments on how it was handled, how the different agencies worked together, things that worked and things that could be improved upon, Bryant said.

"You can always pick up little things that will make you better," Bryant said.

Even though it's a made up situation, everything is handled as if it were the real deal. They even have professional patients to go through the decontamination process. Those patients are given situations to make the experience as real as possible.

Last year one patient could vomit on command, which freaked a few people out because they weren't sure if it was for real or part of the situation, and another guy was given the task of going crazy, jumping into a police cruiser and messing with the lights and sirens, Richards said.

Also last year, the mock situation was done at night and in the rain, Richards said.

"We always try to challenge ourselves and go the next step to get better," Richards said.

Five years ago, we couldn't have done something large scale like this, the different departments weren't used to working together, but now when they get together and start working you can't tell who is from what department, they flow like a team, Bryant said.

Some EMS and EMA people spent time working down south in the aftermath of Hurricanes Katrina and Rita and they saw how situations affected not only the human population but the animal population as well. They began working on other roles as well. They are placed in groups and have to get to know each other, trust and work together quickly. They see you can't be the leader every time and each role is important in its own right, Moberly said.

"The ability to work in a group is an important skill to be an effective communicator," Moberly said. "[The program] is about employing those skills."

The aim of the program, sponsored by the Madison County Business Education Partnership and Leadership Madison County, is to work toward retaining the best and the brightest students in Madison County. It targets the students identified for gifted education services in the four high schools, Moberly said.

Through the program, those students are introduced to organizations and businesses that shape Madison County and gives them the opportunity to work with the adults in those settings, Moberly said.

High school juniors taking part in gifted courses are sent applications and encouraged to apply for the program. Only 30-35 students are selected each year, so they have a selection committee that scores each application in four different areas, Moberly said.

The students answer questions like 'how would you benefit personally from the program' and 'identify three strengths of the community and three areas that need growth.' They then ask the students their ideas on how to address the needs of the community, Moberly said.

"We want them to really feel they are a part of the community," Moberly said.

They usually meet every other month, about four times in the year plus the orientation meeting and other opportunities for group activities and volunteer work. Their meetings focus on different aspects of the community, like the arts and entertainment, health and wellness, new economy and government days, Moberly said.

Many times students have the perception they have to go to larger city to get involved or have opportunities for better employment, Moberly said.

The ultimate goal for the program is to let students know no matter what they want to do, they don't have to leave the community to do it, Moberly said.

"We want to retain their talents here and show them there is a niche for them here, whatever that might be," Moberly said.

A walk-through...

During a hazardous chemical situation, if you have been exposed and need decontamination, this is what will happen.

You will be sent through an arch of water coming from two fire trucks placed side by side. After getting thoroughly drenched, you are taken to the first set of decon tents.

If you are injured or have problems walking you are placed on a board and sent through on a roller table. You are stripped down and sprayed off with more water. Next up are the hoses with soap, where you are required to scrub up thoroughly to get the chemicals off, then on to another rinse to get the soap off.

Upon leaving the first tent, you are given a cloth cover to wear and checked with a chemical detector. The detector checks for the two nerve agents GB and VX and for the mustard/blister agent and can detect small trace amounts within 15 seconds. It checks the hard to catch places like your hair, under your arms or in the wrinkles of your neck. If it goes off, back through you go to rinse, lather and repeat until all chemical traces are gone.

Then on to the second tent for triage, where paramedics are set up to determine your condition and severity. They give you a tag and assign you a number and color code. Green means you are not injured and don't require any medical services. Yellow means you are injured, but it's not severe. Red is for severely injured and black is for a death.

If you are injured EMS will be standing by to transport you to the hospital, but if you are labeled green, some kind of group transportation is there to take you to an alternate care site or a shelter.

with the Humane Society and thinking of the ways to handle people and their pets. Although they still much to do, they have purchased smaller versions of the decon tents as to accommodate an owner and their pet, Richards said.

"We'll never be perfect, but we're getting better every year, every time," Richards said.

Thank you for reading!

Relay Rookie of the Year

Sherwin Williams Automotive Finishes in Richmond was presented a platinum award for being "Top Rookie of the Year" for raising over $10,000 for the American Cancer Society's Madison County Relay for Life on Tuesday, Aug. 12, by Nola Newman, Relay for Life Chairperson. The following members helped to lead the efforts of the 300-plus employee site: Louise Ball, Steve Fritz, Josh Salyer, Harriett Muncie, Kelly Brumfield, LaDonna Hale, Robin Hensley, Stacie Eberle, Sue Teater, James Davis, Teresa Snowden, Vicki Whitaker, Leann Calico, Stacey Linder, Scott Lambert, Barry Hisle and Pam Puckett. Team members worked together diligently on fundraisers of all types to help raise money to find a cure for cancer. The plant and distribution center have several team members that are survivors and several that have lost loved ones to this vicious disease. Their theme says it all: "Cover the earth for a cure and paint a brighter future."

Missionary speaker highlights missions month emphasis at Berea United Methodist

(Submitted to the Citizen)

The Berea United Methodist Church's August missions emphasis will unfold into an August Centennial celebration as the congregation hosts missionary Jim Ramsay on Aug. 17.

Jim Ramsay, who grew up as a part of the Berea United Methodist Church family, is senior director of field ministry for The Mission Society. He is the son of Bill and Rose Ramsay of Berea.

Ramsay joined The Mission Society staff in September 2006 after serving as a missionary with the organization for 10 years. He and his family lived in Kazakhstan and where they worked in a variety of ministries, and where Ramsay served as field leader and Asian regional coordinator. As the director of field ministry, he applies his training and experience to provide oversight to all the missionaries of The Mission Society. Jim's role includes working with missionaries all over the world, providing decision support, accountability, and strategic planning. He makes field visits, organizes regional events, seeks new fields for mission work, and participates in the approval and training of new missionaries.

Jim Ramsay will be speaking at both the 8:30 and 11:00 a.m. worship services, which will be followed by the traditional Centennial potluck meal. Transportation is available: 986-3485.

The Berea United Methodist Church is located on the corner of Chestnut and Fee Streets in Berea. Child care is available at both services; for transportation, please call 986-3485.

Back to Class

Students in both the Madison County and Berea Independent school districts begin class this week, and several local schools held back-to-school events to get students excited about the year ahead. Back-To-School Night at Silver Creek Elementary School was split between two nights because of the overwhelming number of students registering this year. At right, Abby Eipert, who will be starting second grade, "fights" with teacher Garry Gay because of her change in style this year. Gay was making a big deal out of Eipert's new dress. Eipert's mother, Mary, said Abby is usually a tomboy, but this year picked out three dresses while shopping for school clothes. Below, Gay shows Madison McCarty the new two-level reading loft he constructed in the back of his classroom.

Filling out an entry form to win either $40 in reduced lunches, free lunches for one child during the month of September or coupons for $39 worth of adult school lunches is Kyle Thomas Gross and his foster mother Teresa Dillon.

Making their way across the monkey bars are Cooper Ballinger and Landon Kenner, both of whom will be starting third grade at Silver Creek this year.

Eddie Leigh, an incoming first grader, is transformed into a wolf by Rebecca Sowder, a volunteer at the school. For parents who wished to do any volunteer work at the school, such as serving as chaperone on field trips or assisting with classroom activities, a confidentiality training session was held where parents signed paperwork and consented to background checks. Once a parent becomes certified to be a volunteer for the school year, they may volunteer at any Madison County school. They will continue to have confidentiality training for volunteers throughout the school year up until April 2009. While many students met with their new teachers, teacher met with parents and the new year was lined out, a lot of the kids wanted to make the rounds afterwards and talk to their teachers from last year. Outside at the playground, volunteers were on hand to pass out popsicles and do face painting.

Second Friday to feature ECU professor, author Harry Brown

(Submitted to the Citizen)

Eastern Kentucky University professor, Harry Brown, presents this month at the Second Friday program. He will read from his book, "Felt Along the Blood: New and Selected Poems."

"These are poems that delight, instruct and guide," said author and fellow Kentuckian Gwyn Rubio. "Filled with twists and turns, lush with detail, they go beyond the anecdotal, evolving into chiseled gems of truth, lovely yet razor-sharp in their insight."

Brown, who has lived for 25 years on a farm in the Paint Lick area, has taught creative writing and American literature since 1970 at ECU, where he has also co-directed seminars funded by the Kentucky Humanities Council and the National Endowment for the Humanities, directed the Summer Creative Writing Conference, and served as poetry editor for Scripsit and The Chaffin Journal.

His poem "Felt Along the Blood - A Triptych" won Kentucky Poetry Review's Blaine R. Hall Award. Green's Magazine awarded his poem "In Deed and Truth" the Warren Keith Wright Prize, and the Mary Anderson Center for the Arts made Brown the first recipient of the Mary Anderson Senior Fellowship.

Second Friday is a program co-sponsored by the nonprofit organizations WaysMeet Healing Arts Center and the Berea Arts Council. Books will be available for purchase and for Brown to sign.

Locals to attend Governor's Scholars program

(Submitted to the Citizen)

Governor Steve Beachar today announced that 1,076 outstanding high school juniors attended this year's Governor's Scholars Program for five weeks in June and July.

From Berea Community High School are Chelsea Brooke Saylor, Ryan Matthew Smith, Morgan Ashleigh Stone and William Dee West. From Madison Southern High School are Candace Faith Moberly and Kenda Elaine Williams.

"This program is an outstanding educational opportunity for these young people," Gov. Beachar said. By participating, students will have the unique opportunity to exchange ideas and discover different points of view while interacting with other student and learning new disciplines. My congratulations to those young Kentuckians who have been chosen to share in this exciting program."

A statewide selection committee chose the participants for the nationally recognized program from nominations submitted from each Kentucky school district. Selection criteria included academic records and test scores, teacher recommendations, extracurricular activities and essays. The program is free to those who attend.

Scholars spend five weeks on a college campus during the program, which this year was held at Belarmino University in Louisville from June 15 to July 19, at Morehead State University in Morehead from June 21 to July 25, and at Centre College in Danville from June 22 to July 26.

Scholars balance a busy academic schedule in the sciences, mathematics, humanities and the arts with a variety of co-curricular activities and a rich residential life. They participated in community improvement projects, seminars and other activities often initiated by the students themselves.

GEAR UP

Make the transition year a successful one

"Ninth grade can be a make it or break it transition," says Sharon Johnston, Academic Education Program Consultant with the Kentucky Department of Education.

The Southern Regional Education Board reports that four percent of all ninth-graders in Kentucky dropout during their freshman year. Kentucky also has a freshman "bulge" of 113 percent, meaning there are 13 percent more ninth-graders than there were eighth-graders because students were held back.

Johnston says so many students find the transition year difficult because it's like playing a board game where the board might be basically the same but the players, rules and outcome are all different. While the situation around them is shifting, she says, students are going through big physical and emotional changes at different rates. One freshman might look like a sixth-grader and another like a senior. "There's a lot of insecurity that can erupt if this transition is not smooth," she says.

As these changes are happening, students also face choices they didn't have before. They'll have the opportunity to ride in cars with other students, go on dates, attend parties. They might also face a different kind of peer pressure and bullying in the high school halls than they've previously encountered.

In the midst of all of this, parents are likely to be unaware of exactly what their child is experiencing.

"Middle school students are inherently pushing away from parents, which is normal and healthy," Johnston says.

She remembers going through that experience with her own children and learning that more than ever before, she couldn't rely on her children to bring home information from school to keep her informed about school events and academic progress. So Johnston learned to make her own connections with the school so she could stay up-to-date with what was happening.

academically, to visit the school and the teacher for the first time. When Johnston told her daughter she planned to volunteer in her classroom, Johnston heard the typical, "Oh, Mom!" response. No child really wants their parent at school looking over their shoulder. But then Johnston explained to her daughter that when there is a problem at the school, she will already have a better relationship with those involved so it will be much easier to raise her questions and concerns.

When moving to high school, it's not only the social scene with older teens and new classmates from other schools that confounds students. The school and academic rules and routines are also new.

For some, it's their first experience of being responsible for moving from one class to another and arriving on time. They will be assigned homework that the teacher expects to be completed, but the teacher won't always collect it or follow up on it. Overall, the student is expected to take more responsibility for his or her own learning.

"All of those choices and decisions are relatively new for most kids," Johnston says. "I think the key is for them to have a toolbox to go to."

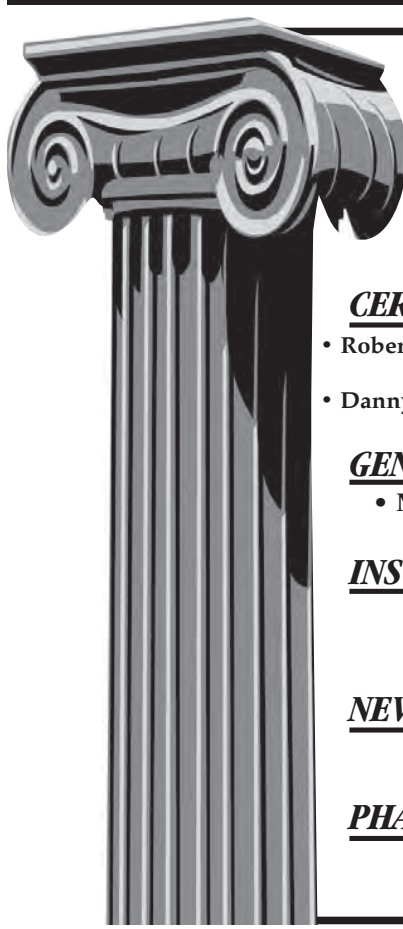

Parents and other caring adults can help students prepare their "tools" by talking about situations that might come up. For example, if someone offers you a cigarette, what will you say? If someone wants you to skip school with them, how will you respond? If another student wants to copy your homework, what will you do? Discussing the situations beforehand helps the students prepare an appropriate response.

Providing that support is important to helping the student succeed during the transition year and moving forward with an eye on graduation. "It can be life changing if the outcome is not a positive one, especially if the student drops out," Johnston says. So prepare now for the transition that might go on for months into the school year and you and your child will be well equipped for all of the new challenges that await.

Lawsuits settled, post office sold in August 1998

The Berea City Council unanimously voted to purchase the former post office building on Chestnut Street for $135,000. At the time, the postal service was finalizing plans for a new facility on Glades Road. Certain covenants were included in the purchase contract, including preservation of the lobby's Depression-era mural. City administrator Randy Stone said new possibilities for the building included a new police headquarters, a museum and moving the courtroom/city council chambers.

Three juveniles were arrested and charged with the theft of several newspaper machines in the city, including those belonging to the Herald-Leader and Wall Street Journal. The youth were caught after they took the machines to a field, broke them open to obtain the coins inside, then spent the money at a nearby Shell Mart.

A lawsuit filed by the families of two victims of a lightning strike in 1996 was settled. U.S. District Judge Karl Forester signed an settlement between Berea College and Audrey Echanique, who was injured when a lightning bolt struck a field during soccer practice. Another student, Haley Herring, was killed in the incident. The Herring lawsuit was settled a week later.

Both lawsuits claimed the college was responsible because it had allowed players on the field during a storm. The college consistently denied responsibility.

A Berea police cruiser was intentionally struck during a traffic stop on Interstate 75. Officer Jason Slone located a vehicle that had been reportedly driving recklessly parked in the emergency lane with a male standing beside. As he left his cruiser to investigate the driver, Sherri Cook of Kingsport, Tenn., put her car in reverse and smashed the cruiser. The man beside the car had been a passenger. Drugs, paraphernalia and weapons were found in the vehicle.

Several Bereans brought home medals from the 1998 Bluegrass State Games: Truman Fields, gold and bronze in tennis; Kris Robinson, bronze in racquetball; Sarah Mills, gold in breaststroke, gold in diving, silver in medley relay, bronze in free relay; Andrew Mills, gold in backstroke, freestyle and diving, silver in breaststroke and free relay; David Vaughn, silver in chess; Kyle Bowman, silver in high jump; Kelley Bowman, gold in high jump, gold in 300-meter hurdles; Carmen Kennedy, gold in vault; Rebecca Bowling, silver in free relay, bronze in medley relay; Fred Elswick, gold in horseshoes; Christopher Lakes, silver in racquetball; Emily Kennedy, gold in beam, bronze in all-around gymnastics; Casey Boggs, bronze in bars, silver in beam, bronze in all-around.

Madison County Schools started without a hitch, but construction delayed the launch of classes at Berea Community School. Construction on the high school pod pushed the school's opening to Aug. 31.

The city received a $300,000 earmark from the state's budget surplus to be used for infrastructure improvements in the Old Town area. The money was put toward a larger project that was already underway. Damage caused by the April 1996 tornado revealed the need to upgrade infrastructure along North Broadway including drainage, sidewalks, lighting and a retaining wall.

The Hillbilly Car Cruisers made a $1,500 donation to Berea's DARE program. At the presentation were DARE Officer Bill Eckler, along with car club members Kenny Whitamore, Harrison Barrett, Pat Barrett, Paul Stewart, J.R. Scenters, Ann Scenters, Thomas Scenters, Lydia Lainhart, Darrell Lainhart and Michael Gadd.

Bobbie Gene Inman, store manager for Berea's Wal-Mart, was pictured presenting the Sam Walton Business Leader Award to Tim Burton, owner of the Berea Dairy Queen. Burton was chosen for the award by the Berea Chamber of Commerce.

Marvin Rose was honored by Nacco Materials Handling Group for 20 years of service to the company.

Mayor Clifford Kerby was pictured cutting the ribbon on what was being called the sweetest business in the city — Chocolate Creations Gifts-N-More. Owner Tina Abner said she took the florists' idea of delivering flowers and turned it into the sweet idea of delivering chocolate and keepsakes instead.

Seven-month-old Skylar Jordan Barger was baptized in an 1892 Christening gown that had been passed down through the family. The handmade Italian lace dress had been worn by at least 20 people in the family.

The annual Music in the Air Festival to benefit Hospice was held at Indian Fort Theater. Music and other forms of entertainment were provided by local churches and nonprofit groups.

The Second Annual Berea Spoonbread Festival was fast approaching, announced chamber of commerce director Mildred Cummins. Planned events included a beauty pageant, contra dances, softball tournaments, a Do-Dah parade, a petting zoo, magic shows, a town-wide yard sale, spoonbread eating contest and hot air balloon race.

Bereans were mourning the death of Mary Gay Walker, director of Berea National Bank. Walker was born in Madison County on Jan. 17, 1913, to John and Nora Burdette Gay. Both families had been pioneers in the Southern Madison County area. Her father, John Gay, was Berea's first mayor and a co-founder of Berea National Bank. Mary had served as a director for the bank since 1960. She had been the first senior vice president for many years.

How an IRA May Potentially Boost Retirement Savings

Provided by, Richard "Ricky" Reynolds, Financial Advisor, UBS Financial Services Inc.

The IRA, a popular retirement savings vehicle, has always given your earnings the benefit of tax-deferred growth. Now, with higher contribution limits due to tax law changes, you can potentially boost your retirement savings even more than in the past.

If you haven't already done so, consider contributing now for 2007 because the sooner you start saving, the sooner your money can start growing tax-deferred. For 2007, you are eligible to contribute up to $4,000, plus an additional $1,000 if you're 50 years of age or older. That's a total of $5,000 for someone age 50 or older.

How Funds Can Add Up

Let's use the example of a 50-year-old investor who makes the maximum contribution to an IRA for 2007, then continues to contribute the maximum in years to come ($6,000 in 2008 and assuming the same maximum thereafter).

The chart illustrates what the investor stands to accumulate, given various timeframes and hypothetical annual rates of return.

10 years	$79,792	$89,190
15 years	$139,613	$165,508
20 years	$217,797	$275,073

At a hypothetical 7.5% annual return, the investor would accumulate $165,508 by age 65. If the investor's spouse makes the same contributions, the couple would accumulate $331,016.

This hypothetical example is provided for illustrative purposes only and is not meant to represent the performance of any specific investment product. Data assumes a 50-year-old making maximum annual January 1 contributions of $5,000 for 2007 and $6,000 for 2008 and thereafter. This illustration does not take charges, commissions, fees or expenses into consideration.

Points to Consider

It is important to note that returns on your IRA investments are not guaranteed and you may even lose principal. Here are a few facts you should know:

- The increased contribution limits offer greater opportunities for tax-deferred growth than were available in the past.
- Earnings on your IRA contributions accumulate on a tax-deferred basis.
- Your IRA contributions may or may not be tax-deductible based on eligibility requirements. Consult your tax advisor.
- Only nondeductible contributions may be withdrawn tax-free. Withdrawals of tax-deductible contributions, as well as all earnings, are taxed as ordinary income.
- A 10% penalty tax is applied to the taxable amount of any withdrawal an individual makes before they reach age 59 1/2, with certain exceptions.
- Required minimum distributions (RMDs) must be taken by individuals over age 70 1/2.

The Value of Consolidation

You may also want to consider consolidating your IRA assets in a single account at one full-service firm. A consolidated account can provide certain benefits:

- Integrated investment strategy—a consolidated account can make it easier for you to determine and monitor a single asset allocation strategy for all your IRA savings and keep that strategy on track.
- Consolidated recordkeeping—by consolidating all your IRA assets in one place, you may be able to limit the account charges that you pay, and you'll have just one easy-to-view source for all of your IRA information. Among other things, this should make determining your RMDs a simpler process.

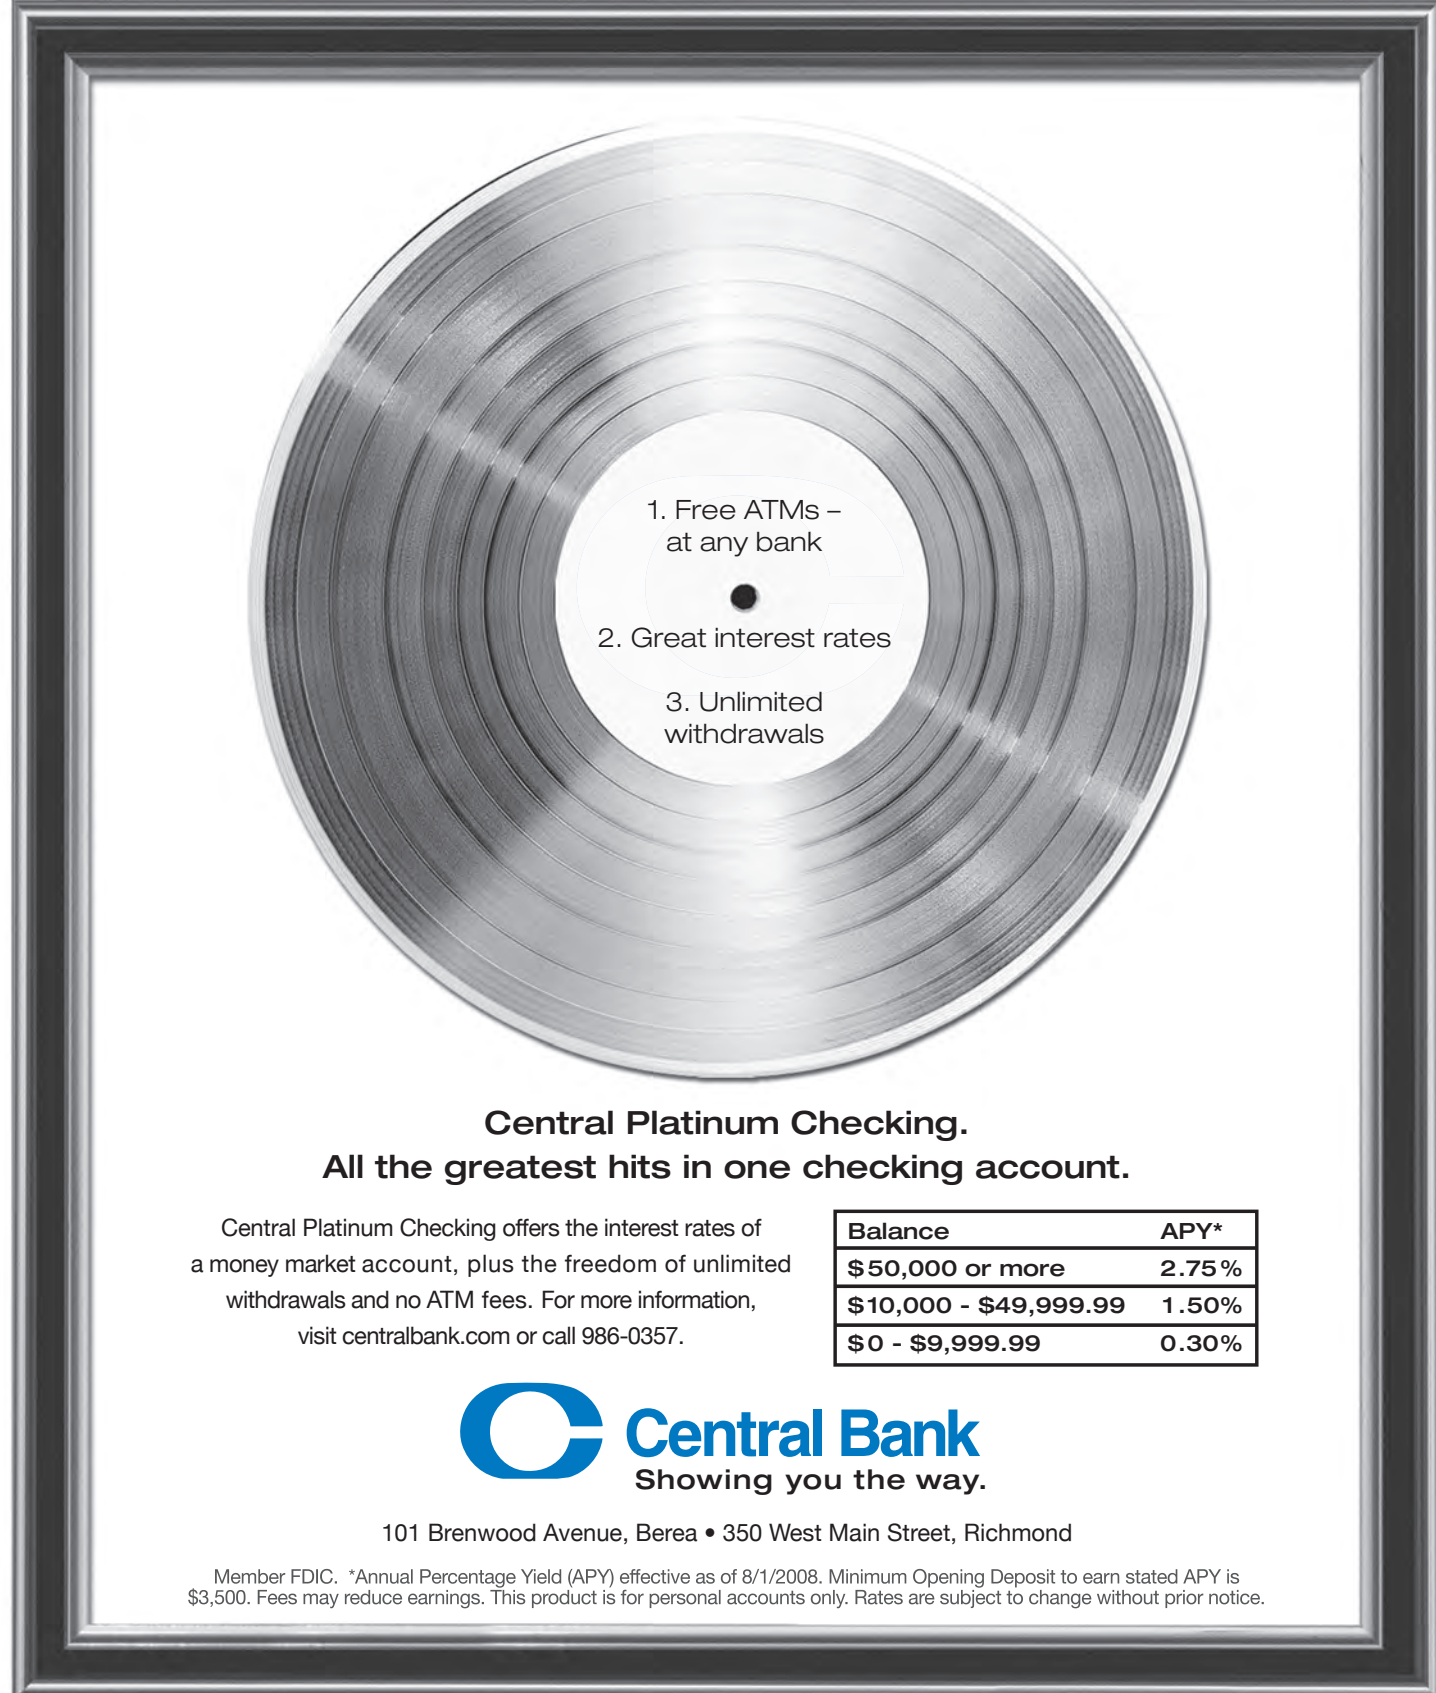

A Financial Advisor can assist you in determining how to invest your IRA assets to help address your investment objectives, taking into account your time horizon, risk tolerance and other circumstances. If you want to take full advantage of increased contribution limits, don't delay. Contact a Financial Advisor today.

Neither UBS Financial Services Inc. nor its employees provide tax or legal advice. You must consult with your legal advisor or tax advisors regarding your personal circumstances. Distributions from tax-deferred accounts are subject to income taxes and, if made prior to age 59-1/2, may be subject to a 10% penalty. ## Lost in the Woods

♦ Fire department sent to find lost couple; safety should always be at forefront when hiking

bondgirlee007@yahoo.com

BEREA — With the end of summer approaching and the weather cooling down a little, more and more people go outdoors to feel the nice breezes, the warm sunshine on their face and to enjoy the beautiful scenery surrounding them.

But for one couple enjoying the trails at Indian Fort Theater, it turned into an unpleasant evening last Wednesday when the sun went down and they lost the trail. The couple left the trail while hiking, but had a cell phone with reception and were able to call for help, said Battalion Chief Roy Curtis, who responded to the call.

The fire department sent out a couple of search groups and started in the general area where they believed the hikers to be. The hikers were found after about an hour and a half of searching and were led back down the mountain, Curtis said.

"They just walked around in a circle until they were found," Curtis said.

The ending to this couple's ordeal in the mountains was positive, with no injuries or mishaps, but that isn't always the case while trekking out into the woods. It's not often the fire department, the go-to people when something happens at Indian Fort Mountain, gets a call about someone lost or injured, Curtis said.

The department receives about three to four calls a year pertaining to someone being lost or see LOST page A12)

Berea resident Kara Countryman and her 18-month-old daughter Tigerlily Simone, wrap up a hike at Indian Fort Mountain this week. Kara always carries a backpack with extra water, snacks, a hat for Lily and sunscreen. She said she enjoys going to Indian Fort Theater because she feels as if she is out in the woods, far from civilization, yet in reality she is just outside of city limits.

Berea holding its own in shaky economy

Scott Powell
teknohillbilly@yahoo.com

MUNICIPAL CENTER — With tourism numbers up slightly and retail in the city growing, it would appear Berea is hanging tough in these rough economic times.

At Tuesday night's city council meeting, tourism director Belle Jackson said more than half-way through the tourist season, numbers are up some over last year.

"Although things are a little tighter now, we've not seen the impact that higher gas prices promised to bring us," Jackson said.

She cited the Berea Craft Festival in July and recent Quilt Extravaganza as examples.

"The July fair was very successful, and gas prices have not affected numbers (of visitors). Numbers at the welcome center are up a bit from last year."

People from 96 Kentucky counties and 17 states registered as visitors to the Quilt Extravaganza.

"That event continues to grow," she said.

On the retail front, city administrator Randy Stone said he had met this week with representatives from Wal-Mart to discuss the Jill-Jane street connector.

see RETAIL page A5)

Charities ask city for help

Scott Powell
teknohillbilly@yahoo.com

MUNICIPAL CENTER — As the economy staggers, charity groups in the city are beginning to struggle. Two such nonprofit organizations approached the city Tuesday for assistance.

On behalf of the Berea Faith Outreach, which oversees such charities as the Berea Food Bank and Bereans United for Utility and Rent Relief (BUURR), Harry Robie presented the city council with that organization's worrisome situation.

"We have $126.20 in the BUURR account heading into the winter season," Robie said, while adding a fundraising program has been initiated, but the group is still troubled by the situation. "We are seeing, for the first time, people with two jobs working 80 hours a week and still can't make it. It's the backlash of the national economy hitting home, and a lot more people will be thrown over the edge this winter."

While he said the group is appreciative of all the help the city has given in recent years, he also presented three ways the city could help with the current situation.

First, he asked the council to hold off on any utility rate increases until the return of warm weather next spring, "if at all."

Second, he suggested a round-up feature be added to Berea Municipal see HELP page A5)

Archery taking hold at local schools

Anna L. Homa
bondgirlee007@yahoo.com

BEREA — When people think of their kids playing on a sports team in school, it's usually basketball, football or soccer. But at Foley Middle School and a few of the elementary schools in the district, this new school year will kick off a new sport for students; archery.

Archery isn't the stereotypical school sport. Students don't have to fit into a certain mold to be involved, there are no limiting factors in a student's ability to shoot and it is not male/female specific, said Doug Carter, Madison Southern archery coach and Madison County coordinator for the National Archery in the Schools Program.

"Size and athleticism don't necessarily make a good archer," Carter said. "It is hand eye coordination, concentration and the ability to work that make you a good archer."

The program has many students involved in shooting that have physical or mental impairments. Students in wheelchairs can shoot and even those that are legally blind have shot with the aid of a spotter, said Cristi Smith, co-coach of the Foley archery team.

In 2002 the archery education see ARCHERY page A6)

Berea ceramist receives 2008 Osolnik Award

BEREA — A universal artist's dream---of being acclaimed in one's lifetime---was realized for one last Friday evening in Louisville, as potter Gwen Heffner was honored with the 2008 Rude Osolnik Award from the Kentucky Museum of Art and Craft and the Kentucky Arts Council.

"When you win this award," said Heffner, "you're in good company..." That select crowd of artistic luminaries includes Sarah Frederick, Wayne Ferguson, Marie Emlen Hochstrasser, Lysbeth Wallace, Tim Glotzbach, Byron Temple, Stephen Rolfe Powell, Joseph Molinaro, Homer Ledford, Arturo Alonzo Sandoval, Emily Wolfson and Alma Lesch.

Heffner

The award, named for nationally known Berea wood turner and teacher Rude Osolnik, recognizes a Kentucky artist each year for their contributions to the field, preservation of craft traditions through teaching and mentoring, lifetime commitment to their craft, professionalism, and outstanding workmanship.

Heffner's wheel-thrown porcelain pieces, with their sinuous, matte-finished organic forms, have spoken with a master craftsman's voice for over 30 years. After being a graphic designer and artist-in-residence for the Kentucky Arts Council, Heffner took the plunge as a full-time potter, with a studio near Irvine from which she created and sold work at American Craft Council shows throughout the country.

In 1992, she opened Contemporary Artifacts, a combination gallery and studio in Berea, which featured her own work and that of 80 other artists. With the promotional and curatorial skills she acquired over 13 years as a gallery owner, Heffner sold the business in 2005 to take her current position as the Kentucky Artisan Center's information specialist and resource coordinator.

"I've always been promoting other people as well as myself," she said. "I really feel that I want to do something beyond myself."

Helping artists "tell their story"---to deepen and promote themselves and their art by being able to articulate why they create, and why they create what they do---Heffner sees as both a mission and a source of inner fulfillment.

She returned to her potter's wheel this year: "For my mental stability." Creating a flat surface see AWARD page A5)

State's unemployment rate takes big jump in July

Kentucky's seasonally adjusted preliminary unemployment rate for July 2008 rose to 6.7 percent from June 2008's revised 6.3 percent, according to the Office of Employment and Training (OET), an agency of the Kentucky Education and Workforce Development Cabinet. July 2007's jobless rate was 5.5 percent.

The U.S. seasonally adjusted jobless rate rose to 5.7 percent from 5.5 percent in June 2008, according to the U.S. Department of Labor.

Unemployment statistics are based on estimates and are compiled to measure trends rather than actually to count people working.

"The Kentucky economy, grappling with the fallout from the housing crisis, tighter credit, and skyrocketing food and energy prices, suffered an increase in its unemployment rate. This reflects the continuing difficulty teenagers and young workers encounter as they search for a job that matches their skills," said Justine Detzel, OET chief labor market analyst.

Six of the 11 major non-farm North American Industry Classification System (NAICS) job sectors reported employment increases in July 2008, while five decreased, according to OET. An increase of 11,300 jobs in July 2008 brought Kentucky's nonfarm employment to a seasonally adjusted total of 1,887,100. Since July 2007, Kentucky's nonfarm employment has climbed by 17,800.

According to the seasonally adjusted employment data, the manufacturing sector gained 4,200 jobs in July 2008. Compared to July 2007, jobs in the sector were down by 4,200 in July 2008.

"The manufacturing sector rebounded in July from a 4,200 job loss in June. This marks the third time this year manufacturing employment has risen. We've seen a lot of fluctuation in the manufacturing sector this year. The durable goods subsector accounted for the job gains in July. This employment increase reflects employees at a major manufacturer returning to work after a lay-off and expansions at two different manufacturers," Detzel said.

"Since the start of 2008, manufacturing employment has increased by 1,400 professionals. The durable goods subsector added 1,300 positions, while the nondurable goods subsector gained 100 jobs."

The government sector, which includes public education, public administration agencies, and state-owned hospitals, added 4,100 positions in July 2008. Since July 2007, this sector has risen by 11,700 jobs.

Kentucky's leisure and hospitality sector reported an employment gain of 2,400 jobs in July 2008. Since July 2007, employment in the sector has increased by 3,600 positions. The leisure and hospitality sector includes arts, entertainment and recreation, accommodations, and food services and drinking places industries.

"Accommodation and food services enterprises accounted for the lion's share of the employment gains in the leisure and hospitality sector in July 2008, reflecting the opening of two eateries," Detzel said.

529 Plans: An Education Funding Option

Provided by: Richard "Ricky" Reynolds, Financial Advisor, UBS Financial Services Inc.

College costs have risen faster than the rate of inflation. The cost of a four-year college education in 2024 is expected to climb to $160,000 for a public institution and $345,000 for a private university. Given these figures, it may be prudent to start saving as early as possible for higher education costs.

There are several options for education funding, but for the purposes of this article, we will only discuss one of those options — 529 Plans.

529 Plans

Named for section 529 of the U.S. Internal Revenue Code, 529 Plans are state sponsored, tax-advantaged investment programs that allow donors (parents, grandparents, other relatives and friends) to save for higher education costs for a named beneficiary. The Pension Protection Plan of 2006 makes permanent the federal tax exclusion for withdrawals from 529 Plans. If those withdrawals are used for qualified higher education expenses. Remember, however, that tax laws are subject to change at any time. These and other tax implications of a 529 Plan should be discussed with your legal and/or tax advisors.

It is also important to note that the tax implications, as well as the investment choices of 529 Plans may vary significantly from state to state. You should carefully consider these factors before establishing and contributing to a 529 Plan. 529 Plans are sold via Plan Description Documents, which contain detailed information regarding the Plan, risks, charges and tax treatment. You should read the Plan Description carefully before investing.

There are two types of 529 Plans: 529 College Savings Plans and 529 Prepaid Tuition Plans.

529 College Savings Plans Features

- Federal tax advantages—529 College Savings Plans are funded with after-tax contributions that have the opportunity to grow tax-deferred. Distributions are received free from federal taxes if used for qualified higher education expenses. Otherwise, the distribution of earnings will be subject to a federal tax penalty and treated as ordinary income for tax purposes.
- State tax considerations—Since 529 College Savings Plans are state-sponsored, some may provide state income tax advantages for the residents or taxpayers of that state. These benefits may include tax deductions for contributions to the plan and/or exemptions from state tax for qualified higher education distributions. Please consult with a tax advisor regarding the state tax implications of the specific plan.
- Almost anyone can establish a 529 College Savings Plan—Parents, grandparents, siblings, uncles, aunts, friends or colleagues can establish 529 College Savings Plans for the benefit of others or themselves. There are no income limitations or age restrictions regarding who can open an account. In addition to accepting all in-state investors, most 529 College Savings plans accept out-of-state investors as well. Please note that funds must be used for qualified higher education expenses or they may be subject to a penalty and treated as ordinary income for tax purposes.
- Substantial contributions allowed—Annual contribution amounts vary by state, though a donor may contribute up to $60,000 per beneficiary in the first year of a five-year period ($120,000 for married couples filing jointly).
- Designate—and change—account beneficiaries—A donor can set up a 529 College Savings Plan for just about anyone and maintain control of the funds, allowing for a change of the beneficiary. The new beneficiary, however, must be a close family relative of the original beneficiary, otherwise there may be adverse tax consequences. Beneficiary changes may be limited to one per year.
- Choice of investment options—Select from among several investment options offered by the state's plan, which may include portfolios consisting of a variety of mutual funds. Changes in investments, while permitted, are generally limited to one per year.
- Flexible rollovers—One tax-free transfer or rollover of benefits from one 529 College Savings Plan to another for the same beneficiary may be allowed during a 12-month period. The rollover must be completed within 60 days of the withdrawal.

529 Prepaid Tuition Plans

A state's 529 Prepaid Tuition Plan generally allows donors to fund future education expenses—tuition and, in some instances, room and board—at specific in-state (typically public) colleges at current rates, which provides protection against rising higher education costs. Some plans provide additional benefits for state residents, and funding options range from one-time lump-sum contributions to monthly installment payments.

Talk to Your Financial Advisor

Your Financial Advisor should be able to provide you with more information about 529 Plans, as well as other education funding options, and help you evaluate the choices from the perspective of your overall investment goals, risk tolerance and time horizon.

Get Ready for the 12th Annual Spoonbread Festival 5K Run & 1 Mile Run/Walk
Saturday - September 20th, 2008
For More Details, visit: SpoonbreadFestival.com

If you can run for 20 minutes, you can finish a 3.1-mile race. Use this simple plan to get ready.

Training Notes

Three Days: This is your weekly minimum and your maximum if you want it to be. This provides the consistency necessary to get and stay in running and racing shape.

Week 1:
Tuesday - 15 minutes
Thursday - 17 minutes
Weekend - Long run 2.5 miles

Week 2:
Tuesday - 17 minutes
Thursday - 20 minutes
Weekend - Long run 3 miles

Week 3:
Tuesday - 20 minutes
Thursday - 20 minutes
Weekend - Long run 3.5 miles

Week 4:
Tuesday - 20 minutes
Thursday - 20 minutes
Weekend - Long Run 5-K race

The Long Run: Measure this endurance-building workout by miles to ensure that you are covering the distance. The week before the race, run longer than race distance to get use to fatigue, and give yourself a psychological boost - knowing you can finish the race can help ease the jitters.

Pace: Do your midweek runs at your usual speed. Slow your pace by 45 seconds to two minutes per mile for the long run. New runners should run one minute, then walk one minute for their entire long run.

Race-Day Strategy
Leave Early: Plan to get to the race site 45 minutes prior to the start. Leave your house 30 minutes earlier than you think you need to. This helps ease anxiety and you'll have plenty of time to get your number, go to the rest room, and get to the starting line, even if you make a wrong turn.

Speak Up: At the starting line, tell others that this is your first race. Most will respond with stories of their first race and encourage you on yours.

Run Slowly: Do the first two miles at the speed of your long runs; if you run/walk, use your usual ration. Pick up the pace a little for the final mile if you feel good. You may be able to run the race faster, but resist. A slower pace helps you finish strong, which increases the chance that you will race again.

Forget about being last: Odds are there will be runners behind you. However, being last has its advantages; the final finisher often receives the loudest applause.*

Ve ah with Vindstream

Windstream is getting on my last nerve. For days we've had sporadic if any Internet service. I can't tell you how many times we've been right in the middle of sending a page to the press or downloading information from an advertiser when it just freezes up. It may be a few minutes or it may take an hour or two before we can reconnect only to have to start the whole process again. It is so frustrating.

As if that weren't bad enough trying to get help by calling our phone company on the phone is next to impossible. There are at least a dozen help numbers in the Windstream phone book but don't be fooled by that. They make it look as if they're accessible but believe me I have not found that to be the case. Of course they also have a sizeable yellow block ad directing you to their website for information, fat lot a good that does if you can't get a connection.

The local office simply cannot be reached at all by phone, well unless maybe I could befriend the person who mans the office and get her/his cell phone number. It makes me wonder why they bother to have a local office at all. Maybe it's a payment station.

Anyway, after spending what seemed like an eternity pressing enough prompts to make even the most determined irate customer give up, I actually found a way to get to a real live person.

My new friend Paul (at first I thought he said Pull but after asking in my best Kentucky twang, "What did you say your name is?" I'm pretty sure his name is Paul) tried to help. His solution was to check and see if the modem light was on. It's on. When I demand to know when the problem will be corrected he suggests I wait five to twenty-four hours because there is work going on in the area and if we're still having a problem call back. All the while I'm having a really hard time understanding him so before we hang up I ask Pull, I mean Paul, "Where are you located?"

He says, "Ve ah with Vindstream."

Me, "I understand that, but where are you personally located?"

"Ve ah in India." says Pull.

I give up.

It's now twenty-four hours later and we're still having the same problems but I'm not calling India anymore. And I have no doubt I'll still get a bill at the end of the

Scenter Stage
Teresa Scenters,
Publisher

month and they'll charge us full price even though we've had little to no service for days.

That's the reason I changed my provider at home several months ago to Southeast Telephone. So far I haven't had any problems and if I do at least I know I can go down to Boone Square and actually talk to Mike or Mary Gevedon about it. Or better yet I can call them on the phone.

Some changes for the upcoming election

Election time is here. Now that we know who the candidates for city council are, the talk around town has begun.

In the 11 years I've been in journalism in Madison County, this is the most talked about council election I can remember.

With that in mind, and considering the pivotal point in growth Berea has reached, we have decided to alter our letters to the editor policy for this election to see how things work.

My Accent
Scott Powell,
Editor

I'm not really sure why, but for years our policy has prevented letters to the editor endorsing political candidates. Now I get to change that a little.

For the city council election, we will allow letters endorsing candidates in that race only — not state a local races. Of course, the other rules governing letters still apply...

- letters may not be over 300 words.
- letters may not contain libelous materials.
- letters will be printed in the order they are received as space permits.
- all letters must be signed and include a full mailing address and telephone numbers.
- illegible letters and those not meeting the guidelines are thrown away after a period of time and will not be returned to the author.

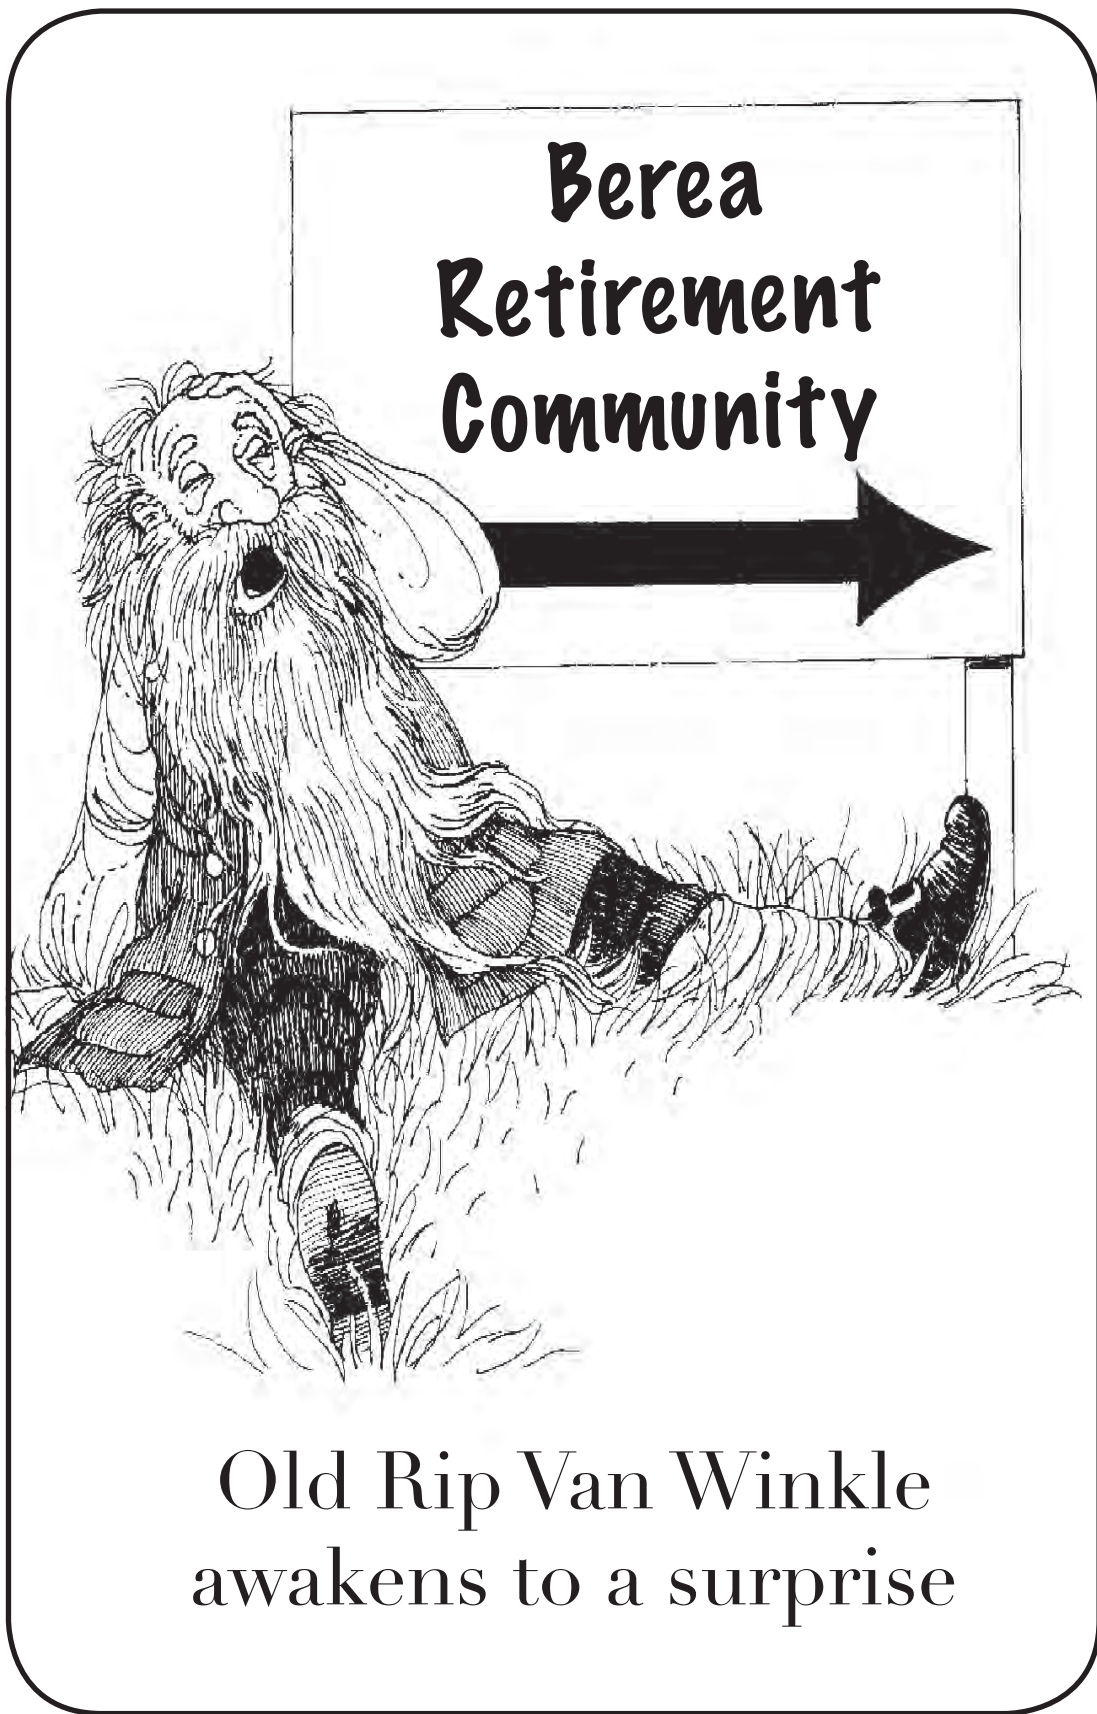

Also, since we're on the subject, I thought I would give one last reminder about our candidate questionnaire. While several people have already sent in questions to be included (some of which are very strange) I want to remind everyone the last day to submit a question will be next Friday (Aug. 29).

Our election special with the candidates' answers will be published with the Thursday, Oct. 30 edition. It's very popular, and the paper will probably sell out that week. (It does most weeks, so I don't know why I pointed that out.)

Over the past week, several people have asked me for my prediction on the election. I have, in turn, asked them the same. While I'm not allowed to make any comments that could be construed as a candidate endorsement, the talk I'm hearing is there will be at least one incumbent go home, perhaps two. As far as who those incumbents are, three names have been mentioned in each instance.

As far as the challengers go, one's candidacy has taken off like wildfire, and I'd be willing to bet he is a shoe-in. There are a couple of other challengers whose names are also being mentioned quite a bit.

Regardless of who you are for or against, this race will be very interesting.

Opinions from Our Readers...

Breastfeeding incident immoral

Dear Editor,

Once again we have compromised on what is right and wrong. The recent McDonalds situation has shown us that some will do things that, even though natural, are things that are to be done in private and in a descent and respectable manner.

While it may be legal, that doesn't mean it is the moral and descent thing to do.

While it may be normal to feed a baby naturally, it is NOT something that one should do openly in a public area. A descent and respectable woman is not going to openly show a private part of her body in a public place, it just isn't the right thing to do.

One may say that it is a natural thing to do but so are many other things but they are NOT things that one wants to see and hear.

We are once again compromising away morality. It seems that many are trying to make many things into gray areas when in fact, they are black and white, right and wrong. Many have completely skipped the fact that many things are immoral and went straight to amoral, a very scary thing.

Many now have the idea of if it feels good, do it.

How sad. Parents and adults that are supposed to be role models have failed our children. Is it any wonder we hear of the terrible things that our young people are doing these days?

Is it any wonder that kids dress and act as they do?

Is it any wonder that our nation is in the shape it is?

Yes, we have compromised our way to amorality.

Are we proud yet?

Sincerely,
John McCollum

Utilities bills which would allow customers to round their bills up to the nearest dollar, with the difference going to BUURR. A special solicitation for donations was requested to be included in some bills.

Last, he encouraged the city to pursue policies that would allow for greater conservation of utilities, including a program to weatherize low-income homes.

In a work session before the regular meeting, Cora Withrow of Berea Health Ministries asked the city for $10,000 toward the operating costs of the organization. She said the facility, which treats patients' health concerns regardless of their ability to pay, the number of patients it sees double in the past year. The health ministry has an annual budget of around $245,000, Withrow said.

Audit and finance committee chair Glenn Jennings said the city will take the requests into consideration. Earmarks were removed from this year's budget as the city tightened its finances ahead of last year's tax increases, but Jennings said the council would consider what could be done, perhaps through a budget amendment.

on a piece, she has been experimenting with carving into the dry clay, thus, with her more limited time, not having to complete a work in one sitting.

"It was a wonderful honor to be linked with [Rude Osolnik] in this way," said Gwen Heffner of her recognition. "Just being a part of that legacy makes it worthwhile."

She grins a little more broadly. "It's nice that it's come back to Berea."

Rude Osolnik is considered to be one of the fathers of modern woodturning. He passed away at his home in Berea on Nov. 18, 2001.

Stone said Wal-Mart is more than willing to contribute the right-of-way for the new road, and the city is looking for a $100,000 contribution for the project from the store.

He said officials with Wal-Mart said that funding is not in their current budget, but since time is becoming an issue for the project, the city could front the money and be repaid by Wal-Mart later.

Stone said the city has until October to accept the bid for the project since bids are only good for 90 days. Also, a permit to work on a retention pond on the project site runs out in January.

Major renovations to the Berea Wal-Mart begin Monday, said economic development director Tom McCay.

The new Walgreen's store at Richmond and Glades roads is set to open Nov. 1, according to information sent to the Citizen by the store. A grand opening will take place later that month.

And if you were trying to watch Tuesday's meeting on television and could not (which has pretty well become the status quo), help is on the way.

The city accepted a $22,264 bid from Commonwealth Communications for a complete overhaul of the courtroom's audio-visual system, which comes with a maintenance contract.

City officials did say some of the problems with the broadcasts are with Time Warner Cable.

program was started in Kentucky, through a branch of the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife, using the physical education classes in fourth through 12 grades to teach students the basics of archery and introduce them to the sport, according to the NASP Web site.

Many of the schools in the Madison County School District have been participating in the program for a couple of years. Madison Southern and Madison Central High Schools first embraced the program three years ago, Carter said.

Foley Middle School began looking at the program because of all the new incoming students that were involved with the program in elementary school, Smith said.

Even though Foley and Madison Southern have yet to have their first practice, both coaches anticipate more than 50 students to show up for practice. So many students are expected to want to join; they each may have to put a cap on the number of team members, both coaches said.

What started as a pilot program in 100 schools in the state has evolved to include 800 schools in the state, with a program in all 50 states and four different countries. Last year saw more than 1700 students participate in the state championship and the national meet had more than 3000 archers, Carter said.

The archery team is definitely in high demand, with students asking about it on a daily basis and parents stopping Smith at Wal-Mart or sending e-mails asking about the program, she said.

"It's very popular, we expect it to just explode," Smith said.

With the inception of the program at Foley, all three middle schools in the district are now participating in the program.

Both Shannon Johnson and Glenn Marshall elementary schools are involved in the program and Kirksville, Kit Carson, Silver Creek and Mayfield elementary schools are looking into starting the program, said Madison County Schools Superintendent Tommy Floyd.

One of the big successes of the program is its ability to pull students into team activities that had never been on a team before. It hits a different population than the average sports player.

NOTICE

On July 29, 2008, Kentucky Utilities Company ("KU") filed an Application with the Public Service Commission seeking approval to adjust its electric and gas rates effective September 1, 2008. Public Notice of this filing was published in all of KU's service territory. KU's proposed revisions to its Customer Deposits, however, were not included in the published Notice.

Please take notice that with this filing, KU is proposing to increase its required Customer Deposits from the current amount of $115.00 for residential customers to $150.00 (30.43% increase) when applicable. Currently, all non-residential customers are required to pay a deposit based upon actual usage for the most recent 12-month period, if such information is available. If usage information is not available, the deposit is based on the average bills of similar customers and premises, not to exceed 2/12 of the customer's actual or estimated annual bill. KU is proposing a fixed Customer Deposit amount for its General Service customers in the amount of $140.00, with the Customer Deposit for all other non-residential customers being not more than 2/12 of the customer's actual or estimated annual bill.

The Customer Deposits contained in this notice are the Customer Deposits proposed by Kentucky Utilities Company; however, the Public Service Commission may order Customer Deposits to be used that differ from these proposed Customer Deposits. Such action may result in Customer Deposits for customers other than the Customer Deposits contained in this notice.

Notice is further given that any corporation, association, body politic or person with a substantial interest in the matter may request leave to intervene by motion within thirty (30) days after notice of the proposed rate changes is given. The motion shall be submitted to the Public Service Commission, 211 Sower Boulevard, P. O. Box 615, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601, and shall set forth the grounds for the request, including the status and interest of the party. Intervention may be granted beyond the thirty (30) day period for good cause shown. Any person who has been granted intervention may obtain copies of the application and any other filings made by the utility by contacting Lonnie E. Bellar, Vice President – State Regulation and Rates, Kentucky Utilities Company, c/o E.ON U.S. LLC, 220 West Main Street, Louisville, Kentucky, 502-627-4830.

(Lost)

injured at the mountain. In his 24 years with the fire department, Curtis said he has responded to only a few calls of people falling over the cliffs and breaking a bone, he said.

"A lot of people like to get too close to the edge of the cliffs," Curtis said.

For those who are planning on hiking into the mountain at the theater, the number one thing to do is tell someone where you are going and when you should expect to return. That way, if you don't return, someone can notify us that something is wrong, Curtis said.

If you don't want to let someone know where you'll be going, leave a note on the dashboard of your car while in the parking lot; include your name, the date, the time you left and where you will be hiking. Again, should something happen while on the mountain, people will know where you were supposed to be, Curtis said.

Every time you go hiking, carry a pack of supplies, no matter how long the hike is supposed to take. The pack should include items that could help should you get lost or in trouble; like a map, compass or GPS device, water and snacks, a first aid kit, a rain suit or poncho (which could be used as a makeshift shelter), a flashlight and cell phone, Curtis said.

Dressing appropriately for the weather is especially important, as well as checking the weather report before you leave, Curtis said. Make sure you have proper footwear, like trail shoes, trial hikers or hiking boots.

For warm weather wear quick drying undergarments, lightweight pants and T-shirt (not cotton), a lightweight wind-blocking jacket, bandanna, and a hat with a visor. Carry extra underwear, a T-shirt and fleece in your pack, according to www.americanhiking.org.

For cold weather, wear natural or synthetic long underwear (not cotton), quick-drying pants and long sleeve shirt, a wool sweater or fleece jacket, fleece pants, a heavy-duty insulating layer, waterproof gloves or mittens, waterproof wool or fleece hat with extra underwear, gloves and shirt in your pack, according to the Web site.

If, while hiking, you become lost or lose the trail don't continue forward. Try backtracking the way you came until you find the trail again, according to the Web site. If a rescue is on the way, staying in one place is better than wandering around the mountain, especially in the dark, Curtis said.

If someone is injured while hiking, the rescue squad has, what they call a stokes basket, which can be made of wire or fiberglass and immobilizes the injured hiker to get them safely off the mountain, Curtis said.

"But it takes a lot of manpower to get them off the mountain," Curtis said.

Another issue hikers could run into, putting them in danger, is dealing with the wildlife of the area. Snakes and bees seem to be the worst of the wildlife a hiker would run into at Indian Fort Theater, Curtis said.

If you are allergic to bees, make sure you have an epinephrine pin with you in case one stings, Curtis said. Avoid wearing scented cosmetics, perfumes, hair sprays, shampoos or soaps, which will attract insects and use insect repellent frequently, according to the Web site.

"If you make noise while walking it will frighten most snakes off the trail,"

Curtis said.

Should you get bitten by a snake, get medical attention as quickly as possible. Elevate the area and call for help if you can, if not just make it down the mountain as quickly as possible and get to a hospital. Don't cut open the wound, try to suck out the poison or put a tourniquet on it, said Jason Beagle, a fire fighter for three years.

And last, but not least, always hike with a partner. Don't go up the mountain by yourself and if you should become lost or injured, don't panic, Beagle said.

If it's a hiking partner panicking, try to calm him or her down by talking calmly and get him or her talking about something other than what is going on, Beagle said.

"Think smart, anything is possible and anything can happen," Beagle said. "The most important thing is to be safe and always be aware of your surroundings."

300 re-enactors, Abraham Lincoln scheduled for re-enactment weekend

(Submitted to the Citizen)

Three-hundred re-enactors, a multitude of historic living history events and appearances by the 16th president of the United States are scheduled for the Seventh Annual Battle of Richmond Re-enactment weekend Aug. 23-24.

The Saturday-Sunday Civil War event will include presentations on a typical military encampment, period medicine, re-enactor games of skill and U.S. President and Mrs. Abraham Lincoln. In addition, the Rose Barn Theater will feature an original presentation about the Battle of Richmond. "The Dust of Summer," written by Rose Barn actor-director Rusty Rechenbach, will be presented on four occasions.

Books and prints on the battle will be signed by authors Dr. Kenneth Hafendorfer (The Battle of Richmond, Kentucky), Ed Ford (The Draw), Jim Hoffman (Richmond Battle Scene) and Stephen Bates (Churchill's Draw).

Opening ceremonies will be conducted Friday morning (Aug. 22) at Battlefield Park.

Plenty of re-enactors, horses and artillery are anticipated for the battle re-enactments scheduled each day at 2 p.m. The re-enactments will re-create phases of the 1862 conflict in segments of approximately 45 minutes each. A different phase will be featured each day.

Union and Confederate camps, music of the era, flags of the period and a Civil War storyteller also will be featured. Military demonstrations and a variety of other living history events also are scheduled.

An annual Civil War tea will be conducted for lady re-enactors at the Pleasant View Estate Saturday morning at Battlefield Park, and Mt. Zion Christian Church again will conduct its authentic Civil War Church Service on Sunday. The 10:30 a.m. service will feature Louisville's Larry Elliott portraying Abraham Lincoln. Elliott will deliver the morning message and will be accompanied by his wife, Mary, who portrays Mary Todd Lincoln. The Elliotts also are scheduled for weekend presentations at Battlefield Park.

Sutlers, merchants and food vendors will be available both days of re-enactment weekend with all events and activities open to the public from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. All re-enactment and living history activities are free-of-charge.

Battlefield Park is located on Battlefield Memorial Highway (U.S. 421) just north of Kingston.

The Battle of Richmond, fought Aug. 29-30, 1862, was the second largest Civil War battle in Kentucky and was one of the most decisive and complete Confederate victories of the entire war. For more about the battle and the weekend schedule of events, see www.battleofrichmond.org or call (859) 248-1974.

TOURISM COMMISSION NOTES

National woodworking conference coming to Berea in November

(Tanya Stewart
celticfire@windstream.net)

Come the middle of November, the air will be filled with the fragrance of freshly sawn wood—and the racket of 500 woodworkers sawing, hammering, and generally immersing themselves in their craft, when the 2008 Woodworking In America Conference comes to Berea Nov. 14-16.

Sponsored by the national periodicals Popular Woodworking and Woodworking Magazine, the conference—which is already sold out, with a waiting list—will take place at Berea College. Its focus is on "Hand Tools and Techniques," featuring 22 nationally-known woodworkers and tool-makers teaching 44 classes on topics such as "Chair Design," "Modern Tools: Tolerances and Myths," "Vintage Tools: Their Advantages, Disadvantages, and Value," "Hand Joinery," "Understand Japanese Joinery," "Furniture Design," and much more.

Former Berea woodworker Brian Boggs is one of the instructors, and Osolnik Machinery and Supplies will be an exhibitor. In addition, Roy Underhill, host of the PBS show "Woodwright's Shop," will be taping a segment at the Paint Lick studio of another er Berea woodworker, Don Weber.

In other Tourism Commission news:

Gwen Childs, Mimi La Porte, and Kathy West from the Quilt Extravaganza committee reported that attendance was up from last year for the event, with both visitors and QE volunteers coming largely from Berea. Local businesses and restaurants also announced an increase in sales over that weekend. La Porte added that the visitors who could not attend the event on the first weekend in August came later to see the Arts Council's "Quilts With a Kick" exhibit and the window displays. The committee attributed advertising and eye-catching street signs for the larger crowds.

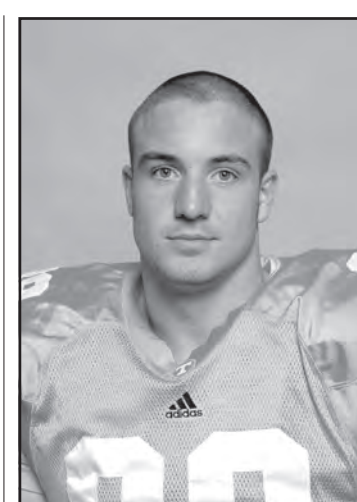

Incorporated into the reprint of the Berea Travel Guide in October will be a redesigned map, with streets and shops more clearly delineated, after local businesses expressed concern that the present map was unclear.

The billboard near the Kentucky-Tennessee border will be raised 5 feet vertically; the grass and shrubbery has grown too high around it.

Ambassador hospital-ity training will begin Sept. 11; among the participants are 10 people from Berea College and two Berea Police Department officers.

People visiting the new Berea Web site are staying on the site an average of four minutes, longer than usual, according to tracking studies. From the home page, the web surfers, most of who are in state, proceed to the shopping page, then to accommodations.

Luke Stocker

Berea native playing football for Tennessee

Luke Stocker, a sophomore at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville, is beginning his second year on the school's legendary football team.

A graduate of Madison Southern High School, Stocker is a 6-foot-6, 245-pound tight end for the team.

Stocker caught his first collegiate touchdown pass last year on 3-yard reception at Alabama. He shared 2008 Harvey Robinson Award with Ahmad Paige as most improved offensive players during Vols' spring practice.

He has appeared in all 14 games of his college career as part of Vols' deep tight-end playing rotation. He made a single pass reception against Arkansas State, then followed that with catches in consecutive games against Alabama, South Carolina and Louisiana-Lafayette.

His first career touchdown came against the Crimson Tide.

EKU launches new ride-sharing system

(Submitted to the Citizen)

A new ride-sharing system at Eastern Kentucky University will help students, staff, and faculty reduce travel costs while preserving the environment.

EKU Rides (www.rides.eku.edu), a social carpooling system powered by Zimride Inc., enables members of the University community to safely and efficiently join existing rides or add rides of their own. Riders can create a social profile on EKU Rides to leverage Zimride Inc.'s existing Facebook social ride infrastructure to find potential ride partners. EKU riders with Facebook accounts will have the added advantage of being able to let their Facebook friends know about their rides.

Members of the University community can access EKU Rides either from the institution's home page (www.eku.edu) and various other Eastern web pages or by selecting the EKU Rides carpool application after logging into Facebook.

Several University offices and organizations joined efforts to make EKU Rides a reality: The President's Office, Staff Council, Student Affairs, Enrollment Management, Parking and Transportation, Printing Services, University Advancement, and the Eastern Committee on Responsible Environmental Stewardship.

The decision to utilize Zimride came after careful research of several ride-share software products.

"In addition to the obvious cost savings and environmental benefits, EKU Rides will foster safety and trust and build community," said Beverly Burrus, chair of the University's Staff Council.

Zimride, the engine powering EKU Rides, was recently featured on ABC World News and made it into the top 100 Google search terms during July 2008. After just six months of a trial run at Cornell University, more than 15 percent of Cornell students, faculty and staff were using the service.

Zimride has estimated that for every 1,000 users, the monetary savings exceed $50,000 and the atmosphere is spared more than 80,000 pounds of carbon dioxide.

"Ride-sharing software is not new but Zimride is one of the first to capture the imagination of young adults wanting to make a difference and save money along the way," said Ron Yoder, director of web communications at EKU.

The safety of EKU Rides is enhanced by four key features:

- The signup process requires a valid EKU e-mail address.

- EKU Rides profiles and Facebook profiles allow users to see information about potential ride partners before sharing a ride.

- Users can leave feedback after sharing a ride and view feedback when selecting a ride partner.

- Users and university administrators can set privacy controls on who can see ride and personal information.

Fifteen parking spaces on the Richmond campus will be designated on a pilot basis for car-poolers - 10 in the Alumni Coliseum Lot (five on either end) and five in the Martin Lot.

Other options available for students, faculty and staff wishing to save fuel expenses and help the environment include campus-wide shuttle routes and cross-town transit services.

MadCo. Public Libraries to accept "Food for Fines"

(Submitted to the Citizen)

During the entire month of September you can pay off your library fines by bringing in food! Madison County Public Library has named this September as "Food for Fines Month." All food collected will be distributed among the county's food banks.

Here's how it works: for each nonperishable food item you bring in, the library will deduct $1 from your overdue fines, up to $10.

Don't have any fines? You can still participate in Food for Fine, and the library will credit your account up to $10. Food for Fines may not be used to pay for lost items or other charges that you may have on your account. It only applies to overdue fines. You may bring food to either location of the public library or to the bookmobile.

Local food banks accept any non-perishable food item, such as canned foods and packaged foods or beverages that stay fresh at room temperature. In particular, food banks in this area often need tuna, salmon, spaghetti and spaghetti sauce (both meat and meatless), boxes of macaroni and cheese, 1-pound bags of pinto and white beans, cake mixes, 2-pound bags of flour or meal, boxes of cornbread mix, canned fruit and cereal. Cans are preferable to jars, since glass is fragile.

Madison County Public Library is located at 319 Chestnut Street in Berea, and 507 West Main Street in Richmond. The Bookmobile travels throughout Madison County, and a schedule of stops can be found on the library website (www.madisonlibrary.org/Bookmobile.html). For more information call Library Director Sue Hays at 623-6704.

Step - Up for Kids in Kentucky march being organized

(Submitted to the Citizen)

On Tuesday Sept. 16, the Madison County Fiscal Court, the City of Richmond and the City of Berea will be co-sponsoring Kentucky's Step-Up for Kids, which is a special, non-partisan nationwide event sponsored by Every Child Matters Education Fund.

The purpose of the march is to draw national wide spread support to issues affecting America's children—poverty, health care, juvenile incarceration, early care and education, child abuse, and after-school programs for children and families. One of the outcomes is to call upon the presidential candidates and all other candidates to present their plan in support of families and children. The Madison County Delinquency Prevention Council is also co-sponsoring "Step - Up for Kids" in conjunction with Youth in Action.

The event is a community event with assistance being provided by the city and county police, fire departments, and elected officials participating in the event.

Step up for Kids is a march from the Richmond Teen Center at 11:45 a.m. on North Estill Street to the Madison County Courthouse at noon. Over 100 children from Madison County will be participating in the walk and the activities. Both mayors in Madison County are in full support of kids programs in Madison County and the need for the continuation of such programs.

The Madison County Delinquency Prevention Council has been working with Youth in Action to draw attention to the need for continuation in support of children's programs within the state and the county. The community's attendance is welcomed at the Courthouse at noon in support of "Step-Up for Kids."

For more information regarding the event, please call Jennifer L. Webb, Madison County Delinquency Prevention Council Secretary, at 624-4719 or jenniferwebb@kycourts.net.

Madison County Teen Court seeks student volunteers

(Submitted to the Citizen)

Teen Court is a program offered by the Kentucky Court of Justice that provides first-time juvenile offenders the opportunity to participate in a less formal court process carried out by their peers. The program started in 1992 and currently operates in only 35 Kentucky counties.

Student volunteers are trained in courtroom roles such as prosecutor, defense attorney, clerk, bailiff and juror. Cases will be referred to Teen Court, where volunteers will serve as the prosecutor, defense attorney, bailiff, the clerk or juror. Teen Court student volunteers decide the punishment for juvenile offenders. The punishments rendered by the Madison County Teen Court are legally binding.

In order to participate, high school student volunteers must be between the ages of 13-17, complete five training sessions and take an oath of confidentiality at a formal Swearing-In Ceremony. Judge William G. Clouse, Jr., presides over Madison County Teen Court. Training for Teen Court student volunteers will be from 6-8 p.m. at the Madison County Hall of Justice on Main Street in Richmond the following dates: Sept. 8, 15 and 22; Oct. 13 and 20.

A special Swearing-In Ceremony will be held on Oct. 27.

The hours contributed to Teen Court can be used toward any community service hours that may be required for graduation or other high school activities and is a wonderful opportunity for our youth to learn more about Kentucky's court system. If you are interested in becoming a Teen Court student volunteer, please contact Jennifer Webb, Teen Court Coordinator, at 624-4719 or jenniferwebb@kycourts.net.

Drivers should be cautious and watch for children and buses

It's back to school time for hundreds of thousands of students, parents, educators and school staff. The Kentucky Transportation Cabinet and the Office of Highway Safety remind drivers to be alert, use extreme caution and "drive smart!"

Each year in the United States, about 450,000 public school buses travel 4.3 billion miles to transport 23.5 million children to and from school and school-related activities. In 2007, there were 1,244 collisions either directly or indirectly involving a school bus in Kentucky, resulting in 410 injuries and three fatalities.

Transportation Secretary Joe Prather, the Governor's Representative for Highway Safety, said the cabinet has a responsibility to make Kentucky highways as safe as possible. "Traffic is increasing in and around school zones and school buses are on the road again. Safety on our highways and in school zones is the responsibility of every driver. We all need to be especially aware of the extra road and pedestrian traffic that comes with the start of school."

Here are some safety tips to keep in mind when school buses begin to roll:

- Allow enough time to get to school or to work. Leave earlier to avoid speeding.
- Obey all of the signs in the school zone. Flashing yellow lights are used to indicate school speed zones, in which fines can be doubled.
- Pay extra attention at crosswalks to make sure that no students are crossing.
- Watch for school bus stops. Red flashing lights and the extended "STOP" arm signal other motorists to come to a complete stop. On a highway with a divided median, motorists approaching a school bus stopped on the same side of the road on which they are traveling must stop. Motorists traveling in the opposite direction of the bus, on a divided highway, should not stop. Motorists are reminded to be extra cautious at bus stops. Watch for children playing and gathering near bus stops.

Tokico comes to town, baby delivered on I-75 in July 1987

The chairman of the board of Tokico, Ltd., and the president of Tokico Manufacturing Corporation were in Berea for the groundbreaking of the new factory. They were joined by Gov. Martha Layne Collins and other state and local dignitaries. The groundbreaking was coordinated by Gray Construction, the company building the new plant. A large tent was erected on the site for other festivities, including a sake barrel toast for invited guests. A reception was held later in the day at the Berea Country Club.

The Tokico plant was scheduled to take about a year to build and would initially hire about 60 employees for its shock absorber production. At full force, the plant planned to employ upwards of 200 people.

Despite the celebrations surrounding the new factory, there was one issue. According to U.S. postal routes, Tokico was located in Paint Lick, which the Japanese did not like. They were concerned the small post office in Paint Lick could not sufficiently handle the volume of mail the factory would receive and generate.

All local officials favored changing the address of the industrial park to Berea, but that would mean a Paint Lick postal carrier would lose pay.

After negotiations, the address was changed.

Gary Doan and his "very pregnant" wife Dorothy were driving from the home in Mt. Vernon to the University of Kentucky Medical Center in Lexington when his new daughter decided she wasn't going to wait any longer.

After hearing his wife say, "Honey, the baby's coming," Doan stopped his 1974 Ford on the shoulder of Interstate 75 near the 70 mile marker, climbed into the back seat and helped his wife give birth to their daughter, Kelli Paige.

They baby and mother were taken to Berea Hospital, where both were examined and found to be OK. A nurse there said the Doans didn't seem to be the least bit rattled by the event.

Even though it was just July, the Citizen announced Santa Claus had accepted an invitation to attend the second-annual Berea Chamber of Commerce Christmas Parade.

The Berea City Council accepted the 1987-88 fiscal year budget of $2.7 million. The majority of expenditures were related to three departments: police ($482,000), fire ($404,500) and streets ($187,500).

"The city is in good financial shape, but we will have to live with cuts for another year or two until our industrial growth brings in additional revenue," said Mayor Clifford Kerby.

"Our department heads had to give up some things in order for us to get this budget," said city administrator Steve Stanton.

The Madison County Board of Education signed a redistricting agreement with the Berea Board of Education. The agreement moved some of Berea Community School's boundaries in an effort to keep enrollment around 1,050. Between 80 and 90 students attending the county schools would be attending Berea Community in the coming year under the agreement.

Dresser Industries

presented Loraine Dunsen with a 14-year service award and Mavis Powell with a 25-year award. The special-made clocks were presented by plant general manager A.B. Carter. The plant itself was recognized by the National Safety Council for having the best safety record in their industrial classification.

An inside story gave the inside scoop on what had been reported as a strange year for tomatoes. Numerous residents had reported their tomatoes were misshapen and slow ripen. John Strange of the UK College of Agriculture said cool, cloudy weather can cause pointed or puffy tomatoes. Cloudy days can also cause the fruit to ripen slowly.

Another photo set showed construction underway on the new Madison Southern High School. The new school was designed to accommodate 600 students.

Bob Ely was named Lion of the Year by the Berea Lions Club. Club President Bob Simkins presented the award. Muriel Dayoff received the club's Citizen of the Year award, which she shared with Dr. Dorothy Gates.

The Berea College Puppetry Caravan, directed by art professor Neil di Teresa, held a performance at the Alumni Building. The troupe used 30 hand-made puppets in its show, including one that was nearly 10 feet tall. The troupe was also set to perform in Ohio, Indiana, North Carolina and other cities in Kentucky.

At this point, Mayor Steve Connelly proposed that the Tourism Commission go into executive session. Connelly said later that the session involved the "possible acquisition of real estate."

According to the mayor, the city had been contacted by a local business that is selling its property; what role that may play in an overall strategic plan with the city and tourism was not decided at the session, and no action has yet been taken pending further discussions.

As GREEN As We Think?

Despite city's earthy reputation, only 21 percent of Bereans use recycling service

bondgirlee007@yahoo.com

BEREA — For many years, recycling has been touted as one of the best ways to help save the environment and combat issues such as overflowing landfills, the release of chemicals and toxins into the air and ground water and reducing the consumption of oil.

Berea, with its history of sustainability efforts like Berea College's Eco Village and April's Rain Barrel Festival, and groups like the Chemical Weapons Working Group who are dedicated to the preservation and protection of the health and safety of all citizens and the environment in which they live, should be at the forefront of the recycling movement.

But, out of almost 4,000 customers in Berea with Rumpke service, only about 850 of them use the recycling service, even though the service is part of the bill and you pay for it whether it's used or not, said Molly Yeager, corporate communication coordinator for Rumpke.

But, even though that number is still low, the amount of customers that recycle has increased by 100-150 people within the last year or so, said Ernie King, who is in charge of the residential drivers for Rumpke.

"About 60 percent of what people throw away could be recycled or reused."

— Molly Yeager, Rumpke corporate communication coordinator

"One of the biggest misconceptions about recycling is that it's hard to do and time consuming," Yeager said.

But recycling is no harder than throwing everything in the trash can. Place your bin(s) next to or close to your trash can. On trash day, take the bin(s) to the curb along with your trash. It's that simple, Yeager said.

The recycling charge on the bill is more a convenience fee than anything else, because of the rising costs of oil and gasoline. A lot of people don't realize how much

Ernie King picks up recycling on the Tuesday route through Berea. Tuesday's routes — through the East Ridge neighborhood — usually have more recycling than the other routes of the week. Many residents on the route are very nice and have brought drivers everything from water to cornbread. One lady made a spice cake for King and gave it to him fresh from the oven; he pulled over and ate it. When asked what was the craziest thing he had seen in the recycling box all he said was, "I cannot repeat it."

The iron bond of friendship

Friend's death pushes Berea coach to his physical limits

bondgirlee007@yahoo.com

BEREA — People handle the death of a loved one in many different ways. Some have tattooed the loved one's name on an arm, leg or back. Others have elaborate window stickers made and display 'in memory of' proudly on a car's back windshield.

But one Berea man is pushing himself to the limit, physically and emotionally, in the loving memory of his friend, Mike Caudill, former Superintendent of Madison County Schools who died last December after a long battle with non-Hodgkin's Lymphoma.

"Mike was one of those guys that come a long once in a lifetime," said Bunky Harkleroad, a Berea Community Middle

Theater etiquette important as drama scene grows

Tanya Stewart

BEREA — You went to see a theatrical performance, but didn't actually experience the play. What filled your sensibilities instead was the wailing baby across the aisle reaching decibel levels previously unmeasured in the sound spectrum; the human mountain sitting in front of you who left his "UK" cap on with the admonition to [expletives deleted] yourself for asking him to take it off; the narrator behind you—not in the play—who's already seen it, expounding the "surprise" plot twists to his date and everyone else in earshot; the person whose constant, consumptive coughing can only be quelled by a merciful bullet; the oh so precious toddler whose loud and ceaseless jabbering to its oblivious parents wound into, by the second act, a teeth-gritting siren whine; the self-imagined Employees at Bluegrass Regional Recycling Center in Lexington sort through a load of recycleables from Berea. Rumpke contracts with the facility to handle the load, which would otherwise have to be trucked to Cincinnati.

The Path of the Trash...

For a recycling truck driver, the day starts at about 4:30 a.m. when they pick up the truck in Mt. Sterling and do a vehicle inspection before hitting the road to arrive in Berea by 6 a.m. They spend about 10-11 hours in the truck a day, Monday through Friday, said driver Ernie King.

Each driver has a specific route every day. They pick up the recycling and throw it in the back of the truck. The trucks are separated into two compartments, one for glass and one for everything else.

If the glass isn't separated, drivers must spend the time sorting through it on the side of the road, which can make a long day even longer and can be very dangerous. There have been accidents where drivers were injured and some even killed by vehicles whizzing by, Yeager said.

"My least favorite part of the job is dodging traffic," King said.

After the route, the driver makes the long trek up to the Bluegrass Regional Recycling Center in Lexington. It is not a Rumpke center, but they have a contract with Rumpke to take the recycling. Lexington is closer than driving to Cincinnati, which is where, as of 14-15 months ago, they had to drive, King said.

Preliminary statistics indicate that 13 people died in thirteen separate crashes on Kentucky roadways from Monday, August 18 through Sunday, August 24, 2008. Six of the fatalities involved motor vehicles and two of those victims were not wearing seat belts. Motor vehicle crashes occurred in Allen, Knott, Laurel, Letcher, Pike and Scott counties.

There was an ATV fatality in Pike county and the victim was not wearing a helmet.

Five people died in five separate motorcycle crashes occurring in Fleming, Garrard, Laurel, McLean and Menifee counties. Two of the victims were not wearing helmets.

There was one pedestrian fatality in Logan county and the suspected use of alcohol was a factor.

Through August 24, preliminary statistics indicate that 492 people have lost their lives on Kentucky roadways during 2008. This is 63 fewer than reported for this time period in 2007. Of the 373 motor vehicle fatalities, 228 victims were not wearing seat belts. Of the 62 motorcycle fatalities, 36 were not wearing helmets. Fifteen people have been killed in ATV crashes and 14 of those were not wearing helmets. Thirty-nine pedestrians have been killed. AAA predicts less travel for Labor Day

AAA projects a slight decrease in the number of Americans traveling during the Labor Day holiday weekend. Nearly 34.38 million Americans will travel 50 miles or more from home this Labor Day holiday weekend, down 0.9 percent, or almost 320,000 Americans, from the 34.7 million who traveled last year. This year marks the first decline in Labor Day holiday travel since 2006.

"While we are seeing a drop in travel, it is a small improvement over the Fourth of July holiday when we saw a drop of 1.3 percent. This may show that travelers are starting to respond to the recent drop in gasoline prices," said AAA Bluegrass Safety Foundation Director Lilla Mason. "This holiday, people are staying slightly closer to home and they also seem to be interested in using different modes of transport, such as going by train or bus."

Approximately 28.64 million Americans (more than 83% of all holiday travelers) expect to travel by automobile, a 1.1 percent decrease from the 28.97 million people who drove to their holiday destinations last year.

The national average for self-serve regular gasoline is currently $3.67 per gallon. Americans traveling by automobile will encounter gasoline prices about 39 cents less than the Fourth of July travel holiday, but still 95 cents more than this time last year. In Kentucky, the average price is $3.62 compared with $2.70 this time last year.

The AAA Fuel Gauge Report Web site (www.aaafuelgauge.com) lists average daily prices for the nation, all 50 states and more than 250 localities for all grades of gasoline. And travelers can also use the site to forecast their fuel costs by entering the starting location and destination of their trip, and the make and model of their car.

Almost 3.96 million Americans (11.5 percent of holiday travelers) intend to travel by airplane, a 4.5 percent decrease from the 4.14 million people who flew last year.

A projected 1.8 million Americans (5 percent of holiday travelers) plan to travel by train, bus or other mode of transportation.

News Briefs

City moves to dismiss lawsuit

◊ The city of Berea has filed a motion to dismiss a lawsuit filed by former Berea Police Officer Billy Beavers.

Beavers was fired from the department in August 2007 after a video allegedly showed him kicking a suspect at the end of a long, high-speed pursuit that started in Richmond. Beavers was indicted on a misdemeanor charges of fourth-degree assault and official misconduct for allegedly not filing a use of force report.

The assault charge was eventually dropped for lack of evidence, and Beavers was fined $1 on the official misconduct charge. All charges were dropped last March.

Beavers, now an officer with the Lancaster Police Department, is being represented by Attorney General Greg Stumbo or Erdman and Stumbo in Richmond. The city is represented by city attorney J.T. Gilbert and Charles Cole of Lexington.

Laurel County man charged with mail theft

According to Berea police, Bruce Kevin Hacker, 44, of East Bernstadt, was arrested and lodged at the Madison County Detention Center in Richmond where he faces charges from the BPD, Richmond police and Madison County Sheriff's Office.

Hacker would allegedly take blank checks issued through credit card companies from mailboxes in Madison, Rockcastle and Laurel counties, then check mailboxes with outgoing mail for checks with the residents's personal information, including bank account numbers. He would then deposit the blank checks into unsuspecting people's accounts, asking for some of the amount back in cash, police charge.

Images from video surveillance cameras at banks in Berea, Rockcastle County and Richmond helped police identify Hacker.

Hacker was taken into custody in Laurel County after he was asked to come to what he thought was a routine drug screening through probation and parole.

Unemployment up in state, county

(Submitted to the Citizen

Unemployment rates rose in 112 Kentucky counties between July 2007 and July 2008, fell in six counties and stayed the same in two counties, according to the Kentucky Office of Employment and Training, an agency of the Kentucky Education and Workforce Development Cabinet.

Woodford County recorded the lowest jobless rate in the commonwealth at 5.3 percent. Other counties with low unemployment rates were Fayette County, 5.4 percent; Boone County, 5.6 percent; Bourbon and Oldham counties, 5.7 percent each; Jessamine and Scott counties, 5.9 percent each; Franklin, Kenton and Livingston counties, 6 percent each.

Magoffin County recorded the state's highest unemployment rate — 11.5 percent. It was followed by Jackson County, 11.2 percent; Wolfe County, 10.8 percent; Grayson County, 10.6 percent; Clay County, 10.5 percent; Elliott, Harlan and Morgan counties, 10.1 percent each; and Bell, McCreary and Muhlenberg counties, 9.9 percent each.

The saga continues...

Update: Following more calls and conversations with Bill, Shawn and Roger (oddly enough no one I spoke to in India had a Hindi name) anyway none of them were of any more help than Paul. They had varying ideas on how to correct our Internet problem to no avail. However, we did get back up and running last Friday when local management got involved. So far so good.

That means I owe a thank you to Steve Goss. Windstream's regional manager for this area, a very nice guy who, by the way, speaks beautiful English. We do appreciate his seeing to it that we got back up and running. Thanks also to Jeff Turner from Windstream who actually fixed the problem.

It's been a big relief to be able to get our jobs done. Missing deadlines and incurring the additional expense of driving out gas delivering discs to the press is not something I want to make a habit.

From the volume of calls we took at the office and the number of people who've mentioned their own connection problems to me in the past few days it's obvious we weren't the only ones with communication issues. I'm just glad to get the office back into normal operation mode. So, thanks again to Mr. Goss.

On the lighter side, language issues and computers reminded me of a joke I heard which isn't really about computers at all. It seems a teacher was explaining to her class that in French, nouns unlike their English counterparts, are grammatically designated as masculine or feminine.

"House" in French, is feminine "la maison," "Pencil" in French, is masculine "le crayon."

One puzzled student asked, "What gender is computer?" The teacher didn't know, and the word wasn't in her French dictionary.

So for fun she split the class into two groups appropriately enough, by gender and asked them to decide whether "computer" should be a masculine or a feminine noun.

Both groups were required to give reasons for their recommendation.

The female group concluded that computer should be masculine "le computer" because...

- They have a lot of data but still can't think for themselves.
- They're supposed to help you solve problems, but half the time they are the problem.
- After you commit to one, you realize that if you had waited a little longer you could have gotten a better model.

The male group, however, decided that computer should definitely be of the feminine gender "la computer" because...

- No one but their creator understands

Scenter Stage
Teresa Scenters,
Publisher

their internal logic.

• The native language they use to communicate with other computers is incomprehensible to everyone else.

• Even the smallest mistakes are stored in long term memory for possible later review.

• As soon as you make a commitment to one, you find yourself spending half your pay on accessories for it.

Had a blast at Battle of Richmond

Last weekend I attended the Battle of Richmond reenactment for the first time. I must say, my feelings were mixed, but mostly good.

Since the battlefield is outside of our coverage area, we've never covered the reenactment in the Citizen to any notable scale other than running some press releases for the good folks who organize it. I also find it strange that Berea — an abolitionist town — would embrace the celebration of one of the biggest Confederate victories during the Civil War — our Battle of Richmond.

I wandered out that way on Sunday thinking I would stay about an hour and take a few pictures. I was disappointed at first, even though that's too strong of a word to use here. I had never been to a Civil War reenactment before, so I didn't really know what to expect. I thought it would be a much larger event than it was, but then again, it's a young event and is obviously growing.

My being disappointed was really just a reality check on my expectations. I actually had no reason to be disappointed.

As I drifted between the booths and encampments, it was almost as though I had been whisked back in time, with the old Pleasant View home serving as a backdrop for children and adults in Civil War-era clothing. A very large bull (maybe a steer) grazed untethered in the lawn. The burnt metal smell from the blacksmith filled the air.

I spent a good deal of time at an agricultural booth manned by Jeff Clagg of Lesage, W.Va. He had many heirloom vegetables on display, and we had a long conversation about what was eaten during the war and why. He was very knowledgeable and I can honestly say I learned quite a bit, especially about okra.

The Battle of Richmond Association has worked very hard to organize the reenactment, and it's an event I'm sure will grow by leaps and bounds over the coming years. If you've never been, it's worth the very short drive to Kingston, but leave your expectations at home.

And considering the Internet traumas of the past two weeks, I'll end with a joke:

After having dug to a depth of 10 feet last year, New York scientists found traces of a copper-wire system dating back 100 years, and they came to the conclusion that their ancestors already had a telephone network more than 100 years ago.

Not to be outdone by New Yorkers, in the weeks that followed, California scientists dug to a depth of 20 feet, and shortly after, headlines in the LA Times newspaper read: 'California archaeologists have found traces of 200 year old copper-wire system and have concluded that their ancestors already had an advanced high-tech communications network a hundred years earlier than the New Yorkers.'

One week later, The Hillbilly Gazette in Kentucky, reported the following: 'After digging as deep as 30 feet in a corn field, Bubba Ray Johnson, a self-taught archaeologist, reported that he found absolutely nothing. Bubba therefore concluded that 300 years ago, Kentucky had already gone wireless.'

Opinions from Our Readers...

Breastfeeding in public is not amoral

Dear Editor,
Considering that Kentucky ranks 50th among all states and the District of Columbia in the number of mothers breastfeeding, the woman who was asked to leave McDonald's several weeks ago because she was breastfeeding in public should be given many thanks, NOT told that her actions are contributing to the downfall of our society, as a recent letter to the editor implies. Breastfeeding in public is not "compromising away morality," if anything, breastfeeding could be considered more moral than feeding a child formula since study after study has shown that breastfeeding is healthier for a child.

The letter writer goes on to say that "a respectable woman is not going to openly show a private part of her body in a public place." Feeding your child in a responsible manner and walking around exposing yourself are not the same thing. And if the letter writer had read the full article on the McDonald's breastfeeding incident, they might recall that a male family friend said of the woman breastfeeding: "When she feeds, you can't see nothing. It's ain't like she exposes herself to the world."

And if that wasn't enough, the letter writer says, "Is it any wonder that our nation is in the shape it is? Yes, we have compromised our way to amorality." I won't argue that our nation is in tip-top shape, and there are certainly plenty of things that need improvement in our country, but to suggest that a woman breastfeeding her baby in public is amoral and leading to the downfall of our society just because it makes you a little uncomfortable is downright ridiculous and distasteful. Yes, there are some things that are thought to be completely inappropriate to do in public. Breastfeeding is not one of them.

Letter's comments reiterate misogynistic themes

Dear Editor,
Saying that no decent, moral woman would breastfeed in public reveals more about the writer than about anything about women.

Women's bodies have been controlled, exploited, and turned into objects by men for centuries and the writer's negative comments reiterate those misogynistic themes. We don't think twice when we see women's bodies looking battered and abused, advertising anything from cars to high fashion, but would shudder in horror if the same images featured a little boy or a puppy, yet the act of feeding a baby raises alarm.

No part of a woman's body is evil or dirty and giving a baby the most nourishing food available is not a sexual act, with which the writer seems to equate it.

We need to think about what we find so abhorrent about women's bodies that we don't see in men's when they are shirtless in public.

Breastfeeding is a moral act

Dear Editor,
I have been reading with much interest the responses to the breastfeeding incident at one of our local McDonald's restaurants. I'm not really surprised at the latest letter to the editor qualifying breastfeeding in public as "immoral," but it is opposite to how I have seen experienced breastfeeding myself.

My first exposure to breastfeeding was in a country church on Cane Creek in Clay County. The angelic woman I observed breastfeeding her baby on the front pew of the church was none other than the preacher's wife. I doubt that the breastfeeding that took place in that church was viewed in any way, shape or form as immoral. The act was nothing less than godly in my eyes.

The focus of the act of breastfeeding is not on the woman's breast or the parts therein, but on the close bond between mother and child and the wonderful gift we have been given to nourish and nurture our children. In my opinion, breastfeeding is one of the most moral acts that humans can engage in.

Sincerely,
Stephanie Woodie

Pattie A. Clay to become smoke-free hospital in 2009

(Submitted to the Citizen)

Pattie A. Clay Regional Medical Center is announcing its commitment to go completely smoke-free by January 1, 2009. On that day PACRMC will join with 35 other health care facilities in Kentucky that have implemented or are in the process of implementing a tobacco free hospital campus policy.
"Although we have not allowed smoking inside the hospital for many years, says President/ CEO Robert Hudson, "the new policy specifies that patients, visitors and employees will be prohibited from using tobacco products anywhere on hospital grounds."

As part of the plan, all outdoor designated smoking areas will be eliminated, Hudson said.

Hospitals around the state are working together to address the many threats caused by the use of tobacco products. Kentucky has the highest smoking rate in the United States at 29 percent, compared with the national average of 21 percent. The state's incidence and death rates for cancer, cardiovascular disease, lung disease and other cancer related diseases far exceed the national average.

According to the U.S. Surgeon General, more than 430,000 Americans - including 8,000 Kentuckians - die each year as a result of tobacco use. Secondhand smoke kills more than 50,000 nonsmokers in the nation each year.

Programs for smoking cessation will be offered to hospital staff members in collaboration with the Madison County Health Department.

Conversation on Islamic faith to be hosted by ministerial group

From 7-9 p.m. on Wednesday, Sept. 17, the Berea Ministerial Association (BMA) will present an opportunity for conversations with a member of the Muslim community. The meeting will take place in the community room of the Madison County Public Library on Chestnut Street. The room has a side entrance.

The visiting Muslim is Mohamed Saleen Qureshi. Mohamed will bring with him his wife, Amira, and a friend. An emergency room physician at Ft. Logan Hospital in Stanford, Mohamed is a native of Pakistan where he received his medical education. He completed a residency in Kentucky from 1987 until 1992. He and Amira have five children.

Wednesday night is church night for many congregations in Berea, and the BMA hopes churches will make space in their program for this important conversation with a member of the Islamic faith.

Race Mistakes to Avoid

Mistake: Too Fast, too soon
"Most first time racers go out too fast and are miserable by the second mile," says women's running coach Jane Serues. Even veteran runners get caught up in the race-day enthusiasm and other faster racers.

Easy Fix:
"Start out at a comfortable pace," says Serues, "a pace where you're not killing yourself and can still converse with deep breaths in between sentences. No huffing and puffing." Then try to run each mile just a little bit faster, so that your last mile is the fastest. "A strong finish leaves a better taste in your mouth than a great first mile with a cross-eyed finish," says Chris Carmichael of Carmichael Training Systems.

Mistake: Too much food
RW columnist Jeff Galloway says many first-timers eat too much before a race, particularly the night before. Carmichael agrees. "You don't need to carbo-load for a 5-K," he says. Most people have enough stored energy in their bodies to run a 5-K without taking in any additional calories.

Easy Fix:
"Eat less than normal before the race," says Serues. Try small meals the day before, and something as simple as a banana and a glass of skim milk on race morning. "The key is choosing something easy to digest," says Serues. "Not ham and eggs, which your body has to work hard to break down."

Mistake: Too little warm-up/cool-down
Your body needs to warm up properly before it can run well at the higher intensity required to race a 5-K. And a post-race cool down helps you recover more quickly so that you will feel better the day before the race.

Easy Fix:
Include a 15-minute warm-up properly before the race, and a 15-minute cool-down afterward, says Carmichael. For both, mix walking and jogging to help ease into and out of your race pace.

Remember:
There will be warm-up and cool-down sports massage stations available at the Spoonbread Festival 5K provided by Chiropractic Health Solutions.

FROM THE FRONT

School teacher and Berea College girls basketball coach.

Harkleroad decided, in honor of Caudill's memory and with the help of his friends, to train long and hard in preparation for the Ironman Louisville competition, a grueling day long triathlon consisting of a 2.4 mile swim, 112 mile bike, followed by a 26.2 mile run.

Harkleroad has known Caudill and been a part of his life from an early age. When a back injury and surgery at age 18 forced Harkleroad to the sidelines in other sports, Caudill introduced him to biking and running, said his mother Beverly Harkleroad.

"Mike put him under his wing," Beverly said. "Their friendship was always like a big brother thing."

They would attend triathlons around the area, with Caudill always encouraging Harkleroad.

"Mike was always The Guy of the group," Harkleroad said.

While watching Ironman competitions with on TV, which they thought were so cool, they tossed around the idea of one day being a participant instead of a spectator, Harkleroad said.

"Mike always joked that he knew I could do it, I just needed to be obsessed about it," Harkleroad said.

To help get ready for the event, which takes place August 31, Harkleroad participated in a half Ironman competition in July with Lon Hays; chairman of the department of psychiatry at U.K. medical center, a long time friend of Caudill's and running/cycling partner for Harkleroad.

"It was the hardest day I've had," Harkleroad said. "It was a good lesson. I learned don't get cocky and take it easy."

For many weeks, Har-kleroad spent anywhere from 12-16 hours a week training with a structured workout, running in the morning and swimming in the afternoon, then biking the next day. But there was never a shortage of friends to call on to help him out, Harkleroad said.

"I could give you a list of 15-20 guys who supported me," Harkleroad said.

But there was more to his training than just working out. Because the event can take up to 12 hours or more to finish, Harkleroad had to learn how to eat and drink while biking or running, which isn't as easy as it sounds, Harkleroad said.

"It's all uncharted territory for me," Harkleroad said. "It's about pacing and using your head. Don't push too hard or it will be bad news."

Although he isn't looking to finish with a record time or make it to the next round of competition, through his participation Harkleroad hopes to bring awareness to Mike's Kids Scholarship Fund (P.O. Box 518, Richmond, KY 40475), set up in Caudill's honor to help kids from difficult backgrounds.

"I have the utmost respect, taking this on is pretty remarkable" Hays said. "It is one of the most grueling events imaginable; Mike would be so proud."

Now that the event is almost here, Harkleroad is starting to get a little nervous, but he isn't the only one. Beverly knows her son wants to finish the race, but will be a nervous wreck until he crosses the line, she said.

Harkleroad has to be in Louisville Friday for pre-race meetings and check-in. Many of his family and friends will arrive on Saturday, and during the competition will be at the different points throughout the course, giving him support and cheering him on, Beverly said.

"When he comes around we'll be right there. If I can say this without getting choked up; I know Mike will be there too," Hays said.

mover and shaker five seats down involved in cell phone conversations on which the fate of the planet obviously depends, with the play---and the rest of the audience---merely peripheral.

What advice do local drama directors and instructors have to keep one from becoming one of the theater etiquette-impaired? "For me, the main thing is to be on time---and enjoy the show," says Eddie Kennedy, director of the Berea Arena Theater. He encourages people to arrive no later than 10 minutes before curtain, and not only because reserved seats unclaimed by that time go back on sale; it also spares his actors' nerves. When players who are primed and ready to perform in two minutes have to wait an extra 10 to go on, says Kennedy, "it affects their heads," and can impair their performance. As is the practice with other theaters, late arrivals, or those who leave their seats during a performance, are either seated in the back, or must simply wait until a break between acts or an intermission before taking their assigned seats.

There's an unwritten rule in effect at BAT, says Kennedy: "We don't have an audience that's distracting." And they haven't either, which Kennedy attributes, in part, to people who have been attending community theater in Berea for 35 years and know what to expect. Being a small facility of about 100 seats also tends to predicate against rudeness, Kennedy says: "It's like being in somebody's living room."

"We rely on common sense and courtesy for our audience," says Deborah Martin, who teaches voice and drama at Berea College. "We have found that our audience is well-behaved." The only occasions she has had to ask anyone to leave the theater has been for people talking on cell phones and taking pictures. "We are absolute sticklers about electronics," she says. While camera flashes are annoying at the very least, their use, by recording a paid performance, violates the royalty agreement between the show's producers and the playwright, says Martin. Only "archival" pictures, taken by staff before a show, are permissible.

Plays have their age-appropriateness stated, but parents, says Martin, make the decision whether a child accompanies them to a play meant for an older audience. If a child in arms cries continually, the parents are asked to leave, Martin says. Families with small children are seated near the exits, to provide an easy and inconspicuous getaway if necessary.

"A lot of students feel they have to dress up," notices Martin, to be able to attend performances, a social expectation she considers "dated and elitist." She reassures students that they're welcome no matter what they're wearing. The audiences at Berea College productions, she says, are "an eclectic mix of jeans and shorts, dresses and ties. It's really a matter of comfort."

The only other sort of bad behavior that bothers Kennedy almost as much as late patrons are no-shows for reserved seating--- those who reserve a number of seats, but actually just use a few. This sort of thing, he says, has a serious impact on a show, in audience size. "It's a courtesy to call the theater and release the seats."

Neither Martin nor Kennedy has had to call in a haz-mat crew to handle post-show audience trash; the most anybody seems to leave behind at either venue is the occasional purse, coat, or camera. "Our audiences have been tremendous," says Kennedy. "I don't think I've removed more than one can or bottle from the theater."

"We're being spoiled this season," says Eddie Kennedy. Not only are Berea's dramatic stages apparently devoid of the noblesse nonobliged, but Kennedy hears, almost as a matter of course, words from his audience members, both local and from out of town, that are poetry to a director's ears: "Boy, what a great theater you have! It's been a good night!"

gasoline the trucks use (smaller ones 40-45 gallons a day, bigger ones 70-80 gallons) and that the plastic liners used in the landfills requires oil to make, Yeager said.

"A lot of people use the excuse they don't have time to recycle, but if they put the bin next to the trash they won't have that excuse," Yeager said.

Of the 20 percent or so that recycle in Berea, about 75 percent of them have only one 18 gallon bin, which is sometimes not even full at pickup time. There are so many more people that could be recycling, but aren't, Yeager said.

"If everybody in Berea recycled, we could start taking at least three loads of recycling a day," King said.

On average, one person produces about five to seven pounds of trash a day. Rumpke picks up more than 1800 pounds of recycling with glass constituting only about 130 pounds. The trash trucks pick up around 10 tons of garbage every day, but if everyone recycled or reused what they could, it would cut that amount by 40-50 percent, King said.

"About 60 percent of what people throw away could be recycled or reused," Yeager said.

For every one ton of plastic recycled, it saves the equivalent of two people's energy use for a year, the amount of water used by one person in two month's time and almost 2,000 pounds of oil. Glass takes up to 4,000 years to decompose but can be recycled over and over again, according to the Website www.environment-green.com.

"[Recycling] is the right thing to do," Yeager said. "It slows the growth of landfills, creates jobs, and saves natural resources. There are a million reasons to recycle."

If you want to recycle, but don't have the bins, just call Rumpke customer service and request the driver bring a bin or two on the next pick-up day, King said. The trucks have compartments underneath that hold multiple bins.

The City of Berea has contracted the services of Rumpke of Kentucky to provide waste and recycling pick-up. They maintain a toll-free phone for any questions or assistance you might need regarding your waste and recyclable materials. Please contact them at 1-877-786-7537.

120 tons or more of materials. Tuesdays and Thursdays about 70-80 tons and on Wednesdays about 40 tons of materials, said James Carter, facilities manager for the center.

Once at the center, the glass is dumped in back where it is ground up into two separate grades or sizes. The larger is about the size of a small pebble and can be used for landscaping, which the center used in the front of the building, and the other is ground into, what looks like colored sand. The police department used some of the ground glass to redo their firing range and the streets and roads department uses it as back fill, Carter said.

"Of all things recycled here, glass is the least valuable," Carter said.

The rest is dumped into a big pile in front of a feeder machine, which drops the recyclables into a hopper with a spinning spike strip that breaks up materials stuck together. It drops all the separated/shredded materials onto a sorting line, where workers extract bottles, cans, phone books and cardboard. Basically everything that isn't paper and isn't in a book, Carter said.

While sorting through everything, workers find some interesting things. On average they can find about $200 a day from discarded birthday cards or bank envelopes, Carter said.

Workers have found DVDs, iPods, cameras and bibles, as well as an elderly couple's intact stimulus check from the Federal Government, which they returned after tracking the couple down, said Bobby Harris, public service supervisor for the center.

On another sorting line, workers sort everything else into separate bins for plastic bottles, cans, paper and cardboard. A magnet picks up any metals and drops them in a sorting bin. By the end of the second sorting line all that is left is what is then sent to the landfill, Carter said.

"Ninety-eight percent of what comes through here is recyclable, the other two percent goes to the trash," Carter said.

The plastic bottles, cans and cardboard are then pressed and bound into large squares that can be easily moved by forklifts and are sent out to different companies, Carter said.

County's ACT scores on target

Madison County Schools is pleased to announce that its graduates are on target with the rest of the state when it comes to college readiness. ACT college readiness data was released recently and scores for the 2008 graduates of Madison County Schools show that Madison County students are maintaining an equal overall score to the statewide average.

"The ACT is an assessment that measures the preparedness of graduating students for college-level work," said Chief Academic Officer Randy Peffer. "To say that we are pleased that the students of Madison County made gains in all four testing areas would be an understatement."

As a district, Madison County's 2008 graduates participated in ACT testing at a record rate. The district had 411 students take the test. That number is up from 402 the previous year and had increased by more than 100 students since 301 students took the test in 2004.

"These results show that more of our students are graduating with the skills necessary to be successful in college," Peffer added.

Madison County Schools students' scores reflected gains in all four testing areas as well as the composite scores. Scores were reported as follows:

.2 above the state average.

Math - Madison County students made a .3 gain. Scores averaged 19.6, up from 19.3, but still .6 below the state average.

Reading - Madison County students made a .6 gain. Scores averaged 21.9, up from 21.3, and .4 above the state average.

Science - Madison County students made a .1 gain. Scores averaged 20.7, up from 20.6, and equal to the state average.

Composite - Madison County students made a .4 gain. Scores averaged 20.9, up from 20.5 and equal to the state average.

This data does not reflect the scores from the mandatory testing of high school juniors that began in the spring of the 2007-2008 school year. That data will be released at a later time.

"The ACT was given to all juniors in the Commonwealth as part of the Kentucky Core Content Test for the first time this past spring," Peffer said. "We are anxiously awaiting those results which should be released in a few weeks."

Madison Southern High School had 130 students participate in the ACT, which is 14 more than the previous year. Scores increased or maintained in every component for Madison Southern graduates as well.

Broadcasting Live from WPLE

Paint Lick Elementary School has a daily live news program. Students from the fifth grade sign up to participate each year. The program is held at 8 every morning and includes the announcements for the day, birthdays, weather and the Pledge of Allegiance. Each day a brief Arts Minute is also presented. This Arts Minute includes information from visual arts, music, drama or dance.

The news team consists of five students. News team positions are anchor, co-anchor, meteorologist, sound effects and camera. The anchor and co-anchor positions do the welcome, daily announcements, and birthdays. The sound effects person is in charge of playing the Star Spangled Banner before the pledge and Happy Birthday after the birthday announcements.

Students rotate through the positions so that everyone gets a turn for each job. The students enjoy participating on the news team and learn valuable lessons in cooperation and public speaking.

Children in Civil War-era clothing gather at the porch of Pleasant View during last weekend's Battle of Richmond Reenactment at Battlefield Park. The home, built around 1824, served as a hospital during the battle, and legend says stains on a second-story bedroom floor were left by the blood of the wounded.

Kelly Tracy and Jeremiah Clagg of West Virginia grind corn into meal during reenactment weekend. They were using a red heirloom corn dating from pre-1870 called "bloody butcher." All foods used in the agriculture booth were heirloom varieties dating back to the Civil War. One interesting note, because of the Northern blockade on Southern ports, coffee was scarce. Troops used ground okra seeds, sometimes flavored with sassafras, as a substitute. The Battle of Richmond, fought Aug. 29-30, 1862, has two distinct highlights was the second-largest Civil War battle in Kentucky, and was one of the most decisive and complete Confederate victories of the entire war with the Union army retreating in disarray.

Regional Boomer Games fast approaching

Submitted to the Citizen

"Boomers" and "seniors" can meet, greet and compete with their peers during the First Annual Bluegrass Regional Boomer and Senior Games on Sept. 6 from 8 a.m. – 5 p.m. in Berea. This event is sponsored by Berea College and the Bluegrass Area Agency on Aging and Independent Living.

Athletic events will include: badminton, basketball, cycling, golf, racquetball, softball, swimming, track and field, volleyball, and tennis. Berea College's Seabury Athletic Center is the location for most of the competitions, which are open to all persons who are at least 50-years-old.

The fee for competing is $10, payable during registration at 8 a.m. at the Seabury Center. The fee includes a games T-shirt along with lunch.

As part of the Bluegrass Regional Boomer and Senior Games, all athletes, spectators and any other interested persons are asked to enter their best art and/or crafts in the "Art at the Games" exhibit. First, second and third place "best of show" will be selected by a panel of independent judges and awarded medals in each medium of art work.

The Berea Country Club will host the men and women's golf competitions beginning with a shotgun start for 18 holes of golf. Golfers are encouraged to bring their own carts since a limited number are available at the club. Green's fees, payable at the Berea course, are an additional $16.50. Awards will be presented at the conclusion of each sporting event.

Mark the date of Sept. 6 on your calendar and attend or compete in the First Annual Bluegrass Regional Boomer and Senior Games in Berea. Studies show that, in the long term, it hurts people's health far more by not exercising than by exercising.

The program provides educational opportunities through classes in building self-esteem, computer basics, leadership development, Appalachian literature, self-defense, understanding violence against women, public speaking, learning how to become enrolled in further education, and cultural field trips and art related events.

Job search skills will be identified and participants will learn to write resumes and practice interview techniques. Participants will intern in a field of interest, either on the Berea College campus or in the commu-

1978: A Year of Extremes...

Part I January

- The Old Barbershop on Chestnut Street was torn down. Owner Chet Copeland had offered the building to any group that would restore it, but the offer was not taken.
- The Berea City Council adopted one of its largest budgets ever — $968,000.
- Berea Hospital installed its first stress-test machine, which is used in cardiac diagnosis.
- The Berea Child Care Center renovated its new building at Broadway and Adams Street.
- The home of James and Mary Gooch burned to the ground on the coldest night of the year.
- Over 18 inches of snow fell on the city during the month, leading to the closing of school and many businesses.
- Conn's IGA opened on Prince Royal Drive.
- Berea Hospital became overcrowded with flu and pneumonia patients. Some beds were located in the hallways as the hospital ran out of room to house patients.
- "Cinderella" was presented by the Berea College Theatre as a sign language performance directed by Paul Power.

February

- An ice storm closed roads and airports across Central Kentucky, and halted mail service in Berea for three days. A state of emergency was declared and National Guard troops were called out.
- Salt supplies across the state ran out as loads of salt were stuck on barges in the frozen Ohio River.
- As Interstate 75 was closed due to the weather, Berea was overwhelmed by stranded travelers. Streets near exit 76 were crowded with out-of-state vehicles and tractor-trailers.

- Over 600 students were evacuated from EKU's Telford Hall during a fire.
- Bereans Mike Ross, Martin Ambrose, David Cook, Sharon Osolnik and Robin Urban appeared in the made-for-television movie "Black Beauty." The movie was broadcast in five parts.
- GTE opened a branch office in Berea, meaning telephone customers no longer had to travel to Somerset for complaints or to pay bills. (Oh, how things have changed.)
- The National Labor Relations Board upheld a ruling ordering the Berea Goodyear plant to schedule another representation election by the UAW and to offer reinstatement to two workers discharged by a previous vote.
- Superior Food Market held a grand re-opening. The store had added over 7,000-square-feet of space and completed a major remodeling job.
- As the weather continued to worsen, power shortages hit the area. Power conservation was encouraged as coal supplies to utility companies were at critical levels.
- Berea College won its first KIAC title since 1955.

March

- The power shortage continued as Berea College Utilities advised all customers to reduce usage by 24 percent. Outside lighting across the city was turned off, and some Berea College buildings were closed.
- Alfred Hurt of Laurel Drive was awarded the Bronze Star for actions taken against the Nazis during World War II.

- Forty acres of land north of Apple Grove Park adjacent to Mary Street were annexed to the city.
- Berea College was cited for pollutions violations by the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection. According to the department, the college smokestack had an emission of greater than 40 percent opacity. The college had until July 1, 1979, to bring the smokestack into compliance.
- Dr. John Payne and Dr. John Johnstone moved into new offices at Berea Hospital.

April

- The ad valorem tax rate for the city of Berea was set at 5 cents per $100 of assessed value, the same rate as was used in 1977.
- The Berea Kiwanis Club donated $140 to Berea Community School for the purchase of dictionaries.
- Garbage became a topic of concern for all in Madison County as dumpsters were overcrowded by the winter's accumulation of trash.
- Shelby Jean Thomas of Route 2 in Richmond was the winner of a 1978 Chevette in a contest sponsored by Conn's IGA.

- Complaints lodged with the city led to an official investigation of the L&N railroad tracks running through Berea.
- The Berea Bass Club held its first tournament at the Marsh Boat Ramp at Laurel Lake.
- Helen Dingman, 93, a leading figure in the development of mountain social work, died at Berea Hospital.
- The Berea League of Women Voters hosted 60 delegates and observers from 14 local leagues in a two-day meeting at Boone Tavern.
- The Ford Motor Company presented Russ Powell Ford, Inc., with an award for truck sales leadership in Madison and Estill counties in 1977.
- Bernard Davis, chair of the department of economics at the college and a city council member, left Berea for a position at Morehead State University.

Traditional IRA vs. Roth IRA: Which One Is Right for You?

Provided by, Richard "Ricky" Reynolds, Financial Advisor, UBS Financial Services Inc.

Whatever you see for yourself in retirement — whether it's work, leisure or something in between — you'll need sufficient funds to ensure yourself an adequate income on which to live. It used to be that most people could rely solely on employer-sponsored pension plans and Social Security payments to provide for a comfortable retirement. Not so today!

More people than ever are responsible for planning and funding their own retirement, and one of the most effective and popular retirement savings vehicles is the individual retirement account (IRA). This article provides an overview of two different types of IRAs — the traditional IRA and the Roth IRA.

The Traditional IRA

Your savings in a traditional IRA get the benefit of tax-deferred growth until those savings are withdrawn. Contributions may or may not be tax-deductible depending upon your income level and whether you (and your spouse, if married) are covered by an employer's qualified retirement plan (see below).

If you are a working individual under the age of 70½, you are eligible to contribute 100% of your earned income, up to $4,000 in 2007, to a traditional IRA. If you are age 50 or older, you can make an additional $1,000 catch-up contribution for the year. Single income married couples may contribute 100% of earned income up to $8,000 for 2007 (plus catch-up contributions, if eligible), although no more than $4,000 ($5,000 if age 50 or older) can be contributed on behalf of any individual each year.

Contributions to a traditional IRA have always been, and remain, tax deductible for:

- Single taxpayers who are not covered by such an employer-sponsored qualified retirement plan, and
- Married couples filing jointly where neither spouse is covered by such an employer-sponsored qualified retirement plan.

IRA contributions for 2007 are fully tax deductible for:

- Single taxpayers covered by an employer-sponsored plan, if their AGI doesn't exceed $52,000 in 2007, and
- Married individuals covered by an employer-sponsored plan, whose joint AGI doesn't exceed $83,000 in 2007.

Tax-deductibility is phased out as AGI rises above these limits.

For 2007, if one spouse is covered by an employer-sponsored qualified retirement plan and the other is not (whether a working or non-working spouse), the spouse who is not covered may deduct his or her IRA contribution, as long as the couple's joint AGI doesn't exceed $156,000. A partial deduction is allowed for those with AGI between $156,000 and $166,000. No deduction is allowed where the couple's joint AGI exceeds $166,000. Investors who do not qualify to make tax-deductible contributions can still contribute up to the annual maximum for a particular year to a traditional IRA and benefit from the potential of tax-deferred growth. Withdrawals of tax-deductible contributions, as well as all earnings, are taxed as ordinary income (withdrawals made prior to age 59½ may also be subject to a 10% penalty tax).

The Roth IRA

The Roth IRA is similar to a traditional IRA in that earnings grow without being subject to current taxes. Eligible taxpayers may contribute up to $4,000 ($5,000 if age 50 or older) of earned income to a Roth IRA for 2007. The annual limit applies in the aggregate, whether contributions are made to a Roth IRA, a traditional IRA, or a combination of the two. Contributions of earned income may be made to a Roth IRA on behalf of a spouse even if he or she has little or no earned income.

However the Roth IRA is different from the traditional IRA in several important ways:

- Contributions are made only with after-tax dollars (since contributions are made after taxes, they can always be withdrawn tax-free and penalty-free).
- Income eligibility phase-out limits for contributing to a Roth IRA for 2007 are $99,000 to $114,000 for single taxpayers and $156,000 to $166,000 for married taxpayers filing jointly.
- There are no required minimum distributions from the Roth IRA at age 70½ (as there are with a traditional IRA). Contributions can be made beyond age 70½, as long as there is earned income.
- Withdrawals of earnings can be made income-tax and penalty tax free if the account has existed for at least five tax years, and any one of the following conditions is met:
  - 1) Attainment of age 59½,
  - 2) Disability,
  - 3) The distribution is for the first time purchase of a home up to a lifetime limit of $10,000, or
  - 4) Death of the account holder.

Converting a Traditional IRA to a Roth IRA

If you qualify, you may be able to convert your existing traditional IRA funds to a Roth IRA. This conversion of assets from a traditional IRA to a Roth IRA can only be done if the individual or married couple has AGI of no more than $100,000 for the year of the conversion and the taxpayer is not a married individual filing a separate tax return. In addition, it can only be done on an after-tax basis. Therefore, the account holder must pay ordinary income taxes on the portion of the traditional IRA that is taxable (i.e., deductible contributions and all earnings). Among the tax rules to be considered when converting a traditional IRA to a Roth IRA is the important pro-rata distribution rule, which should be discussed with your tax advisor. (Please note that, beginning in 2010, the $100,000 AGI limit and the tax filing status requirement described above for Roth IRA conversions will no longer apply.)

Besides your AGI, there are a number of factors to consider before choosing between the traditional IRA and the Roth IRA. They include your age, number of years until retirement, growth rate earned on your investments, as well as your current and anticipated future income tax brackets. Generally, contributing to a Roth IRA can be more advantageous than making nondeductible contributions to a traditional IRA. The two accounts are treated similarly in the year a contribution is made (i.e., no deduction is allowed), but upon withdrawal, distributions from the Roth IRA are potentially tax-free, while taxes must be paid on the earnings portion of the distribution from a traditional, nondeductible IRA. If you are eligible to make both a deductible traditional IRA contribution and a Roth IRA contribution, your situation is even more complicated. Your financial advisor and tax advisor can assist you in conducting the necessary analysis to determine which type of IRA would help benefit your particular situation.

This article is intended to provide a general discussion of traditional and Roth IRAs. Neither UBS Financial Services Inc. nor its financial advisors provide tax or legal advice.
