Property Owners Organize Against Road Project

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

Property owners along Highway 25 North met last Saturday to discuss the proposed expansion of the highway to five lanes, which would result in many businesses losing most or all of their parking and homes losing significant portions of their front yards. They have organized under the name,

Board Votes Against Chickens

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

A recent application to harbor chickens in Berea turned into a kangaroo court last week, where a city ordinance took a back seat to neighbor complaints and disagreements within the board of adjustments. The hearing was the latest chapter in the story of the Berea chicken ordinance, an ordinance that advocates struggled to achieve for months while city council members and planning and zoning members dickered back and forth.

Berea firefighters were called to the Holiday Motel on Monday at 11:28 a.m., where one room was on fire. That room sustained heavy damage, with another suffering moderate damage. The cause of the fire is still undetermined, though the room of origin seems to be a bathroom. The rooms were rented out at the time, but unoccupied.

Depot Quilters Share Love of Fabric Arts With Community

By Christie Green
Citizen Reporter

For ten years, the L and N Depot Quilters have been sharing inspiration, experience and passion for fabric arts with each other and with the community. The group operates informally with no officers or dues, and "anyone who's interested can just drop in," says Carol Ann White. They meet every Tuesday from 1-4 p.m. at the Berea Housing Authority's Community Room on Orchard Street.

Each quilter brings her own level of experience and expertise to the group. Rita Barlow, who is known for the speed with which she finishes projects, says that "sharing new piecing techniques with each other" is one of the best parts of the group. Arritta Morris agreed. She

Hoefers – Artists Who Came Home

By Beth Curlin
Special to the Citizen

The Berea Arts Council will present Chili Night Out on February 25. This is a silent and live auction and the group's major fund raising effort for the year.

Two of the artists donating art this year are Bruce and Kelley Hoefler, owners of Turning Wheel Pottery where they both live and work. They have been here three years this April, coming "home" to Berea in 2001 after a sojourn out west for 10 years.

"It was almost a spiritual journey, moving back here," Bruce said in interview at the studio on Liza Allen Road in the Red Lick area. "I wanted to see what was over the next hill, what was out west, and now I have much more of an appreciation of what's here," he said, adding that the vitality of the artist community has been a real plus.

Bruce was truly coming "home", as he grew up in Berea. Kelley, a native of Eureka, California, where the redwoods grow, and Bruce met as students at Berea College where they were majoring in agriculture. At that time, 1999, they said Berea wasn't offering what they were interested in so the two ended up finishing their degrees at other institutions. "But Berea got us off to a great start," Bruce remembers. First, Bruce got an internship at the University of Alaska, Fairbanks, working "Berea Citizens for Common Sense on 25N," and are organizing a meeting on February 7 at City Hall at 6:30 p.m. for a public discussion with the city and its citizens.

The Kentucky Department of Transportation and the City of Berea presented the design for the five-lane expansion of Highway 25 North at a public meeting on Jan. 12, where many people expressed their concerns and objections. The State of Kentucky already owns the right of way for the expansion, land they purchased in 1948 when preparing for the original construction of the highway. Businesses and homes, for the most part, have built up parking lots and yards on this state right of way over the last six decades.

The expanded highway, which would run from Ellipse Street to the bypass, has been placed in the state budget, with construction slated to begin this fall or the spring of 2013. The group Berea Citizens for Common Sense, however, are hoping to stop those plans.

"Our goal is to stop the process of the five lane highway," Dan Sipple said, owner of the Sipple's Chiropractic and Wellness Center. He stated that he would be losing all of his parking if the five lane expansion goes through.

Sipple continued, "Our point is let's finish the bypass and then see how the traffic patterns are, because the use of Highway 25 should go down."

City Administrator Randy Stone said they have been lobbying the legislature since 2005 for funding to expand Highway 25 N, since the area has had such congested traffic as vehicles are going in and out of town, plus entering and exiting businesses along the highway.

"We as a staff have evaluated all the entrances and exits to Berea for the last 15 years," Stone said. "For Prospect Street, we received federal funding for that, and around 12 years ago we were able to use state funding for highway 595. With the schools out by Highway 25 North, the congestion has increased even more, so we knew there needed to be expansion."

The completion of the bypass has not been scheduled, complicating the plan to wait for the 25N project until it's done. It is on the state's list of approved projects, but funding has not been allocated. Funding for the Highway 25 North expansion, several millions worth, is coming out of a different pot of money,

The property owners, according to Sipple, know that expansion is necessary for the highway, but they believe that five lanes are overkill. They would like to see one turning lane added instead, to solve the congestion problems. This may be a hard sell, however, since the Kentucky Department of Transportation did a traffic study this past summer, resulting in the recommendation for building five lanes.

"They plan on building a road that is sufficient for 2030," Stone said. "The state takes the traffic patterns, and then has a formula they use to estimate traffic in 20 years."

The plan is for the expanded highway to allow traffic to keep moving at all times, with a pedestrian sidewalk on the west side and a ten foot wide shared-use pathway on the east side.

Keith Taylor, who lives on the 600 block of Richmond Road, has been concerned about the expansion not only because of losing half of his front yard, but also for safety reasons.

"I've got a house full of teenagers, coming and going, just learning to drive," Taylor said. "It already scares me to death with them pulling out with two lanes, but to have five lanes, that's going to be a lot of road."

Taylor stated that he didn't know about the state owned right of way when he purchased his home, which would have prevented him from buying it. The foundation of the home had to be fixed when they dynamited for the bypass. With a rock shelf in front of his home, he is sure they will have to dynamite his yard for the highway expansion.

"You can imagine what will happen to my foundation when they're dynamiting right in front of my home," Taylor said.

Stone admitted that the expansion from two lanes to five lanes is the biggest change for a road that the City of Berea has experienced, affecting more property owners and business than any project conducted before. Even the bypass, he said, involved land that was not occupied for the most part.

Sipple stated that 90 percent of all the business located on Highway 25 North were represented at the meeting on Saturday, with approximately 25 people in attendance. Locally owned businesses as well as chains will have their property significantly affected by the expansion, with Circle K, Sipple Chiropractic, Berea Drug, Linville Insurance, McDonalds, AT&T and Davis and Hilton to name a few.

Many representatives will be present at the Feb. 7 meeting at City Hall, and they are hoping staff from the City of Berea as well as the general public will attend. They would like the meeting to be a discussion of how to avoid the expansion which would have such a significant effect on all of them. In their communications from the state, Sipple reported, the message has basically been "tough luck". They are hoping to get the City of Berea to work with them, in requesting the state to stop the planned expansion and reevaluate Highway 25N after the bypass is completed.

"They're talking about possibly putting a lot of businesses out of business," Taylor said. "These are business I go to and use. I don't want them shutting down."

To the friends of Ruby Stewart

The family of Ruby Stewart would like to take this opportunity to thank our many friends who reached out to us when she passed away.

So many people stopped by our home, brought food or other items, visited us at the funeral home or attended the funeral. Mom would have been so pleased to know that so many people counted her as their friend.

As we stood in line at visitation, we were comforted time and again by friendly faces of current and long ago friends and by the stories shared about Mom.

We loved our mother with all our hearts and were blessed to have her with us during her lifetime. We are also blessed to live in a place where people come together in times of sadness just to say I care and she was my friend.

To those who came, called or sent a warm message of sympathy, we thank you from the bottom of our hearts. Your actions will not ever be forgotten, just as we hope Mom's memory will live on in our hearts forever.

WHY DID THE CHICKEN CROSS THE ROAD?

Chicken Decision Concerns Readers

Dear Editor,

I attended the January 24th Board of Adjustments meeting regarding Katie Gardner and Chris Smith's application to have backyard chickens. They met all the criteria of the ordinance, but were denied a permit, then denied a reason for such actions.

Instead, the board chair allowed attacks on the applicants' character, baseless accusations unrelated to the application, and even "information" about chickens gleaned from somewhere on the internet to be presented as facts. One resident personally attacked Katie, and the board chair allowed it, until a member asked that the chair make sure comments were addressed to the board.

It also seemed the ordinance itself was "on trial." The board chair said they "felt" that it wasn't appropriate even though they wouldn't say why. The ordinance has already been established and Katie and Chris met the requirements. So the question remains: Why were they denied? According to the current Board of Adjustments, they don't have to say.

Thanks,
Jodie Leidecker
Berea

Dear Editor,

I am writing to express disappointment and frustration with a recent Board of Adjustments meeting. My friend Katie Gardner wants to have a few hens in her backyard and met every qualification of the "chicken ordinance." Yet some on the board "felt" negatively about her proposal and denied it.

One person opposed to her keeping hens not only improperly contacted Board of Adjustments officers at their homes to plead their case, they shared misleading and flat-out false information about backyard poultry at the hearing. Also, those opposed, attacked Katie personally with charges having nothing to do with chickens or her ability to care for them. It was some of the most un-neighborly behavior I have ever witnessed and made me sad for our town.

Happily, one adjacent neighbor did attend the meeting and spoke in favor of her keeping chickens, apparently not vociferously enough to sway dissenting board members. There were also about 30 Berea residents in attendance at the meeting, some of whom were her neighbors, all there in support of Katie's right to harbor a few hens.

Unfortunately, the long meeting was poorly run, inconsistent, and towards the end nearing total bedlam. The Chair seemed content to allow long-winded, unrelated diatribes against Katie. One board member repeatedly reminded speakers to stick to the issue, how Katie was meeting the requirements of the ordinance. But this was mostly in vain, as most of the presentation by dissenters was about how they didn't care for Katie as a person and didn't care for chickens in general.

Having children who play outside, keeping a vegetable garden and composting food scraps are things any member of our community should be applauded for. Yet dissenters twisted these outdoor activities to suit their purposes, clamoring about the unseemliness of growing food in one's yard, the "junk" of outside toys and the mess of fading plants in August drought.

Rather than hearing the merits or negatives of keeping chickens, which has already been discussed ad-nauseum in numerous city meetings, it seems to me the job of the Board of Adjustments is to use the ordinance, created and approved by City Council, to rule based on finding of fact. This did not happen. How are we to have faith in governmental process if hearings such as this are not conducted appropriately and are more about who you are, who you know, and what misleading information you can dredge up from the internet?

I legally have chickens in my backyard and will have Open House this May. I plan to invite elected and appointed city officials, staff and Berea residents. This will give folks an opportunity to see an actual urban chicken coop and review how it fits into a Berea neighborhood. I'm hoping this will be a fun way to share first-hand knowledge about chickens. Because it seems when it comes to backyard hens, there is a vast difference between perception and reality, something that apparently also applies to some of our neighbor relationships as well.

From our readers

In Response to Editor's Opinion

Dear Editor:

I want to clear something up. It seems to me that people who read your column last week were misled. I ask you, when did an elected official participating in a public meeting and asking legitimate questions become blowing hot air? As I see it, staying on top of what is going on in the city departments and asking the right questions is a big part of the job the people of Berea elected me to do. In the meeting of the tourism commission that you wrote about I thought the discussion was cordial on all sides.

When it comes to the purchase of any property the people deserve answers to the questions; "What is the purchase price?" "What does the fire marshal say is the maximum occupancy?" "How much money would have to be spent on getting it up to ADA building standards and on other renovations?" "How much will it take to operate it and who would be in charge of the operation?" "Is there adequate parking?" These are not unreasonable questions.

Before considering such a purchase there ought to be a concrete plan and the answers to those questions. And as a good steward of the taxpayers dollars I wouldn't be doing what the citizens elected me to do if I did not ask these questions. I have only the best interests for the future of Berea and all our citizens at heart.

Thank you,
Jerry Little
Berea

Dear Ms. Myers

Reluctantly, I feel compelled to respond to your Open Letter to the New President of Berea College in the December 1, 2011 issue. I say reluctantly because of the wisdom of not getting into a debate with someone who buys printers ink in bulk.

I found your article to be ill-informed, naive and mean-spirited. I'll start with mean-spirited.

You saw fit to besmirch the "current president" based upon unattributed conversations. You imply the relationship between the College and City has deteriorated during President Shinn's tenure when compared to the tenures of Presidents Weatherford and Stephenson. I assure you nothing could be further from the truth.

I was City Attorney during President Weatherford's tenure and the relationship between the College and City during that period was completely adversarial primarily as a result of the actions of his Business vice-president, Karl Warming.

During President Stephenson's tenure, in response to a request for a small favor he informed me, by letter, that it was the College's position, at that time, to not do any favors for Berea or its citizens unless the College also benefitted. I replied that was a strange position for an organization that relied upon the benevolence of others. I still have that letter.

That was then. Now, during President Shinn's tenure, here are a few examples of College contributions to the City:

1. The College sold to the City their utilities at a price, which was significantly -- millions -- less than they could have sold them for on the open market. This was done in order to insure control of our utilities remained local;

2. The City approached the College about purchasing land for the new playground and ball fields. Instead of selling, the College leased more than 25 acres to the City for $1.00 per year;

3. The College has continued to support the Japanese Exchange Program, which originated in Berea, by donating rooms and food at Boone Tavern, as well as dinners at the President's home, to the Japanese visitors;

4. Collaborating with the City and State to bring the Artisan Center to Berea and solidify its place as the Arts and Crafts Capital of Kentucky;

5. Donating land for the bikeway along Highway 595;

6. Donating land for the bikeway from the City to Indian Fort Theatre;

7. Obtaining funding and artist to create the Fee and Students sculpture in the new city park on Main Street.

I think it is naive to believe we in the community should consider the College as much ours as the public school system, which we finance. Or, that the College should consider the town as much a part of its constituency as its students and employees. Maybe if the City helped support the College that might work. And I believe it is naive to expect that the College should invest its resources and energy into the community. If the College has extra resources and energy and chooses to do so, that's a benefit to the community. But its first obligation is to the College.

By the way, congratulations on your awards from the Kentucky Press Association.

Dear Berea Citizen,

I can't help but respond to the editor's "Step Back and Let Things Work." Our current economic conditions are a result of this media approach. How is that working out?

Mr. Lucas has it right. Jim, we welcome a thinking man to Berea. The Berea City government approach is to "Build it and They Will Come." Does that seem familiar, "Field of Dreams?"

I can't wait to see the tourism group's Power Point presentation justifying $575,000.00 for the old Purkey Buildings. How is a fifteen years plus white elephant worth that much money? How much does the county and the city assess this property? Show me three real estate appraisals from outside appraisers.

Just step back and let things work.

Filing Deadline Extended: Napier Stepping Down

Citizen Staff Report

Because of a pending lawsuit filed by those contesting the legislature's redistricting lines, the deadline for filing for state offices has been extended one week to February 7, 2012. Filings as of the original deadline on Tuesday could make for some interesting elections both in the May primary and again in the general election coming up in November.

Many Madison Countians were not happy that the 36th legislative district seat held for 28 years by Lonnie Napier would no longer represent Madison County. Napier has chosen not to seek re-election; two Republicans and one Democrat will vie for that seat.

If the new lines stand and no one else files by the extended deadline, Madison County will be divided into four House districts; the 80th, currently held by Danny Ford from Rockcastle County who will also not seek re-election, the 81st currently held by Rita Smart of Richmond, the 88th district now represented by Bill Farmer of Lexington and the 91st district which has long been held by Ted Edmunds of Jackson.

Only Edmunds is currently unopposed.

Records from the Secretary of State indicate that four Republicans, Tiffany Nash of Richmond, Todd Hoskins from Liberty and Roger Coldiron and Mark Eaton, both of Mt. Vernon will face off in the May Primary for the seat in the 80th district.

A Berean, Mary R. McGill Long, has filed as a Republican candidate and will face the Democratic incumbent, Rita Smart in the 81st legislative district in the general election.

Farmer will face fellow Republican Jaime Clark, also of Lexington in the primary. The winner will go up against the only Democrat to file, John C. Tudor of Richmond in November for the right to represent the 88th district.

In Madison County, three women have filed for Circuit Court Clerk, the position currently held by Linda Spurlock Cates who will be retiring at the end of this term. Darlene Snyder, Brandy Winkler and Jennifer Webb, all Democrats, are seeking election to that office.

The filing deadline for eight non-partisan seats on the Berea City Council is August 14, 2012. Only one person has filed so far, Brandon Rutherford.

Webb Seeks Clerk's Office

Berea native and long-time judicial paralegal Jennifer L. Webb has announced her campaign for Madison County Circuit Court Clerk. Webb, who has served Madison County as a paralegal and Teen Court coordinator in the 25th Judicial District since 1995, feels her track record of success in current and past roles has prepared her well for public office.

"I'm very excited to have the opportunity to run for Madison County Circuit Court Clerk. My 16 years as Paralegal for the judges of the 25th Judicial District have prepared me well to serve as Circuit Clerk," said Webb. "I look forward to meeting more members of our community and discussing the issues of this very important election. My work throughout the county provides many examples of how I can create a Circuit Court Clerk office that is more responsive to the current needs of a growing Madison county."

Webb, who has served the public in various capacities, has a long record of success in Madison County. Throughout her public service career, Webb has displayed a consistent dedication to those whom she serves; a dedication that has led to many professional and personal awards.

In 2011, Webb received the Richmond Chamber of Commerce Community Service Award, the Kentucky Court of Justice Law Day Award and several Kentucky Legislative Outstanding Citizen citations. Furthermore, Webb, serving as both a grant author and co-author, has been instrumental in securing for Madison County over $500,000 for DUI and Drug Court-related grants. In addition to these successes, Webb is currently involved with numerous professional and civic organizations, including the Madison County Safety Coalition, the Madison County Agency for Substance Abuse Policy and Madison County Youth in Action.

When asked about her dedication to the community, Webb maintains her perspective, saying "through my involvement with various non-profit boards, I understand well what the public rightfully expects from its Clerk of the courts and I am prepared to meet these high standards."

Jennifer L. Webb, a lifelong resident of Madison County, is married to Curtiss Willis, a fraudulent claims investigator for Kentucky Farm Bureau, and resides in Richmond.

The couple has two children, Adriannah and Ayden, and are supporters of the Madison Southern Girls Basketball program. A public servant by day, Webb counts kickboxing, running, gardening and cooking as cherished hobbies. A committed servant to the people of Madison County, Webb brings unrivaled experience to the table in this election.

Mr. King Responds:

Obviously, Mr. Strange and I hold opposing views when it comes to understanding what constitutes racism. His view (which is still quite common) is that racism is a one-way street, an offense which only white people are guilty of. I can remember forty years ago when the argument was offered that since blacks did not have the "power" to oppress whites, blacks could not possibly be guilty of racism. That seems to be consistent with Mr. Strange's reasoning today; even though the racist remarks he is defending comes from the man who currently occupies the most "powerful" political office in the world.

I don't need to read the president's books in order to understand where he stands today regarding the issue of racism. His recent declaration of full and complete confidence and support for Attorney General Eric Holder, and everything he has done as AG; which includes dropping the voter intimidation case against members of the NBPP (New Black Panther Party), as well as instructing his staff that any new charges coming into the AG office in which the victims were white and the perpetrators were black were not to be pursued.

I believe most people know who the NBPP were supporting during the 2008 election, and that Obama enjoys a friendly relationship with that group. Isn't the concept of pay-back, commonly referred to by liberals as "reparation," going a bit too far when a group who advocates the need to "kill a few cracker babies" is essentially given a free pass by the President and his AG? I can't imagine any reasonable person arguing that Obama and Holder don't possess the power to "oppress," and if actions like these don't rise to the level of oppression, then pray tell what does? Anyone who can square calling Newt Gingrich's assertion that President Obama is "the food stamp president" as "racist," while agreeing to give a pass to the NBPP or any other black person or entity being charged with oppressive actions against whites is certainly no fan of the late Reverend Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

It appears to me that, although Mr. Strange includes Dr. King among his heroes and regularly attends marches and celebrations in his honor, he is not very familiar with the man or his "true" legacy (all black people and their causes aren't the same). I can't help but wonder if he has actually read any of Dr. King's books? In his speeches and in the critically important book "Stride Toward Freedom," Dr. King clearly rejects the concept of "reparation," or man repaying evil with evil. And we should not forget, it was black "sons of Africa" who captured fellow blacks and sold them to the white slave traders. Dr. King must have been aware of that important fact in so far as understanding that evil is common to all, regardless of race; for he clearly identified the problem as good vs. evil rather than black vs. white.

Another important distinction is Dr. King's Christian identity: "I want it to be known throughout Montgomery and throughout this nation that we are Christian people...and we believe in the teachings of Jesus." Dr. King knew that Jesus did not teach his followers to repay evil with evil, violence with violence or racism with racism ("vengeance is mine" says the Lord); but in fact called us to love our enemies (though we may detest their actions).

To rationally justify racist attitudes and behaviors because someone has been a victim of racism is a liberal, not a Christian position; and that is why the dreams of Obama and his father do not line up with Reverend King's Dream. It is the content of Obama's character, not the color of his skin that disqualifies him from serving in the highest office of the land (in my opinion backed by my voice and my vote; and I trust by Dr. King and Jesus as well).

Shearer Scores 1,000 Points

By Jonathan Schinhofen

Citizen Sports Reporter

For the Berea Community Lady Pirates basketball team, number 00 is anything but a double zero. Last Friday Sophia Shearer, the 5' 10" senior forward who wears the curious 00 on her jersey, found herself in some rarefied air as she scored the 1000th point of her career with the Lady Pirates.

A banner hangs in the main gymnasium at Berea Community, listing the all-time record holders. She has cracked the list of the top 15 scoring leaders and the top eight rebounders in Lady Pirates history. This means, of course, that the school is going to have to make new banners to acknowledge Shearer's accomplishments. At the rate she is going, she ought to end her career at number 14 or 13 on the all-time scoring list, and 5th or better on the all-time rebounding list.

Shearer says she is fortunate to have had the help of some other members of that august company. Chelsea Atwater, who is 9th all time in scoring and 2nd in rebounding, graduated when Shearer was in 8th grade. Atwater now helps coach the team.

Elizabeth Horn, who is 5th in all-time scoring and the career rebounding record holder, graduated a year later.

"Elizabeth made an impact on the way I play, on the way I am," said Shearer.

She feels grateful to be able to return the favor to Elizabeth's younger sister Alexandria Horn, who is one of the team's 7th grade players.

Regarding all of her coaches, Shearer said, "They have helped me become a better person in all areas. I enjoy that part of it almost as much as I enjoy playing the game."

Shearer did not even pick up a basketball until 6th grade. Current assistant coach Edward Sexton, who was Shearer's 6th grade social studies teacher, "hounded her and hounded her" to try out for the middle school team, according to her mother Rene Meadows.

Lake With the Right Stuff

by Jonathan Schinhofen

Citizen Sports Reporter

There are a number of reasons that a college would jump at the chance to enroll a student like Madison Southern senior Ethan Lake. He is carrying a 4.0 grade point average, has two English courses from Eastern Kentucky University under his belt, and has completed Advanced Placement classes in human geography, world civilizations and United States history. He is also currently taking AP courses in English, chemistry, and calculus, and has demonstrated leadership ability as president of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and Corps Commander of the ROTC on Madison Southern's campus.

Lake also plays a pretty good game of football, which prompted coaches at the University of the challenges that football at the college level will present.

Lake has been a starting wide receiver for Southern since his sophomore season. Last season for the Eagles, he led the team in receiving yards and shared the lead for receptions. He can play cornerback, which he did as a freshman, but new head coach Jon Clark brought changes that allowed Lake to concentrate on one position.

In years past, there were not enough players to have designated offensive and defensive units. In order to keep the team going, each player had to play whatever position was required of him. Clark increased the size of the team to the point that he could play two-platoon football. Each player has his position and only a few players will line up on both sides of the ball.

With over 60 players on the roster his senior year, Lake had to compete for his starting position. He had always been a starter at some position, so he knew he had the skills.

But under Coach Clark, he knew that if another guy could outwork him, he might lose his starting job.

This experience should serve him well at the college level, where the teams can be so large that there is an endless supply of third- and fourth- and fifth-stringers just waiting for a chance to get on the field.

The University of the Cumberlands currently has an all-American wide receiver, so Lake might be buried in the depth chart for his first year. But he also believes that he can earn playing time.

Lake summed up his expectations by saying, "It's up to me and how hard I work, how hard the person next to me works."

The University of the Cumberlands is in Williamsburg, Kentucky.

Lake said it was "a good enough piece away from home that I feel like I'm gone, and just close enough that I feel like I can come home."

His mother Anna said, "We've toured across the country, and Cumberland just kind of fell in place. We left the decision up to him, and I think he made a great choice."

"They have their stuff together down there," Lake said. "They really know what they're doing. They just have a great program."

The football program at the University of the Cumberlands is in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA). The NAIA football championship is determined by a tournament with 16 teams, and the University of the Cumberlands usually earns a spot in the post-season.

Although Lake has a football scholarship, he is realistic about life after football. He expects his scholarship to lead to a career rather than more football. He is currently interested in the criminal justice program at the University of the Cumberlands, but he has demonstrated that his mind is every bit as flexible in the classroom as his body is on the football field, so it won't be a problem if he changes his plans.

House Play to be Performed at Berea College

"This Is My Heart For You," a play by Kentucky author Silas House, examines the complexities of a small Appalachian town that must look at its own heart when a local incident exposing perceived inequality becomes national news.

Loosely based on a true event, the avant-garde play is about two young men who are thrown out of a community-run swimming pool after accusations of "improper behavior." The town is divided on whether the pool manager is a hero or a bigot. The play shines a light on the bigger issues of equality, hypocrisy and compassion in America today.

House, interim director of Berea College's Appalachian center, says when he first set out to write the play he simply wanted to create something about contemporary Appalachia, and first thought the play would be about the complexities of coal-mining in the region.

"But last summer there were several incidents about equality—alleged hate crimes, discrimination, etc.—in the area, and the theme just presented itself," House says. "The issue of fairness and equality speaks to everything about who we are as a people. Appalachia has always served as a microcosm for America, so I think of this not so much as a regional story as a national—or even global—one."

House says the play also explores issues of belief and faith, two themes that have been present in all his work. "My main goal is to look at religion, belief and faith in all their complications and never to ridicule or simplify them," he says.

House is best known for his novels, which have become national bestsellers and garnered several major prizes, but two plays, "The Hurting Part" (2005) and "Long Time Traveling" (2009) have previously been produced.

"This is an amazing opportunity for our students and for our program to work with a contemporary writer such as Silas," says Adanna Barton, who serves as an assistant professor of theatre at Berea.

"What is even more exciting is that we have him right here on campus so we can engage him in our rehearsals." Barton adds that the play includes music, dancing and multimedia elements.

The local group, Sugar Tree, will provide music for the premiere. "This fantastic world premiere will make audiences laugh, cry and sing out loud," Barton says. "Most importantly, this play reinvigorates the meaning of the word 'community.'" Barton is planning talk-backs with the cast, director and author after each performance.

Assisting Barton in bringing this production to life are Shan R. Ayers, professor of theatre, who will complete the scenic and lighting elements, and Mary Ann Shupe, the Berea College theatre's resident costume designer.

Performances are scheduled for February 22-25 at 8 p.m. and February 26 at 2 p.m.. All performances are in the Jelkyl Drama Center on the Berea College campus. For reservations, please call the Theatre Laboratory Box Office at 859-985-3300.

A signing performance for the hearing impaired will be given during the matinee on Sunday, February 26.

Fettingis Back for BAC Watercolor Workshop

The Berea Arts Council welcomes back nationally-known watercolor artist Joe Fettingis for a three-day workshop in Berea, Kentucky. The workshop will be held Thursday through Saturday, June 7-9, 2012 from 9:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Beginner to advanced watercolor painters are welcome.

In this intensive workshop, students will observe several short demonstrations of specific techniques by Mr. Fettingis which they will follow up with hands-on application.

Topics will include: how to control moisture; how values help move colors; how the mid-value holds all the darker values of a painting together; the art of glazing, how to balance and create movement in paintings, and much more. Different subject matter will be painted each day. Joe's dynamic and effective teaching style will help students leave not only with improved painting skills, but with the inspiration and motivation to continue painting!

picked up quilting after retirement and was working on a "quilt as you go" project for her daughter, who lives in Hollywood.

Linda Murdoch, who has been sewing with the Depot Quilters for four years, was working on a brilliantly colored ornamental piece with batik fabrics, teal ribbon, beads, and feather stitching.

"I like to play with different materials and fabrics," she said. "It's like doodling with thread."

The Depot Quilters started in 2002, when Veda (Doodles) Woodward and Pat Jennings began meeting in the lobby of the Berea Depot at the encouragement of Belle Jackson, the executive director of the Berea Tourism Commission. Other quilters joined in until the group outgrew their space and shifted to the Housing Authority community room.

Although the group is more a "sit and sew" group than a quilting club or guild, the quilters do work on projects together.

Pat Jennings describes this process, "If someone wishes to do something, they can tell the group. Then if others wish to join in they can, but no one needs to feel the need to do something that (she is) not inclined to do."

The group works together on Care Quilts, where everyone brings fabric and materials to share. They use the rag-quilt style because of how quickly they can be put together and how snuggly and comforting they are. They make them for babies, for quilters or family members with cancer or other illnesses, and for quilting friends who are moving away. The group's most recent Care Quilt is for a fellow quilter with breast cancer. She likes butterflies, so everyone brought in different materials with a butterfly motif.

Carla Gilbert displayed the care quilt that the group had made for her before a surgery last year. "While I was recovering from the surgery, I would just wrap myself in that quilt," she said. "It felt so comforting to be warmed by the quilt and by the thoughts of the women who care so much about me."

The quilters also take on projects that serve the community. They have made several "raffle quilts" for local service groups, including Hospice Care Plus, Friends of the Library, Union Church, and Bereans United for Utility and Rent Relief (BUURR). Some of the quilters submit their work to the Alzheimer's Art Quilt Initiative, where decorative mini quilts from across the national are auctioned on-line to raise money for research. They have even sent quilts as goodwill gifts to Berea's sister city, Kiyosato, Japan. The group is currently making quilted hearts in various sizes and styles to decorate the new offices of a Lexington oncologist.

Many of the quilters are members of Quilt Artists of Kentucky, the Berea affiliate of the Kentucky Heritage Quilt Society. Each year, the guild selects eight quilts to go to the American Quilters Society National Event. At the 2011AQS Quilt Show and Contest in Knoxville, TN, their quilts took first place in the "Ultimate Guild Challenge."

The Quilters participate in the Berea Arts Council's Quilt Extravaganza every August. Each year, they set themselves a "challenge" that results in a group exhibit for the Extravaganza. A challenge is based around a theme, a specific fabric, style, or pattern. For the 2011 Quilt Extravaganza, the challenge was "A River Runs Through It," based on a common material with a water design. Thirty-one pieces were completed and hung together on display. The challenge for this year's extravaganza is "Flying Things." The finished pieces can be no bigger than 36 inches and no less than 12, and they must include three "flying geese" blocks in the design.

The group also takes trips to quilt shows in the region. At their meeting on the 24th, some had just returned from the annual Jabez Quilt Seminar in Russell County with new patterns and techniques to share. Becky Knauer displayed the beginnings of a "Shiner's View" quilt pattern whose large blocks showcased her choice of fabrics with beach motifs. Diane Steinbrickner had taken a class on piecing curves and brought her completed work, a beautiful stylized tree, to share.

Anyone with an interest in the fabric arts is welcome at the Berea Depot Quilters. When asked about the process for joining, Carol Ann White said, "Just show up on Tuesdays at one."

CHICKENS

Adams Street brought a request to the board of adjustments on Jan. 25 for a conditional use permit to harbor chickens, after being turned down in August of last year. One neighbor, and one relative of another adjacent neighbor, had spoken strongly against the permit at that meeting. The request ended up being turned down again in a 3-2 vote, with a debate taking place when chair Paul Dean stated that they didn't have to give a finding of fact for why it was declined.

In her opening remarks, Gardner said of the August application, "I was completely prepared to address the requirements of the ordinance as I understood them . . . but I was completely unprepared to address the inappropriate, exaggerated and extralegal complaints of my neighbors."

She went on to cite the credentials of her and her husband in owning chickens and caring for the health concerns, informing the board that she was a registered nurse and had taken care of chickens on their property in Rockcastle County. The Berea codes office had been by to measure her property, and Phillip Hurt from that office informed the board that as long as the chicken coop was in one particular space in her yard, then it met the requirements of the ordinance.

Collette Ingram, who does not own adjacent property but appeared as a representative of her brother who does, registered complaints at the August and January meetings. Robert and Sue Johnson, the other adjacent neighbors lodging complaints, also testified at both meetings.

Gardner reported that Ingram stated at the August meeting that the owning of chickens was a "family affair," since her parents had once owned Gardner's property. She stated that this concern was not valid, since she and her husband Christopher Smith were now the owners. Gardner also mentioned in her initial remarks that the complaining neighbors spoke of her unsightly yard when they stated she shouldn't be able to have chickens.

"They do not raise food on their yard," Gardner said, when stating that the garden items had been spoken of as unsightly. "and they hire people to care for their yards, unlike us . . . but no formal complaint has ever been filed against us. And no one has personally complained to us. It would have been much more appropriate to talk to us than bring complaints to the board of adjustments hearing."

Kenny Rowlette, Ingram's brother who owns adjacent property, does not reside there but bought it, according to Ingram, to keep the home in the family.

There was apparent tension between Ingram and her neighbors during the board of adjustments meeting. Ingram, when first referring to Gardner, said, "she, sorry, I can't ever remember her name."

Ingram brought up health problems she had found when looking up sites on the Internet, the question of what would happen to the chicken poop, the possibility of property values decreasing with chickens in the yard and different vermin that could be around chickens.

"Organic eggs can be bought, and once again your neighbors have come and taken their time to come up here, the health, welfare and safety of homeowners should be just as much or more of a concern than just wanting eggs and chickens," Ingram said.

Near the end of her comments, Ingram made personal complaints about Gardner's property and upkeep, stating a mattress or something like it had been left on the curb, there had been apple slices at the fence line which Gardner said was a compost pile, and leaves were left on the property line as of 3 p.m. that day. Another neighbor, Steven Knuckles, stated later that those were his leaves. Ingram also listed the smell of chickens as a potential nuisance.

"I'm all for green," Ingram said. "I like to recycle. I'm all for that. I love the sights of the rain barrels and I'm all for Mother Earth."

She mentioned two places listed on the Internet as evidence of the greening of Berea, the EcoVillage and the renovations of Boone Tavern, but said, "at Boone Tavern I didn't see any chickens out there."

Sue Johnson stood up at one point and addressed Gardner, stating, "You're not a very friendly neighbor because you very rarely speak and I very rarely see you . . . not once did I have chickens because I had respect of my neighbors."

Two members of the board interrupted Sue around that point, stating that she should keep her comments to the subject at hand and testify to the board instead of addressing Gardner.

Johnson ended her comments with, "next year we'll be up here because she wants a cow."

Knuckles, the third adjacent neighbor, stated that he didn't have a problem with it, and they should let her try it, and have chickens. He said that Ingram had been up to his property a couple of times, talking to him about it, but after thinking about it he decided that Gardner should be able to have chickens.

Ingram questioned him at one point, stating that his wife's, and not his name, was on the deed. Knuckles later replied that her (Ingram's) name was not on a deed either, which drew applause from some in the audience.

After her neighbors' comments, Gardner addressed the board of adjustments, stating that nowhere in the ordinance did it state that neighbors had to approve or reach consensus about someone having chickens.

Board of adjustments member George Oberst made a motion to approve the conditional use permit, and Richard Martin seconded it. Board of adjustment members Judy Drake, chair Paul Dean and Craig Dollins all voted no. Oberst requested that those who voted no state why, so the public would have the information for why such a permit would get denied or not be in compliance.

Dean responded, "Each person has a right to voice his opinion on any vote that he does. I don't question you on any vote that you vote on."

He informed Gardner that she could go to the Circuit Clerk next. When she asked for a finding of fact, he stated they did not have to give one.

Oberst later read the ordinance at the request of an audience member, stating after he finished, "I don't understand what has been violated in this ordinance that would cause it to be turned down."

Martin told Gardner that she could take one finding of fact; that one of her neighbors didn't need to call a board of adjustment member at 9 p.m. on Saturday to try to lobby for his vote in her favor.

mission team from Union Church will be hosting a Souper Bowl movie night to help raise support for their March mission trip to Jamaica. The soup supper begins at 6:30 p.m. followed by the showing of the full length documentary film Life and Debt. Discussion will follow. Popcorn and snacks will also be available.

Life and Debt is a documentary film which shows the devastating and negative effects that globalization has had on Jamaica and other developing countries. The mission team would like people to come out and learn how to be a part of the solution.

Donations from this event will help the mission team travel to the high need region of Jamaica, known as St. Mary's Parish. The team will be working with the RAISE Jamaica organic agriculture project of Christian Services International ministries.

The long term goal of RAISE (Restoring Agriculture and Investing in Sustainable Enterprise) is the development of at least eight to ten interdependent micro-enterprises that produce specific products for commerce while providing byproducts for use by the other micro-enterprises. (e.g. goats provide meat and dairy products for sale, fertilizer for crops, veterinary practicum experience).

Teri Mehler, the mission team leader states, "Our goal is to begin a long term relationship with the Jamaican nationals that are working on this project, to gain their trust and to learn from them what they need and how we can help." The plans for this team involve several projects on the donated 196 acres of land. These projects will include the construction of a greenhouse, securing irrigation and water catchment.

Those traveling with the mission team include Teri Mehler, Debbonnaire Kovacs, Dr. Paul Smithson, Patti Smithson, Susana Lein, Hamrick Walters, Deborah Payne, Dr. John Payne and Chris McKenzie, along with pastors Elaine Pavulis and Dick Caldwell from Cincinnati Ohio.

A second fundraiser, A Mardi Gras Celebration is planned for Feb.19 at Union Church and will include a pancake luncheon at noon, a silent auction and many other fun activities.

at the Georgia Botanical Garden and after that, he and Kelley moved to Oregon where Bruce was involved in crop research on breeding different kinds of wheat at Oregon State University, while Kelley got her degree in wildlife management and did some work as a message therapist.

They took up pottery as a hobby and liked it so much that they began a business in Oregon. Each of them had been doing jobs that included a lot of travel and being in separate parts of the state most of the time and they really wanted to work together and spend more time together. Bruce took up contracting while they worked on bringing the pottery business up to speed. Meanwhile the housing market in Oregon went bad, the contracting dried up, and they joined many others in the country who lost their homes due to the recession.

"We knew that we were going to be homeless, and most people would think this is terrible, but it was a great thing, really. It spurred us into moving back to Berea where my family is, and our business has taken off here," he said. His mother, Betsy Hoefler and brother, Jim Hoefler, both helped them move, get into a home at Red Lick and begin their pottery business again.

"We were so fortunate. It turns out we are much happier here—it's such a vibrant art community and we've found a home," Bruce said as he stirred a glaze in a huge vat, carefully dipping pitchers and cups in preparing for a show in Philadelphia next month. "We lived in Oregon for 12 years, but something was just missing and we couldn't identify it," he mused, adding that now they have found community and an easier climate to survive in here in Kentucky. Potters in the Red Lick area, like Sara Culbreth and Teresa Cole, welcomed them and helped them to get set up and moved in, Bruce said. He and Kelley do a lot of gardening, cooking and outdoors activities like hiking and ziplining, and Kelley devotes time to her horse.

They have built a gallery on the front of the shop and hope to expand, closing in the gallery, building a new kiln and adding a pizza oven during the coming year. The business out of their small gallery has been as good as their sales from other retail locations, he added. And now they are selling wholesale through the Kentucky Crafted program.

Kelley has taken on the roll of glaze painter, giving all the pieces the floral motifs that their pottery is known for, as well as mixing the glazes which produce the unique dark copper reds and teals. The reds are especially difficult because the glazes are runny and hard to deal with in firing. It's taken her three or four years to get down the science of mixing and firing the copper glazes to achieve the right colors in the oxygen reduction process. The designs are both traditional and contemporary patterns, with a wide spectrum of styles from pears to bamboo. They fire the high-fired stoneware in a propane-fueled reduction kiln and their clay is called Loafer's Glory, from Kentucky Mud Works in North Carolina.

Bruce does most of the hand throwing and shaping at the moment, from cups, plates, huge bowls to tall vessels that he makes in sections.

"I just plain dig throwing pots on a wheel. When I first started throwing it was hard to get the clay centered, much less start pulling up the walls on a pot. I would fight and fight to keep a pot. But like anything else in life that we really enjoy, throwing started to get easier with the more time spent at the wheel. There is a Zen feeling from taking clay out, wedging it, then centering it and making a pot. It is very spiritual for me to see 24 pie pots I threw sitting on the shelf drying and visualizing the pies that will be baked in them. What I see from throwing is peace within myself. It gives me peace to be a part of the process making a pot someone will take home, use and enjoy. How I am feeling shows up in the pots I throw. I enjoy throwing at my own pace, one pot at a time and staying in the moment."

www.turningwheelpottery.net.

The Chili Night Out art auction will take place Saturday, Feb. 25, 2012 at Berea Community School Gymnasium. It will begin at 5:30 p.m., with the live art auction with auctioneer Kent Gilbert.

Shearer went out for the team, and began playing with the varsity team as a 7th grader. The next year, she had a good season for an 8th grader playing on the varsity team, scoring 93 points and pulling in 124 rebounds. Her coming-out party happened in her sophomore year, when she averaged 11 points and 10 rebounds a game. Since then, she's been making steady progress into the company of greats where she stands now.

The team honored Shearer Tuesday night by presenting her with a basketball signed by all the players and "1000 pts." written on it in silver ink.

It takes a lot of games to score 1000 points, and a lot of confidence. Meadows credits Berea basketball with helping build that confidence.

Meadows said, "When Sophia started playing [in 6th grade], she was a very shy, very insecure little girl. And I have watched basketball shape her into this confident young woman, and it has helped her physically and emotionally. She has just grown up by playing basketball."

It is unfortunate that Berea Community School is often shortened to "Berea" because being part of the community has so much to do with the success of its students and athletes. After a victory on Tuesday night, Shearer and Meadows could not say enough about the support they have both felt from their coaches and the other parents.

When she could not come to a game, Meadows said, other parents were always there to cheer Shearer on and to report back to Meadows how well her daughter had done.

Shearer's father, Allan Shearer said, "The encouragement of the coaches and families is unreal because Sophia has grown into a young woman" and they have the school to thank for that.

It is bittersweet for Shearer to be accomplishing these milestones as a senior.

"I just love it," she said. "I don't want it to end at all."

She said she definitely wants to play basketball in college. For Mom, of course, academics come first, but the family is looking for a school where she can play.

"She's going to be successful in whatever she decides to do when she graduates," said coach Jerry Bingham.

He should know, having been so helpful in Shearer's success so far.

Sophia Shearer stands with her parents, Rene and Allan Shearer.

These responsibilities of school board members are the reason Kentucky and other states set aside the month of January to thank local school board members during School Board Recognition Month. These five members of the Berea Independent Board of Education oversee a $12,500,000 budget and make decisions about multimillion-dollar building projects. All this is done in the face of shrinking state and federal dollars for education and tough economic times locally. But beyond those "macro" duties, they also make certain the individual child in the Berea Independent district gets what he or she needs to successfully learn in school and beyond.

HEALTH

Word From Berea Streets

How do you feel about a government health care plan?

Shannon Cooper from Berea said, "I support a government plan because I believe all Americans need access to healthcare and should not be afraid to seek the care they need due to the fear of cost."

Jackie Perman from Berea said, "I am in support of a plan because I think it would make healthcare cheaper for all people and balance the rich with the poor."

Bryan Baker from Wildie said, "I disagree with it. I believe capitalism and the open market create better healthcare than a socialist government run plan."

Beth Myers/The Citizen

Beth Bratcher, left, and Patricia Cartwright speak to two of the patients at the VA Outpatient Clinic on Pauline Dr. The clinic just celebrated its third anniversary, and serves approximately 5,000 patients from a seven county area.

VA Clinic Celebrates 3rd Year

By Beth Myers
 Citizen Editor

Even with a full waiting room, and busy nurses walking in and out of the front lobby, the VA Outpatient Clinic in Berea still manages to portray a laid-back, friendly environment.

"We're very tied to the community," Susan Daugherty said, the nurse manager at the VA Clinic. "We're not sitting in the middle of a metro area, but we're a community based clinic that's part of a smaller community. There's an ease of service here. The patients can basically park in our front door."

The Outpatient Clinic just celebrated its third anniversary in Berea on January 20. The clinic started out with one doctor, Dr. John Bennett, who saw his first patient on Jan. 20, 2009. Now the clinic boasts three doctors, having added two females in the last two years, Dr. Dicky Aikat and Dr. Rebecca Hammond.

Daugherty stated that one of the most important things that the Berea clinic offers is easier accessibility, since many veterans are reluctant to drive all the way to Lexington. With the economy still on the downswing, and gas prices so high, the Berea Clinic now offers a much more affordable option.

The Berea clinic is connected to the Lexington VA Hospital, which Daugherty said the staff calls, "the mother ship". There are three other community clinics connected to Lexington in Somerset, Hazard and Morehead. While the clinic sees many patients from Madison County, they also get a lot of veterans using their services from Laurel County, Whitley County and even as far as from Jellico, TN.

"We seem to be serving around a seven county area," Daugherty said.

There are a total of 14 employees currently working there, with clerical staff, social workers, nurses, the three physicians and a mental health counselor. They also have four volunteers working out of the clinic, with more interested who still have to go through the training and orientation process.

Staff at the VA Outpatient Clinic tend to be very close with their patients, especially the ones from the Berea community, and they celebrate many milestones with them. They threw a birthday party for Charles Wyatt from Berea in June of last year, in celebration of him turning 101. Wyatt then passed away a few months later, and Daugherty stated the staff was so happy they had thrown the party for him when they did.

"He was such a sweet man," Daugherty said, looking at the pictures from the party they had thrown for Wyatt. "We had missed his 100th birthday, and we were determined we were not going to miss his 101st. He seemed so pleased with that celebration."

The clinic has started a new health service for some of their patients who live farther away, called Telehealth. Patients can connect with their Berea physician via computer and camera, with the doctor and patient speaking to each other through the computer screen. A nurse will be physically with the patient, and can perform different tasks according to the doctor's directions. With the audio equipment, the doctor can hear the heart, lungs, and can even look closely at the ears and eyes with this sophisticated equipment.

With the VA Clinic in Somerset short-staffed right now, many of the patients from that area can connect with a Berea physician through the equipment at the Somerset clinic.

"By and large, the veterans have loved it," Dr. Hammonds said, who has seen several patients through Telehealth. "Even the older vets will say, 'well that was pretty neat.'"

Battered Woman Syndrome, More Than PTSD

Jonathan Schinhofen, ECU Graduate Student in Mental Health Counseling

As many as 1.5 million women are the victims of domestic violence every year. 25% of women will be victims of domestic violence in their lifetimes. On average, a battered woman will suffer 6.9 assaults from her intimate partner, and the average duration of such a relationship is 4.5 years. Each year, over half a million intimate partner assaults against women result in women receiving medical care.

One of the greatest misconceptions about domestic violence against women is the assumption that the victims do not end the relationship because they really want to be in the abusive relationship or even enjoy the abusive incidents themselves. If this were not the case, why would the women stay? Why would a woman endure repeated incidents, suffer multiple injuries, and continually risk her life to stay in a relationship she did not want to be in?

In recent years, the public has become increasingly aware of post traumatic stress disorder (PTSD), due in part to the difficulties faced by troops returning from combat. Symptoms of PTSD include repeated, distressing recollections and dreams of the traumatic events, avoidance of any situations that could spark such recollections, sleep and mood disturbance and an exaggerated startle response.

In the 1970s, psychologist Lenore Walker identified and named Battered Woman Syndrome (BWS) as a subcategory of PTSD. While many abused women suffer from PTSD, BWS involves symptoms that are not necessarily present in PTSD.

Central to BWS is the concept of learned helplessness. Experiments on dogs, rats, and even

Course Teaches Senior Citizens to Deal With Chronic Disease

Teaching individuals in the Bluegrass Region of Kentucky how to more effectively deal with chronic diseases through self-management is off to a great first year. The six week "CDSMP" course will be taught at the Berea Senior Citizens Center, on the dates of Feb. 16, 23, March 1, 8, 15, and 22, for those ages 60 or over.

So far the course has been taught in libraries, churches, housing complexes, senior citizens centers and corporate meeting rooms. At the Berea Center, it will be taught once a week for two and a half hours. It encourages a team approach to learning along with self-appraisal of negative habits.

The course work challenges participants to set and accomplish their own goals for dealing with all the associated symptoms of chronic diseases such as pain, stress, worry and fear. People with chronic diseases such as heart disease, arthritis, diabetes, asthma, emphysema and depression have all been helped by attending this course. Included with the course are the "Living a Healthy Life with Chronic Diseases" textbook and a relaxation CD that guides the listener in stress reduction techniques.

BWS

fish have shown that they can be "taught" that they have no power over their environment and nothing they do can prevent an unpleasant outcome. In the animal studies, this usually involved random electrical shocks. After dogs acquired learned helplessness, it proved to be extremely difficult to train the dogs to avoid the shocks, even when the door to their enclosure was open and they were shown the way out. Similar behavior was observed in concentration camps, where people simply lost the ability to take any self-protective action.

Learned helplessness is one of the telltale signs of BWS. It is the loss of this ability to be self-protective or to look ahead and make a plan for a better life that can make it difficult or impossible for a traumatized woman leave the relationship. The term "helplessness" means the woman is unable to anticipate that she can take actions that will affect her situation in any predictable fashion.

Isolation, whether self-imposed or enforced by an abusive partner, is common. A battered woman may avoid activities that may make her feel joy out of fear that they might be taken away from her. Thought disturbances like dissociation (a feeling that one's mind is not connected to one's emotions, body, or surroundings) are not uncommon. Even after ending the abusive relationship and entering into a healthy relationship, women suffering from BWS may experience trust issues, sexual dysfunction, and continuing symptoms of learned helplessness.

Battered Woman Syndrome is not something a woman can simply "get over" by sheer force of will or a supportive community. There are proven treatment plans for BWS, which also involve treatment for PTSD. There is no known self-help model that is effective for treating survivors of BWS. Battered Woman Syndrome can only be diagnosed and treated by a qualified therapist who has experience with the unique issues posed by BWS.

More information on BWS can be found at Dr. Lenore Walker's web site at www.dr.lenorewalker.com. The Kentucky Domestic Violence Association maintains a web site with links to information about domestic violence and resources for victims, including hotlines to shelters at www.kdva.org. The National Domestic Violence Hotline at www.thehotline.org also has resources for victims and advocates.

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

tendance because of the highway proposal.

Dan Sipple from Sipple's Chiropractic Health-care was the spokesperson for the business and residential owners on 25N, a group that has taken on the name, "Berea Citizens for Common Sense on 25N."

Director Gary McCormick, in the background, watches a rehearsal scene with (L-R) Debbie Sharp, Alex Maddox, Katee Holzengel and Patricia O'Neill in the play The Kitchen Witches where two television cooking queens battle it out in front of the cameras. The play is showing Friday night, Saturday night and Sunday afternoon at Berea Arena Theater.

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

Two rabid television Betty Crockers will take each other on in the play "The Kitchen Witches," this weekend, as the Berea Arena Theater presents their second weekend of the gag-filled Canadian comedy. Gary McCormick, the general manager of the Boone Tavern, is the director of The Kitchen Witches, bringing the show to Berea after directing it for the Studio Players in Lexington.

"This comedy was well-received," McCormick said, who stated that he reads between 40-50 plays a year to see what he may be interested in proposing as a director. "The Kitchen Witches" was written in 2005, and McCormick calls it Jerry Springer meeting Martha Stewart.

The Kitchen Witches stars Patricia O'Neill and Debbie Sharp as the two feuding cooks for a television show, with Alex Maddox as the producer and son of one of them who desperately tries to keep the peace. While the whole crew, cast and set were shipped from Lexington to Berea for the performance, there are a few Berea connections. Sharp is a former student of Eddie Ken-

Board Member Writes to Clarify

To the Editor:

As a member of the Berea Board of Zoning Adjustments, I appreciate the Citizen's February 2nd coverage of our last meeting, in the article titled "Board Votes Against Chickens."

However, I found the last paragraph of the piece needed a bit of correction and explanation. That paragraph reads as follows:

"Martin told Gardner that she could take one finding of fact; that one of her neighbors didn't need to call a board of adjustment member at 9 p.m. on Saturday to try to lobby for his vote in her favor."

This sentence is meant to summarize a statement by my fellow board member Martin Richards. First, Martin is his first name, not his last. Second, the paragraph appears to say that Mr. Richards was lobbied on behalf of Katherine Gardner. His actual statement was to the effect that he was contacted by telephone in an attempt to convince him to vote against approval of Gardner's application for a permit to harbor chickens, and that this was not proper.

Mr. Richards mentioned this because our ethics guidelines forbid communication between board members and the public about matters that are or may be before the Board, and especially with any person who has a direct interest in the case. This is referred to as ex parte communication ("from one party") and it is considered improper because all sides in a hearing should be able to hear all of what is said to the Board so that all may have equal opportunities to respond. Also Board members are meant to arrive at the meeting with an open mind and to form their judgments on the basis of what is presented at the meeting.

This is often misunderstood because we citizens are so used to contacting our Mayor and City Council members, as well as our state and federal legislators, Governor and President to let them know how we feel about a range of issues. This is generally proper with elected officials who depend on citizen input for guidance in formulating our laws.

However, some of our city commissions, including the Planning and Zoning Commission and the Board of Zoning Adjustments, are designed by Kentucky law to be a step removed from the political process. Thus members are not elected, rather they are nominated by the Mayor and confirmed by City Council. This is done so they can be more impartial since their job is to enforce the laws as written, and because their hearings may be quasi-judicial. So, contacting a member of these bodies to press one's own views is considered to be akin to trying to influence a judge or jury.

Editor's Note: I apologize for the dyslexic nature of the reporting of board member Martin Richard's name.

Taxpayer Wants Input Reported

Dear Editor,

I feel compelled to respond to the front page article in last week's Citizen regarding the acquisition of the Chestnut Street property by the City as recommended by the Tourism Commission.

The article failed to report my input, as a taxpayer, to the Tourism Commission at their 19 January meeting. In a follow-on discussion with Ms. Myers, she stated she didn't consider my input to the meeting of any importance since it "didn't have legs." By that she explained the Commission didn't pick up on what I was presenting.

My whole point to the commission was that I found a detailed plan for this proposal lacking. Major acquisitions such as this should require a detailed plan, up front, which includes but is not limited to identifying all venues competing for space and their requirement by square foot and design. Each requirement should discuss alternatives and the pros and cons of each. This plan should be done before searching for a facility. It must be done before to ensure that the facility chosen meets the requirement.

During the entire meeting no one presented a detailed requirement nor admitted to having one.

What I heard was a building was available; space was needed so let's move to buy it and then come up with a plan for its use. It appears that the expenditure of $750 thousand dollars to acquire the building may just be the tip or the iceberg. I've had conversations with both city and other professionals in building renovation, everyone seems to think the cost to modernize the building might cost upward to $500 thousand dollars. The expenditure of over a million dollars on an old building that may or may not solve the commission's facility problem is a dangerous venture.

I mentioned to both the Berea Citizen Publisher and Editor that my experience with their paper on this issue brings to mind a Mark Twain quote, something to the effect "If you don't read the paper you're uninformed and if you read paper you're misinformed."

If you're a Berea Taxpayer and feel, as I do, that something is wrong with the commission's process and the message put forth by the Berea Citizen, you should contact the City Manager, Mayor, and City Council Members and the Citizen. If you get an answering machine leave a message. Call soon and call often.

Responding to Oliver

Dear Editor,

In response to Roger Oliver's recent letter taking issue to Beth Meyers' Open Letter to the New President of Berea College I would like to comment that Roger Oliver's letter was presented like a true lawyer making a case for his client.

It was nice list of accomplishments that really missed the point. In my 35 year association with the citizens of Berea, faculty and staff of Berea College, family members that have worked for the college and graduated from there, I have always kept touch with the College, even though I was a "Townie import".

In this small town it is easy to put ones ear to the ground and talk to enough different people of different backgrounds to get near to the reality of any situation. It is no secret in this town that the College has had serious financial issues and at present there are morale problems with faculty and staff.

I have learned that in Berea, ones physical accomplishments are less important than the perception of how those accomplishments were achieved and how people were treated along the way. Fair or not, when it comes to legacy building perception is everything. As a son of L. Marion Oliver, Roger knows exactly what I am saying.

Left with Bad Taste

Dear Editor,

After attending last week's Board of Adjustments meeting I was left with a bad taste in my mouth. The purpose of the meeting was to hear a petition for a conditional use permit as per the chicken ordinance, for the Gardner/Smith household. The chicken ordinance is truly beside the point.

The chairman of the board let the meeting get out of hand. Ms. Ingram, a non-neighbor and non-home owner (in this neighborhood), was allowed to spew unsubstantiated and incorrect statements regarding what she thought of chickens and Ms. Gardner. She was even allowed to engage another neighbor in a completely irrelevant argument over whether or not he was married to his wife. Mrs. Johnson was allowed to directly address Ms. Gardner in a hateful and venomous manner. The board did not redirect either woman to address the board or keep comments to the matter at hand. The board voted against Ms. Gardner's petition without looking at the pictures and measurements that the codes office brought with them. After the decision,

Ms. Gardner asked for a "Finding of Facts. Board members who had voted in favor of the petition asked for a finding of fact as well. They were ignored and Ms. Gardner was told essentially, they said no and that's all they have to say. Well I say, as Bereans we deserve more than this, We deserve a board of adjustments that will not operate in a "good ole boy" fashion. Let them operate on facts. If they had turned down the petition for any relevant reasons and without all of the misbehavior, I could accept that. The general feeling of this meeting was unprofessional and undignified. Ms. Gardner, a layperson, was the most eloquent person there.

She refrained from bashing her "neighbors" and held to the facts of the petition. At the end of the night my sympathies were to Ms. Gardner, as she has to tolerate neighbors such as these. I feel that this meeting was extralegal. This meeting was an embarrassment to Bereans. A review of the board's operations is called for in this instance. Is this the job the Board of Adjustments is supposed to be doing? Shouldn't we expect better?

Lost Franklina an Interesting Tree

outdoors

College Forester

The tree blooms in late summer through fall and has attractive, three-inch flowers with white petals and orange stamens. The foliage turns orange-red in the fall before the leaves drop; making the tree quite attractive through an extended period of time.

Even though Lost Franklina was discovered in Southern Georgia, it is quite cold-hardy and may have originated in the North. Some scientists believe that it was forced to migrate southward during the Ice Ages. Then, as the climate warmed in the South, it may have found itself stranded in a climate unsuited for its prolonged survival. Apparently, the last hold-outs were discovered just in time to save the species.

Planting native species like these is a way to help struggling native species to survive, at the same time not contributing further to the deleterious effects of escaped exotic species.

The Ben Franklin Tree is not easy to find, although I have noticed is available from a few nurseries in Middle Tennessee. Your local nursery may have it in stock; or if not, they might be able to get it for you. Other unique but beautiful native species include American smoketree, American beautyberry, Carolina silverbell, yellow-wood, witch hazel, American fringe tree, mountain camellia, Georgia plume, bigleaf magnolia, cinnamon clethra, chalk maple and Virginia round-leaf birch.

As exotic species continue to "take over" our native forests, and native forests are destroyed by conversion to pine plantations, mining and development, it is important that native trees and shrubs be planted. Just as zoos may be the last hope for many animal species which have lost their native habitat, some tree and shrub species may find their last places of refuge to be in the yards of home owners who planted them.

Lost Franklina is a small tree which grows to about twenty feet tall and usually has multiple trunks.

looking for some answers," Sipple said. "The state doesn't have to care about us, but you do."

Sipple stated that the group is aware that the highway needed to be changed, because of the accidents and traffic congestion, but that the state design to expand to five lanes is, "overdoing it and overkill."

Property owners on Highway 25N started organizing a few weeks, when learning that the design for the reconstruction of the highway involved an expansion to five lanes along with a shared use path and sidewalk. The state had purchased the right of way back in 1948 for the original construction of the highway.

Almost all of the property owners, residential and business, have built parking lots and yards on the state owned right of way.

"That expansion will shut down two of the three businesses in my building," Sipple said, who reminded the council that his father had the business for 42 years. "It will take away every bit of my parking. My patients are backing into the street."

Sipple requested city council members to work with the businesses and property owners on Highway 25N, to try to change the plans for the highway expansion. The recommendation from most of the owners who spoke was for a turn lane to be added, ultimately making Highway 25N three lanes, and many requested that the bypass be built first to see how it would affect traffic flow on the highway.

Mayor Steve Connelly asked Sipple if he and other business owners would write down specific problems they would have if the expansion went through, and strategies that might be workable for them. He reminded them that comments on the highway expansion, as well as the tape from the present city council meeting, would be turned into the state for review on the highway design.

"We're not saying don't do the project, we're saying change the project," Sipple said. "Let us continue to use the right of way for now . . . we're trying to slow it down so it doesn't shut us down."

City Administrator Randy Stone informed the property owners that the city had initiated the need for a reconstruction of Highway 25, because of the traffic congestion and safety concerns. Comments that people have made and the tapes of the different meetings will be sent to District 7 of the transportation cabinet, who will review them and possibly make changes. Staff members including Stone, and perhaps a few council members and/or property owners could also attend the meeting where the situation would be discussed.

When city council member Ronnie Terrill asked if city council support would assist in the property and business owner's cause, Stone replied, "The support of the council will matter, that will help. We are compelled to look with the state to see what changes we can make. We as a city are pushing the bypass first. That's our number one goal is to get that built."

Stone informed people that neither the bypass nor highway 25 construction could take precedence over the other, though the City of Berea is asking the state to do the bypass first.

Robbie Little from Berea Drug also stood up to comment, stating that he was using the right of way for parking, and the expansion would take away 33 feet of his parking, leaving him only 12 feet.

He spoke of his concerns about what the expansion would do to the business community, adding, "This change will take away some of the small town charm. Do we want to be like Richmond?"

Different residential home owners on Highway 25N spoke, including Chuck Conley and Keith Taylor, stating concerns for what the construction would mean for them. They also expressed a great deal of concern for the business community at that end of town.

"My concerns are small things compared to the potential loss of income to these businesses," Conley said.

Matt Causey spoke to the structure for bikers on the expanded highway design, stating that he wasn't concerned about whether the highway was three or five lanes, but that he did want to speak on shared use path.

He requested that a biking route be added to the actual road, with bikes riding parallel to cars, instead of the shared use path built for bikers to use.

Both business owners Larry Linville and Eddie Evans spoke, asking that the five-lane expansion be reconsidered. Evans stated that his deed actually gave him the property to highway 25, and at one point he had ended up paying for a sidewalk that was actually on state land.

Council member Virgil Burnside said, "I don't want anyone to leave here thinking we're not supporting you. But this is a process and we have to define our role with the state. But I shop at businesses there, which is a type of support. We'll help in whatever way we can."

A few other Bereans spoke during audience comments, with three Berea College students speaking. Both Ryan Cardwell and Ethan Hamlin responded to council member Jerry Little's request the last meeting to find out what people want from their council. They both stated that they wanted the council to treat everyone with equal respect, equally, with Hamlin asking that the council members also treat each other with respect.

The student body president spoke, expressing concern that some were talking about whether Berea College students should partake in the democratic process of the city. He stated that SGA (student government association) would be initiating the largest voting drive in Berea's history.

"The student vote will be heard," he said.

Police Chief David Gregory gave his 2011 report to the city council, with what he stated were some signs about what was happening in Berea the past few years with crime. Traffic citations had increased 12 percent from 2010 to 2011, and calls for service had increased two percent.

There had been an eight percent reduction in traffic collisions, with a very significant 93 percent drop in injuries with traffic collisions.

There had been two murder charges, one of which was an attempted murder and two rapes in the year 2011. Larceny went down from 445 incidents to 389 between 2010 and 2011, and assault dropped significantly from 77 to 9. Burglary has increased, however, which Gregory attributed to illegal prescription drug use. Many homes, he stated, were broken into during the daytime with people breaking down doors and grabbing any drugs they could find.

Through the website, crimereports.com, the police department has been able to analyze Berea for where the crimes are happening and when. This is also a website that is available to the general public.

Because of this data, the police started patrolling the east ridge area, of Center Street, Jackson Street, and other side streets because of the increase in burglaries that happened in the area between Jan. 11 and Jan. 31. These crimes were during the day. After they stepped up patrols, Gregory reported, no burglaries have been reported.

Stone reported that the city has received a $146,500 Safe Routes to School grant from the Department of Transportation, and they would be working with Berea Community on that project.

Mayor Connelly announced that he had asked City Attorney J.T. Gilbert to review whether the Board of Adjustments had violated the open meeting law when they did not broadcast their last meeting. If they did violate the open meeting law, then whatever decisions were made would be null and void. The last Board of Adjustments meeting concerned a conditional use permit for chickens on Adams Street, where Katherine Gardner was denied her application to harbor chickens.

Connelly stated the city council may be asked to review the chicken ordinance, making it an administrative matter.

"We'll see what's going on with that barnyard," Connelly stated.

ARTS

work this year to the Berea Arts Council, for Chili Night Out, their major fundraiser on February 25. The event includes a silent and live auction featuring the work of local artists.

Holly has painted or drawn pictures all of her life. It's just something she has always loved doing, and if there had been art education where she grew up, she very likely would have become a professional artist. A turkey feather painted with a wide-eyed great horned owl on a moonlit blue background scene is one of her latest creations, and one of the items featured in the Arts Council auction.

Holly painted a watercolor of a feather several years ago for the auction, and another year she featured sheep. Her paintings have always been popular items. Most of the time her paintings feature some form of nature -- another of her loves--involving being outside or the beauty of birds. She seems to always be finding feathers, she said, commenting, "They bring me luck."

The theme of wildlife and the outdoors has never been intentional, according to Holly, but there is something special about that for her.

"I'd like to do more pencil and watercolor of raptors, especially," Holly said, though all wildlife and landscapes attract her. "I'm also into bears, owls and foxes."

She added, "All my feathers came from Highland Drive, years ago while I had the lawn service. Many of the yards I mowed slope down to a stream, and there was a flock of turkeys down there. Every time I mowed, I collected the feathers because I hated to mow over them."

In the last few years, as painted feathers became more popular and she received more compliments on the feather watercolors, she has learned how to treat feathers so they could be painted. She is almost out of feathers now, she stated, and could really use some turkey tail feathers.

Her desire to be outside led to a job as a postal carrier in 1999 at Berea's Post Office, after working with tree planting, construction, and also running a lawn service for seven years. She has lived in Berea for 23 years.

"I love it (carrying the mail)" she said, "I love being out of doors and being of service to the community. What would be perfect is to do wildlife photography when the weather is nice, then go indoors to do painting."

Holly was injured on the job last year, and during recovery, she took the opportunity to paint as much as she could, and she did quite a few feathers.

"The feathers were so fun and I got so excited--they were a pure joy to do," Holly said. "I seized that time and painted every day--nine pieces of art completed and framed."

Holly, who reported that

It took her about 18 hours to paint one feather, said, "It is tiny work, detailed work, but I enjoyed putting a lot of visual depth in the feather. I have one a bear with pine tree and mountain behind, with a lot of depth."

She chooses her subjects because they are, "stirring--they move me--the beauty of it. Recreating through your own interpretation in any media is a great thing. . . Every piece of my work you see is the work of a beginner. I've never had the opportunity to develop as an artist. In this economy, it's hard to make a living. If I had time, I'd dabble in impressionism and in oils. Mostly my work is water color, and is trial and error. My first feathers were a dismal failure. I thought 'Gosh darn it, how do people do this?' and I went to Hobby Lobby and asked and they told me how by using an acrylic fixative you can make a small canvas out of a feather."

Some of the paintings she did after her injury are snow scenes of her parents' farm under a deep snow. Her parents may be spending some of their last days on their Ohio farm as they get older, and she thought it would be a nice memory for them. One of the paintings she particularly likes is of her father's last two beehives, with snow mounded in a skep shape on top of the traditional square box beehive. It partly pleases her because of her present interest in bees and her own hives. She set up three before her accident, and is trying to learn all she can about the life of her bees.

Holly, who was raised in Troy, Ohio, was always seeking the wilderness areas. She attended ECU but thought she wasn't "college material" because of her love of just being outside rather than technology.

"When I was young, I did poorly in school because all I did was draw. I've just always done it," Holly said.

After ECU, she migrated to Berea and did all the outdoor jobs until she went to work for the U. S. Postal Service.

Holly said she is always honored to exhibit her work at the Berea Arts Council. "I'm always surprised and glad when people like what I do and I'm glad to help the community," she said. "The arts are vital to every community and there should be more emphasis in the schools, more creating beautiful things. The BAC gives someone like me the opportunity to display my work. I don't have a large body of work that a large gallery would want and I just don't have that kind of time. It's great to get feedback."

She said it's ironic that she ended up in Berea, because when she was small, her family was traveling and stopped in Berea where she bought a Berea College t-shirt. She wore it until it turned to rags -- and she still has it -- but she saw it as a kind of mystical, good luck kind of a thing, like finding turkey feathers.

finished, Diane Smith from the family resource center at Berea Community congratulated them on their "stone faces" that didn't give away which dish they preferred. But when she asked for a show of hands, the fries won hands down, though there was a strong showing for the puffs and a few students who adamantly proclaimed that the soup was the best.

This taste testing of the sweet potato dishes was part of the Farm to School Week at Berea Community this week, with elementary school students getting the opportunity to meet local farmers, learn about farming in Madison County and sample foods. The different classes voted on their favorite sweet potato dish, and the fifth graders will be collating all the votes for a math exercise. The winning dish will then be served in the cafeteria in the next few weeks.

The Farm to School Week is a collaborative effort between the Berea school district, Madison County Health Department, local farmers, and the Madison County Farm to School Task Force. The activities are funded in part by a mini-grant from the Kentucky Department for Public Health Obesity Prevention Program. These funds were also used to provide posters of local farmers to hang up in the school and to purchase a greenhouse for Berea Community.

The cafeteria staff at Berea Community has already been purchasing some produce from local farmers, and providing that to students for their lunches. This includes strawberries, watermelons and tomatoes. The sweet potatoes dishes are a step in the direction of actually cooking items with local, fresh produce. The Farm to School programs have been gaining in popularity around the country, as more communities promote local agricultural and healthy meals and activity within school systems.

Farm to School programs include activities in three areas, the cafeteria, classroom and community. The taste testing that Berea Community conducts with the health department is designed to encourage kids to try new things, and to increase their exposure to healthy foods such as fruits and vegetables that are locally grown.

Energy for the Farm to School initiative came from a Kentucky Healthy Communities Initiative grant received in 2009. A Farm to School Task Force was formed in 2010 with representatives from local farms, Berea College Farms, Madison County School System, Berea Independent School District, St. Joseph Berea Hospital, Madison County Cooperative Extension Service, Madison County Health Department and Kentucky's Farm to School Program.

Library Presents Fee Portrayal On Friday

Watch history come alive at the Madison County Public Library as Kentucky Humanities Council Chautauqua performer Obadiah Ewing-Roush portrays John G. Fee, an Abolitionist and founder of both Berea and Berea College.

Ewing-Roush will present John G. Fee on Friday, February 10, at 7 p.m., at the Madison County Public Library's Berea location.

As the son of a slaveholding father, Fee witnessed firsthand the benefits of having slaves and the profits that could be made from their labor. When he graduated from college and enrolled in Lane Theological Seminary, Fee began to understand the inherent wrong and destructiveness of slavery. He was determined to become an Abolitionist and work for the immediate end to slavery. Feeling betrayed, his father took him out of school and forced John to return home. Rather than staying in the relative safety of the North and writing anti-slavery pamphlets, Fee committed his life and work to ending slavery and discrimination at home in Kentucky.

Fee's anti-slavery efforts garnered the attention of Cassius Clay, a prominent politician and outspoken emancipationist from Kentucky. Although the two agreed that slavery in the Commonwealth should end, their relationship became hostile when they couldn't agree on how to go about ending slavery.

Fee's dedication and passion for the abolishment of slavery gave him the strength to persevere through the wrath and disappointment of his father, financial hardship, and threats to his safety. His work led to the founding of Union Church of Christ, an anti-slavery, non-denominational church, which planted the seeds for what would become Berea College.

The Kentucky Humanities Council is a non-profit Kentucky corporation affiliated with the National Endowment for the Humanities. It is not a state agency, but is a proud partner of the state's tourism, arts and heritage cabinet.

Students from Berea Rise to the Food Donation Challenge

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

Berea Community School had their own competition leading up to the big game last week, as the elementary school and middle/high school competed to see which side could bring in the most food donations for their 1st Annual Souper Bowl. The elementary school ended up as the overall Berea champions in a hotly contested victory, winning by only 45 items.

The school ended up bringing in over 10,000 items total for the food drive, items that will be used for the district's backpack program for their students. The elementary side brought in 5,417 items for their win, with the middle/high school bringing in the lesser amount of 5,372, despite a surge in giving the last day. Individual class winners were Ms. Robinson's first period class for the high school with 1,562 items, Ms. Carpenter's class for the middle school with 729 items, and Ms. Satterthwaite's class in the elementary school with 661 items. All three will receive a catered breakfast from Cracker Barrel for their prize.

The PTO, led by their two presidents, Susan Robinson and Christie Fain, organized the entire effort, asking the FBLA officers to take charge of the daily tasks involved with the food drive competition. The officers organized and arranged the items, keeping a daily running count for the students. They kept a scoreboard posted on the staircase by the cafeteria, as the piles of food grew quickly.

"We were shocked at the amount," Steven Gadd said, the vice-president of FBLA. "This doesn't usually happen."

The school has had other food drives in the past, but never brought in these amounts of items. Sadie Theodore, treasurer of FBLA, and Emma Crump, secretary of FBLA, both agreed that the effort was a lot of fun. They recounted times different students would pass them by, asking who was bringing in the winning amount.

Gammon Fain, president of FBLA, said the PTO had been very effective and credited the competition with how much food was actually brought in.

Extra food will be donated to the Berea Food Bank.

"The Outback, where you never get a bum steer."

The audience is also included in the fun, with one attender chosen as the celebrity judge to go up on stage and select which dish was the best between the two rival cooks. One night, McCormick chose Glen Jennings, and another, Tim Jordan. Having audience members bring their own comments and jokes gives O'Neill and Sharp plenty of opportunity to ad-lib.

McCormick stated that Jennings didn't miss a beat during his time on stage, answering "anything without chocolate" when the cooks asked him if he was allergic to anything.

McCormick stated that the play is more than just an outrageous comedy with running gags, however. One tender scene, where the three characters realized some secrets that existed between them, made the comedy that came later even stronger.

"When we started working on this last year at Studio Players," McCormick said, "we spent some time developing these characters, their back stories and history. These are very real people, very loveable."

"The Kitchen Witches", the camera person played by Katee Holznagel, doesn't have any lines until the end, when she has the best one of the play, according to McCormick.

"That line," McCormick said, "brings the house down."

McCormick, who has done stand-up comedy, run a murder mystery production company and directed and acted for years, stated that he loves seeing his vision come to life as a director. "The Kitchen Witches is the first play he has directed at Berea Arena Theater, though he acted in both The Sunshine Boys and On Golden Pond. He will be acting with Eddie Kennedy and John Staufford in Greater Tuna later in February.

"The more I'm around Eddie, the more I realize what a big heart he has," McCormick said, when speaking of his experience at Berea Arena Theater. "In theater, it's a real passion, and I see him cleaning carpets and straightening chairs, because it's important to him that people have a good experience when they come to the Arena Theater."

neddy, the co-creator of Berea Arena Theater, and the stage manager, Reinee Dunn, and light person, Tonya Spears, are both graduates of Berea Community.

"With Berea Arena Theater," McCormick said, "you try to keep the actors local, but we felt with this play that there was enough of a local connection."

There is also the opportunity for lots of local references in the play. The audience is treated like a true live audience of a televised cooking channel, and sponsors are referenced from local businesses, such as Near New Auto. When the play was performed by the Studio Players, McCormick put in Lexington references.

"That was part of the fun," McCormick said grinning. "You take out the Canada references and add your own local ones."

He added one line in the play, "causing backup bigger than rush hour traffic on Chestnut St." Another sponsor message states,

MS Future Problem Solving Team, Wilton take honors at Governor's Cup

by Braden Mills

On Tuesday, Jan. 31, and Saturday, Feb. 4, members of the Berea Community Middle School Academic Team who qualified at the district competition competed at the Regional Governor's Cup at Foley Middle School. A total of 15 schools competed.

Berea's Future Problem Solving team—Greg Schloemer, Claire Hogg, J.D. Lovell and Sam McFarland—took first place and seventh grader Ethan Wilton placed second in Science. All five will advance to the Governor's Cup State Finals held in Lexington on March 10-12.

To qualify for the Regional meet, Berea's academic team competed at the District Governor's Cup meet held at Madison Middle School on Jan. 18 and Jan. 21. Berea's Future Problem Solving team excelled at this competition.

The FPS team took first place. In the written assessments, Berea had four team members win medals: Ethan Wilton received second place in the Science test; seventh grader Sam House earned fifth place in the Social Studies test; and eighth graders Claire Hogg and Della Walters placed in the Arts and Humanities assessment (winning third and fourth place respectively). In Quick Recall, the team placed fourth.

The final standings ended with Foley Middle School taking first overall with 42 points, Madison Middle School taking second with 37 points, and Clark Moores Middle School taking third with 25 points. Berea ranked fourth overall with 19 points, but took home an honorable prize: the Hume Sportsmanship Award.

Valentine's Day may bring out the cynic in our society

by Megan Phillips

These days, it seems that more and more people are finding reasons to hate the holiday of love. Anti-cupid cynics are running amuck, making a fuss over commercialism and heartbreak. It's no wonder that people are unhappy on Valentine's Day—the social pressure to criticize the holiday has become overwhelming.

The students at Berea Community High School are no exception. The majority of seniors in Mrs. Lambert's journalism class are cynical about Valentine's Day. "I think there

BCHS Academic Team takes first at District Governor's Cup, advances to Regionals

by Ben Lark

On Saturday, Jan. 28, The Berea High School Academic Team competed in the District Governor's Cup, at Madison Southern High School. They faced Madison Southern, Madison Central, and Model Lab. Berea's team placed first in Quick Recall, second in future problem solving, and won first place overall.

Many of BCHS students received medals in individual testing categories. In the Math section, senior Noah Fouch placed second and senior Laura Claytor placed fourth. In Science, senior Jonathan Atkins placed second, and seniors Noah Fouch and Sebastian Brown tied for third place. In Social Studies, senior Braden Mills placed fourth. In Language Arts, junior Natalie Warren placed second, and junior Tyger Williams placed third. In Arts and Humanities, senior Taylor Satterthwaite placed first, and Braden Mills placed fourth. In Written Composition, junior Chloe Atwater placed second, and freshman Sofia Saderholm placed third.

"We are always very successful in all areas, but I think we were particularly so this year. I am excited to compete in regionals," said Chloe.

Coach Linda Williams said, "They did an awesome job! The quick recall team coming in first was a big win. They did their usual job of making BCHS proud!"

Jonathan Atkins, captain of the quick recall team, stated, "It is difficult to find times to practice because some of the people on the academic team are in the play [Steel Magnolias]."

The students that placed, along with the Quick Recall and Future Problem Solving teams, will compete in the Regional Governors Cup Competition on February 18.

shouldn't be a certain day to celebrate your love [for someone]. I think you should do that everyday," said senior Paige Edwards, who summarized the sentiments of others.

Though everyone has a right to his or her own opinion, some of us believe Valentine's Day is a holiday that we have the right to enjoy.

The holiday was not created by greeting card companies, contrary to popular belief. Valentine's Day is a celebration dating back to the Middle Ages. Though Valentine's Day has strayed from its Christian origin and become quite commercialized, the monetary spike on and around Feb. 14 is economically stimulating. The money spent on flowers, candy, teddy bears, jewelry, and various other tokens of love can have powerful repercussions on the economy. In 2010, Valentine's Day was estimated to contribute around $14 billion in revenue, according to the National Retail Federation. This stimulation is seriously beneficial to our battered economy.

On the holiday of love, contempt is expected to be felt by those who cannot relate to the amorous theme. See Valentine's Day next page

Shakespeare Experience invites students to perform roles

by Sibyl Galloway

The freshmen and sophomores of Berea Community recently attended the Shakespeare Experience, arranged by Mrs. Linda Taylor, Gear UP coordinator. Sarah Evans and Dane Hosler were the leaders of this event. Evans works for the Arts and Humanities Cooperative, which is a part of Eastern Kentucky University.

Hosler is an independent actor who was hired through the Cooperative.

According to Mrs. Taylor, the event was organized to help the underclassmen learn more about Shakespeare, one of the world's most important writers in history and gain knowledge about his plays.

"Since all of our students study Shakespeare, they got to see his work come to life," Mrs. Taylor stated.

BCHS students Brandon Hartman, Olivia Jacobs, Madelyn McDonald, Meghan Lovell, and Will Spencer acted out parts of some of the plays and interpreted the passages in modern language. The five student actors portrayed characters in the plays while the professionals, Hosler and Evans, explained what the passages were discussing.

Brandon Hartman acted a few different roles, one of them being Romeo in the famous play, "Romeo and Juliet." According to Hartman, they only had about 30 minutes to set up the entire event including learning lines, putting on costumes and setting up props. They also played games with the underclassmen audience, and even selected two boys to come up on stage and sword fight.

"It was a great experience; I had a lot of fun acting with Dane and Sarah. I think they need to do things like this more often. It was lots of fun for students and they get to learn at the same time. Everyone in high school should come, not just underclassmen," Hartman explained.

About five acts of various plays were performed, and Hosler performed a monologue.

Six drama students prepare for 'Steel Magnolias' performances

by Sebastian Brown

Just after Valentine's Day this February, the Berea Community Drama Department will perform the classic "Steel Magnolias" on Thursday, Feb. 16, Feb. 17 and Feb. 18 at 7 p.m. in the Kennedy Theater.

Ms. Jody Flara, director of the Drama Department, chose the play due to the number of strong females currently enrolled in the class, and the entire cast of the play is six females. Junior William Spencer and senior Brandon Hartman are co-student directors.

"The play is about the relationship between six women who must deal with the joys and tragedies of life," said Ms. Flara. "It is comic, but it has a very tragic event and it causes the actresses to draw from their emotional well."

BCES fifth grader selected for Children's All State Chorus

by Ben Miller

Emily Nigro, a fifth grader at Berea Community Elementary School, has been selected to participate in the Children's All State Chorus. She was one of 652 fifth and sixth graders who tried out for the prestigious group and one of only 200 who were selected.

The Kentucky Children's Concert will be held in Louisville, KY on Thursday, Feb. 9. It will take place in Whitney Hall in the Kentucky Center for the Arts at 5:15 p.m.

Mrs. Brenda Stratman, the choral director at Berea Elementary School, believes this will be a very beneficial experience for Emily. She said, "Emily will experience the opportunity to sing with 200 beautiful voices under the direction of a renowned Children's Conductor, Melissa Malvar-Keylock. Emily will be in rehearsals starting on Wednesday afternoon and all day Thursday. During rehearsals the students will be improving their singing skills as well as improving their diction and breathing techniques. Their intense rehearsals will get them prepared for Thursday evening's concert."

Serving as the president of the Berea Elementary Chorus, Emily plays the violin and piano. Earlier in the school year she submitted a CD for her audition. In early December she was notified that she was selected and will be singing the alto parts 2 and 3. Since then she has been practicing her music both at home and at school. She has learned musical pieces in both German and Latin and has even had to learn some sign language for another piece.

BCHS Swim Team to compete in tough regional tournament

by Stephen Compton

The Berea Pirates Swim Team will compete in Regionals on Feb. 10-11. The Regional meet will be held at the Eastern Kentucky University Natatorium. Berea, along with 30 other teams, is included in Region 5, which is viewed as one of the toughest regions.

“All of the Lexington teams are really strong, as well as Model and Madison Central,” said Coach Phillip Shackelford. However, he is optimistic about the team’s performance and he would like to see the Berea swimmers qualify for the regional finals on Saturday. “Our relays are always pretty strong, but I think that we will do well all around. I cannot single anybody out.”

All 18 members of the team will be participating in various events. In the Girls’ Division, the following swimmers will compete: Paige Edwards—50m Freestyle, 100m Freestyle and the 200m Free Relay; Sibyl Galloway—200m Medley, 100m Freestyle, and the 200m Free Relay; Maya Wright—50m Freestyle; Victoria Graham—200m Medley, 100m Fly, 100m Freestyle, and the 400 Free Relay; Sadie Theodore-Powell—200m Freestyle, 100m Breast, and the 400m Free Relay; Breanna Cook—50m Freestyle and the 100m Backstroke; Abi Woodie—200m Medley, 200m IM, 100m Breast, and the 400m Free Relay; Savanna Cooper—200m IM, 200m Free Relay, and the 100m Backstroke; Alexandria Horn—200m Medley, 500m Freestyle, 100m Backstroke, and the 400m Free Relay; Virginia Deaver—50m Freestyle, 100m Freestyle, and the 200m Free Relay.

A higher dropout age doesn’t solve the issue: vocational programs may be a good start

by Chloe Atwater

You can lead a horse to water, but you can’t make it drink. Though overused and in some cases false, this is often the case in public education. There are students today who come to school (or skip school) each day, hoping for their long-awaited 16th birthday—the day that students can drop out of school—to come soon.

There is something undoubtedly wrong when almost a third of our state’s high school students drop out before graduating, but underlying problems in the education system need to first be resolved in order to lower the dropout rate, as opposed to simply forcing students to stay in school until age 18 or until graduation.

This issue has reared its head once again in both state and national media, with President Obama’s call to action on the issue in his 2012 State of the Union address, and with Governor Beshear’s State of the State message presenting the same issue.

As a hotly debated issue among middle-aged politicians who have not set foot in a high school in 30 years, it is too often forgotten that however good on paper it may look to have a

Seniors Ben Miller and Barry Scudder-Davis defend their goal in the recent 55-41 win against Nicholas County.

Berea Pirates Basketball Team suffers loss on the tail of two victories, look forward to remainder of season

by Maya-Lis Wright

The Berea High School Boys’ Basketball Team suffered a loss against Pineville 41-46 on Feb. 3. This loss came on the heels of two previous victories, one against Brown, 54-46 and Nicholas County, 55-41. Berea’s season record is 12 wins, 13 losses.

“We could not have won the game. From an officiating stand point, we were not going to be able to leave Pineville with a W,” said Coach Bill Smallwood.

Berea started off the game with a three-point lead in the first quarter, 3-0. By the second quarter Berea added 12 points, giving the Pirates a score of 15 to Pineville’s 11. In the third quarter the Pineville team scored 16 points, giving them 27 and Berea scored 13 for a score of 28. In the fourth quarter Pineville surged ahead, adding 19 points compared to Berea’s 13.

Senior Barry Scudder-Davis added 20 points with two assists and 11 rebounds. Junior Jon Smith had three points and four rebounds. Senior Ben Miller had 12 points and two rebounds. Senior Chris Kidd didn’t add any points but had three assists. Junior Eli Woodie added six points, with two assists and four rebounds. Junior Daniel Hubbard did not add any points but had a rebound for Berea.

“We played well, despite the result of the game. We are taking steps and fixing things we need to as the season is close to ending,” said Ben Miller.

The Berea High School Boys’ Basketball team has five games left with the next game being away at Williamsburg on Feb. 7.

“I hate to see the end. Hopefully we’ll go a ways in the post season. This is a really good group of guys that have a lot of potential. We hate to see the end come. We don’t really talk about the end a whole lot,” said Coach Smallwood.

Movie Review

‘Extremely Loud and Incredibly Close’ emphasizes healing after 9/11 tragedy, addresses issue well

by Ben Miller

“Extremely Loud and Incredibly Close,” the movie “not about 9/11, but about life after it,” gives a personal perspective into the struggles and pains of a mother and son whose husband and father was taken away by the September 11 events.

This movie places you in the life of an 11 year-old boy named Oskar Schell, played by a young actor named Thomas Horn. His mother, Linda, is portrayed by Sandra Bullock, and his father, Thomas, is played by Tom Hanks. Oskar (Horn) and Thomas (Hanks) have a very intimate relationship. Oskar is suspected of having Asperger’s syndrome, a disorder on the Autism spectrum. Thomas creates “reconnaissance expeditions” for his son that force Oskar to interact with other people, therefore improving his social interaction. Suddenly, the events of September 11 hit. Thomas unfortunately was killed during the tragic attack.

Oskar struggles to move on with his life, which Horn does a fantastic job portraying. He pushes his mother away and desperately tries to find ways to stay connected to his father. While looking through some of his father’s things, Oskar finds an envelope with a key inside. On the outside of the envelope is the word Black. Oskar decides that his father has left him this key and created one last “reconnaissance expedition” for him to complete. He believes that by finding what the key fits, he will find the reason that his father had to die.

A plan is developed by Oskar when he is convinced that the word on the outside of the envelope must be the name of someone who knows what the key belongs to. He searches through the phonebooks and locates everyone with the name Black. He then devises a plan to visit every one of them to find his lock for the key. On his journey, Oskar meets other people who are missing someone or something. He helps them much more than they are able to aid him.

The movie captures the mystery that surrounded everyone after 9/11. Many were searching for something or someone that was missing; some found what they were looking for while others didn’t. The movie allows one to consider what they were searching for at this time in their lives and allowed me to remember all the victims and their families.

No movie about events like this is going to satisfy every viewer, and most movies will even offend some viewers. The movie did a great job addressing this sensitive issue and lived up to the quote in its promotional clips. This movie was not about 9/11; it really was about life after it, and the healing that had to take place.

Outstanding scorer Sophia Shearer leads Lady Pirates in defeat of Augusta

by Major McGraw

The Lady Pirates started February off with a win against Augusta 48-43. Senior Sophia Shearer led the team with 20 points, along with senior Taylor Winstead, who scored 10. Sophia is now one of only 16 BCBS girls’ basketball players who have scored 1,000 points.

Others scoring were junior Hannah Haycraft with two points, senior Brooke Coccari with five points, junior Ashley Sizemore with three points, freshman Victoria Sexton—four points and sophomore Miranda Montgomery—four points.

The Pirates started the game down 12-0, but came back with the help of Sophia Shearer and Hannah Haycraft. The two had a combined 27 rebounds, which helped the Pirates to get the win.

However, the Pirates fell short last Friday against Breathitt County, losing 51-66. Point guard Chase Fain was out with a back injury, and again the Lady Pirates struggled in the beginning. The girls started the game 16-2, which proved to be difficult to overcome.

“They played well the rest of the game,” said Coach Jerry Bingham. “But we were sluggish starting out.”

Sophia Shearer and Hannah Haycraft led the team with a combined 28 points. Others scoring were Brooke Coccari—eight, Ashley Sizemore—six, Taylor Winstead—three, Victoria Sexton—four and Miranda Montgomery had two points.

The team is now 12-13 and will travel to Brown Monday, looking to finish off the season with a winning record.

Valentine’s Day brings

Whether it be that someone has recently been heartbroken, or that someone has never been in love, Valentine’s Day may seem pointless to those without a valentine. Though the sadness felt by people is not insignificant, Valentine’s Day is generally a happy day. It has a widely positive impact on society.

The holiday gives couples an opportunity to celebrate and rekindle their love, and it gives those not in a relationship a chance to unabashedly express feelings they wouldn’t normally share. Children can experience the positivity and friendship that love can bring. Oftentimes people get caught up in their day-to-day lives and forget the importance of expressing their love for those around them—Valentine’s Day is the perfect break from routine that allows everyone to breathe in the love that fills the air.

So to all the cynics who refuse to conform to the institution of Valentine’s Day, open your minds—and your hearts—and enjoy the holiday of love.

 CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

"Working Together for a Better Berea"

More Exposure More Business More Connections More Information

Most inquiries about Berea's business community begin with the Berea Chamber of Commerce, 275 businesses strong and growing.

Our Chamber members enjoy:

- Exposure comes naturally when you are a member of the Berea Chamber of Commerce. Take full advantage of free publicity most businesses cannot afford.
- Through the telephone, walk-in and internet inquiries, the Berea Chamber of Commerce takes great pride in referring our members. Much like the Better Business Bureau's logo, prospective customers seek out the Chamber logos / window clings that are placed on the doors and windows of our Chamber members as a sign of a reputable business.
- Our Chamber members have a better connection to the community because they are connected to each other. In addition to our monthly newsletter and membership meetings, our Chamber members receive timely communications through our email distribution lists two and three times per week.
- As a business owner, you do not have time to attend all of the public meetings and follow local, state and federal issues. Chamber membership allows you to focus on your business while we work with local governments to represent the needs of our business community.
- We offer new member recognition, FREE ribbon cutting services, website links and numerous networking events.
- Your circle of influence is 275 businesses strong. Collectively we can accomplish things that we could not consider as a small business owner.
- Our website provides information to the world 24/7. We conduct annual Legislative Trips to Frankfort to meet with our legislators and demonstrate how our state government works. We also promote regional workshops and seminars to allow you and your employees to learn about specific topics and issues.
- We offer referral services, an on-line business directory, member to member discounts and advertising opportunities for all budgets.
- Join us for New Member Orientation Sessions, Speed Networking, committee work and monthly membership meetings.

Apply on-line at www.BereaChamber.com or call 859-986-9760 to request an application.

The Musical Adventures of Atossa Kramer

Atossa Kramer, now retired from the music department at Berea College, plays recorder, piano, clarinet and accordion. After years of classical training, she fell in love with the English Country Dance and folk music.

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

Though never a musician who obsessively pursued her craft, Atossa Kramer finds looking back that music has always weaved powerful threads throughout the fabric of her life. She started the study of piano when she was eight, clarinet in fourth grade band, and taught herself recorder and accordion as an adult.

"Almost everything I've done socially and professionally revolves around music," Kramer said.

Originally born in Brooklyn, NY, Kramer moved to Berea in 1973 when then husband Loren became director of Students of Appalachia at Berea College. She started out as adjunct faculty at the college teaching clarinet, then taught piano with a recorder ensemble. Her involvement with the music department increased steadily over the years, until she ultimately became a salaried member of the faculty when she took on teaching the Appalachia music class, which she kept for the next 20 years.

"I got into Berea College through the back door," Kramer said with a smile.

But Kramer's involvement with the Berea music scene went far beyond the classroom or studio. During her almost four decades in Berea, Kramer has been a familiar musical performer at various venues at Christmas Country Dance School and different regional dance camps, as well as a traveling musician with the Festival Dancers for high school students and the Berea College country dancers.

"That music really grabbed me," Kramer said, when thinking of her first experiences with folk music and English country folk dance.

Classically trained,

Kramer stated there was such a unique beauty to the folk music that broadened her music interest considerably. This love of folk music passed down through three generations of women in her family, with both her mother and grandmother having a passion for the English Country dance and music. It was during a visit to Pine Woods Camp, where her mother was attending dance workshops, that Kramer first heard and saw the English Country dancing.

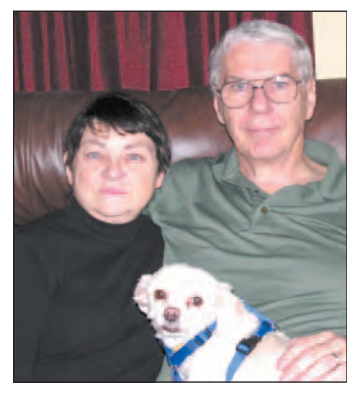

"I was still attending college at the Oberlin Conservatory, and my mother was renewing her interest in the folk dance and music. It was a great love of hers, and I was introduced to it," Kramer said.

Kramer met Frankie and Lionel Duff from Decoy in Knott County at the Pine Woods Camp, a connection that later led to her move to

Spotlight on Paint Lick Elementary Third Grade

Photos Submitted

Ms. Amy Griffin's, Mrs. Sherri Davis' and Mrs. Heather Akers' third graders at Paint Lick Elementary School are being recognized through the school's "Spotlight on Success," program. These third graders have been working hard on mastering their multiplication and division facts.

The students have also been working on answering constructed response questions in both reading and math. They are improving reading comprehension by using Study Island and Brainware. In science, they have been learning all about weather and are excellent at reading a thermometer, naming cloud types and reading weather maps.

MUSIC

Kentucky. After graduating from Oberlin in 1962, Kramer worked that summer in North Carolina, playing for an orchestra. "I had some vague idea of going to New York and being a musician," Kramer said laughing. "But I evidently really didn't want to do it, because it never happened."

Her family took her on a trip with them during that 1962 summer, and they decided to visit the Duffs at their Knott County home.

"That trip was a story in itself," Kramer said, speaking of how isolated and remote the area was when traveling. She wasn't intimidated, however, finding the whole experience a grand adventure.

While visiting the Duffs, Kramer found herself on the phone with their friend, Raymond McLain, the director of the Hindman Settlement School. He was wanting to begin an itinerant music program that would serve some of the 30-35 one- and two-room schools in Knott County. He was calling this the "music mobile".

"McLain hired me while we were on the phone," Kramer said, who found herself continuing her Kentucky adventure for what would become fifty more years.

During her two years at Hindman, Kramer had an international harvester jeep, a bunch of song books, and 100 plastic recorders that she would take to different schools in the area. She remembers driving up creek beds, bouncing in ruts a foot deep from the coal trucks and teaching recorder, singing and music at the schools.

Finding that she was interested in classroom teaching, she went to Peabody Teacher's College in Nashville to take some teacher education classes. She then received a call from Pine Mountain Settlement School, asking her to become a fifth and sixth grade teacher.

"That was the hardest job I've ever done," Kramer said, remembering that the children had run off two teachers before her. "I had to do corporal punishment. I remember one parent telling me, 'if he doesn't behave, you just cut the blood.'"

They didn't run Kramer off, however, and she stayed for a year and a half before finishing her teaching certification.

During these years, Kramer barely picked up the clarinet, though it is her primary instrument. After moving to Berea, however, and hearing about the college's opening for an instructor in clarinet, she picked it back up. After ten years of minimal playing, Kramer stated it only took her around two months to get back where she had been.

Kramer had picked up recorder in college so she could play baroque music. She picked up the accordion, however, because of Ethel Capps.

"We had moved to Berea," Kramer said, "and Ethel Capps came knocking on my door and told me to learn to play the accordion because they needed one for the dance accompaniment. She was quite the character."

Kramer stated she has enjoyed being a part of the Berea folk music and dance scene, with the opportunity to travel to Scandinavia, Australia, China, England and other European countries. She has also been the second clarinet with the Lexington Philharmonic since the mid 1990s. However, she has decided that the time has come to move from Kentucky.

"I've been saying that I have one more move in me," Kramer said, who resigned from Berea College almost three years ago.

She is currently making plans to move this year to Black Mountain outside of Asheville, North Carolina; to participate in their musical community.

"It's time for another adventure," Kramer said, in a musical life that has been rich with them.

FROM THE BEREA CITIZEN ARCHIVES FEBRUARY 1972

Whittemore led the team in rebounding with nine and Dennis Durham led in assists with six. Ken Abbott, Berry, Tony Babb and Whittemore also had two assists each.

GETTING THE GIGGLES adds an extra dimension to any pleasurable occasion. And here to prove it are Gina Bickford, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Bickford, and Kathy Hazelwood, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Hazelwood.

MONEY RAISERS—Officers of the Silver Creek Junior High 4-H Club present $32. proceeds from a bake sale, to Mrs. Jo Nelda Cole, County Extension Agent for 4-H. Arthur Hunt, president of the club, hands over the money. Larry Tudor is vice president and Fee Taylor is secretary-treasurer. Colin Sparks is the 4-H advisor. The county's 4-H Clubs have a $700 assessment toward the expansion of the National 4-H Center in Washington, D. C., and this is what the Silver Creek youngsters' money will be used for.

Mayor C.C. Slesley had called a special meeting of the City Council in order to get down to the "nitty gritty" as he put it, of where to find the $20,000 that was to be Berea's portion of the cost of the planned new airport. Richmond had appropriated $23,000 and the Madison County Fiscal Court was expected to come across with an additional $20,000 for the project. As to borrowing, the mayor said, "Well Mr. Nixon is asking for a 54 billion dollar deficit budget, maybe we can think of something like that." To which councilwoman Miss Frances Moore remarked with good humor, "The President doesn't have to fool with Morris Todd." (Mr.

Todd, as many remember, was a long time president of Berea National Bank, which is no longer in business since being acquired by Peoples Bank several years ago.) Two Berea area residents were named Kentucky Colonels by Governor Wendell Ford, Dr. John C. Baker of Chestnut Street and his daughter Kay Mills. Chief Donald Tudor was a patient at Berea Hospital. Ed Wayman had been taking it slowly since returning home following an operation, but had still been putting in an hour or so a day at his store. Ronnie Howard Neeley, then age 7, son of Mr. and Mrs. J.B. Neeley had sustained a broken arm in a fall from the bleachers at the Berea Community School. Mrs. Marie Todd had undergone surgery and was convalescing at the home of her son in Kettering, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Philmore Burns had returned home following a week in Fort Lauderdale Florida. Mr. and Mrs. Bob Huff and Taunya had spent a weekend in Knoxville with Rev. and Mrs. Scott Richmond, and son Kraig on the occasion of Kraig's first birthday. Mike Berry, holding the hot hand for the Pirates, boosted them to a 92-79 win over Eubank on the Berea home court. Mike was 10 for 11 from the field. Jack Children and parents read together at the Madison County Public Library in Berea on Monday, while supportive canine companions listen in. The therapy dogs visit the library to listen to children read and serve as nonjudgmental, supportive listeners. Above, Sneeches, a purebred bearded collie, listens to Go, Dog, Go!, and to the right, yellow Labrador Morgan shakes Jacob Cornett's hand before settling down to listen to a story. The therapy dogs are part of the Madison County team from Pawsibilities Unleashed Pet Therapy, a nonprofit organization that teaches dogs, cats and their significant humans to form trusting and respectful bonds.

Special Canine Friends Support Young Readers

By Tanya Stewart
Citizen Reporter

Usually, the boy was so nervous reading aloud with adults that he would speak only in the softest of whispers. Today was different. Not only was his mother there to coach him through the stumbling words, but a yellow Labrador retriever named Morgan was stretched out congenially beside him. Although he started out inaudibly, in the course of an hour the boy was sprawled comfortably on his belly in front of the dog, reading in a quiet, but conversational voice.

Morgan and one of her colleagues, Sneeches, a purebred bearded collie, visited the Madison County Public Library in Berea Monday afternoon with their owner-trainers, Lisa Lowe and Jane Bihl, to act as four-legged encouragement for young readers. They, along with two other dogs and their owners, form the Madison County team from Pawsibilities Unleashed Pet Therapy of Kentucky, a Frankfort-based, non-profit organization that teaches dogs, cats, and their significant humans how to form a trusting, respectful, and

BEAT Working Groups Present Next Week

By Christie Green
Citizen Reporter

The Berea Economic Advancement Team (BEAT) continues moving forward with efforts to develop a strong local economic base for the city. The public meeting next week on Thursday, Feb. 23, will be another chance for the small work groups to report on their activities and refine their goals. The meeting will take place at the Berea Baptist Church at 6 p.m.

Having begun with a public meeting in October, led by nationally recognized local economist Michael Shuman, the work has narrowed in to focus on five developmental approaches: Small Business, Big Business, Sustainability, Finance, and Tourism.

According to the Berea City Government website, participants at the December 8 meeting of B.E.A.T. developed small working groups that will focus on these approaches. The sustainability component was divided into two groups, Food Sustainability and Energy Efficiency. Since late December, the B.E.A.T. small groups have been meeting on their own to clarify their goals and create actions plans.

The Small Business group is focusing on supporting small business development and spurring investment along commercial corridors of the town. Big Business is looking at steps the community can take to improve workforce development for industries in the area and to position the community to capitalize on demilitarization construction and activity at the Bluegrass Army Depot.

The Local Food Economy group hopes to support local farmers, increase farmers' market participation and promote

Evolving Crime Scene of Berea

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

When Police Chief David Gregory gave his annual report for the year 2011 to the Berea City Council at their meeting on February 7, there were a few statistics that pointed to a changing criminal environment in Berea. Between 2010 and 2011, aggravated assault dropped from 77 incidents to 9 incidents, and burglary increased from 119 incidents to 173 incidents. For the year 2011, at least, people's property seemed at greater risk while crimes against the people themselves decreased.

While Gregory has a theory on the increased burglaries, he does not know why the aggravated assaults would have dropped.

"The prescription drug market seems to be driving the burglaries," Gregory said, who mentioned that the burglaries often involve houses broken into during the day, with doors kicked and knocked open. "We know that prescription drugs are being stolen from a majority of them."

As far as the decreased assaults, Gregory said he was not sure why

District Boundaries: Back to Old Drawing Board?

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

With the ruling by Franklin County Circuit Judge Phillip Shepherd last week that the redistricting of Kentucky was out of balance, and needed to be redrawn to comply with the one person, one vote mandate, things have become even more complicated in the 2012 election process. Candidates that filed according to the 2011 new drawings of district lines, approved in January by the legislature and signed by Governor Steve Beshear, scrambled last week to file for the district they originally would have served in 2010.

Shepherd's ruling dictated that the 2012 election be based on the district lines prior to the redistricting that was signed into law last month. Shepherd ordered the secretary of state to not recognize the new districts, stating they were unconstitutional.

In the redistricting plan, Madison County was split into four districts, including District 86 with a majority in Rockcastle County and District 91, which stretches to Beattyville. The 81st District, which Rep. Rita Smart serves in Richmond, would keep similar boundaries, and the fourth district would be the 88th, currently served by Rep. Bill Farmer out of Fayette County.

Currently, Madison County is split into the 73rd District, represented by Rep. Donna Mayfield, the 81st District, represented by Rep. Rita Smart and the 36th District, represented by Rep. Lonnie Napier. After the redistricting was approved, Rep. Napier chose not to run for the seat he has held for several years.

Zuria Farmer Austin

Zuria Farmer Austin died February 2 in Austin, Texas at the age of 90. Born near Marion, Virginia in 1921, the daughter of Roby and Cordelia Farmer, Zuria grew up in the embrace of a large extended family.

Train fare from a brother allowed her to travel to Berea and enroll in the Berea College Foundation School. Working in the Boone Tavern gift shop, she continued at Berea until she graduated from the college in 1945. While studying social work at Western Reserve University (MSSA 1948), Zuria met fellow student David Austin. David and Zuria were married in Cleveland, Ohio in 1947 and had three children, Clayton Mayo in 1951, Judith Ann in 1955 and Paul Farmer in 1963.

Zuria returned to her career in social work in the early 1970s as a foster caseworker for the Walter Fernald State School in Massachusetts.

The family moved to Austin, Texas in 1973 when David received an appointment to the University of Texas School of Social Work. Zuria continued her advocacy for persons with disabilities through a number of activities including chair of the legislative committee of the Austin Association of Retarded Citizens. In 1985 she received the Texas ARC Volunteer of the year award for her participation in the passage of legislation allowing for group homes for persons with mental or physical disabilities to be established in the community.

In 2000, Zuria and David built a summer home in Berea where they took great pleasure in entertaining family and friends, now including grandchildren Amanda Austin, Nathan Austin, Josh Austin, Michael Austin, Jennifer Straus, Roby Straus, Brandon Austin and Salvatore Austin. Zuria received the honorary distinction of "Kentucky Colonel" in 2011.

After 60 years of marriage, David Austin passed away in 2008.

From writing letters to the editor or helping a neighbor, to navigating the back channels of local politics for the benefit of the community, Zuria's passion for what she believed always came through. All who knew Zuria spoke of her wit, humor, empathy, wisdom, baking, independence, and most of all, love of family and friends.

A celebration of Zuria's life is being planned. In lieu of flowers, please consider a donation to the David Mayo Austin Fund for Faculty Development at Berea College.

Colon cancer can be prevented if caught early. When found at its earliest, most treatable stage, colon cancer has a 90 percent survival rate.

Early detection is critical since colon cancer often produces no symptoms during early stages. The American Cancer Society recommends that everyone get tested for colon cancer beginning at age 50. People should talk to their doctor about testing earlier if they have a family history of colon cancer or have a personal history of chronic inflammatory bowel disease, such as Crohn's disease or ulcerative colitis.

Twisted is Right

Scenter Stage

Teresa Scenters, Publisher

How accurate is Tanya's cartoon comment this week? Dead on. It would be a good thing to be able to laugh at this whole redistricting fiasco, since the alternative is to develop an ulcer stewing over the blatant political maneuvering going on.

Deciding whether the ruling that declared the House and Senate's newly drawn lines unconstitutional and returned the old lines stands or not will now have to be settled by the Kentucky Supreme Court.

I think most of us want to have confidence in the people we elect. It's just hard to do in reality with all the game playing that goes on.

In the end, I'm betting we end up with the same politically expedient (for some) lines the legislature agreed to and the governor signed in January. The only thing is, by the time the dust settles, around a quarter of million tax payer dollars will have been spent. Dollars the state can ill afford and which could have been put to much better use.

I have to question why anyone is even willing to run for office in the current chaos. On a national level polling indicates that eighty four percent of Americans disapprove of the job Congress is doing and I heard another account that said sixty something percent thought a group of people randomly selected from the phone book would do a better job of governing than our current elected officials.

Still, we have to be grateful there are some good people willing to serve in a public capacity, and there are still a few good ones.

Few being the key word, here are a couple of accounts of one travel agent's dealings with politician. She had a New Hampshire Congresswoman ask for an aisle seat so that her hair wouldn't get messed up by being near the window.

A Senator's aide called to inquire about a package trip to Hawaii. After going over all the cost info, she asked, "Would it be cheaper to fly to California and then take the train to Hawaii?"

Then there was the politician who needed to, "fly to Pepsi-Cola, Florida on one of those little computer planes." When the agent asked if he needed to get to Pensacola on a commuter, his intelligent reply was, "Yeah, whatever!"

Pretty twisted stuff.

Singing Health Expenses Blues

Letters from Berea

Beth Myers, Editor

For several years now, I've had this cough accompanied by icky mucus production. If there were a contest for Most Phlegmatic Co-Worker, my co-workers would certainly be in the running. Different concerns from people in my life have caused me to see different doctors about it, resulting in one diagnosis of COPD, another diagnosis of "Overproduction of Mucus Disorder" (which I don't think exists in the medical diagnosis textbook) and exercise asthma. From one doctor, my former smoking habit that waxed and waned over the last three decades could have caused this coughing thing, while another stated that there was no way it would be caused by smoking since I never truly and passionately committed to the addiction. These frustrating visits culminated in my latest with a pulmonologist (say that word ten times fast).

After telling me I definitely didn't have COPD (because of adequate lung capacity and oxygen levels) and I didn't have exercise asthma, he stated that I really needed to get an echocardiogram and cat scan to make sure I didn't have pulmonary hypertension.

We had been over this territory — both he and my general physician told me that it was very unlikely, a long shot, but in the x-ray there might be a slightly larger pulmonary artery which could possibly, maybe, might? indicate pulmonary hypertension. So maybe I should just get it checked out? Well, I had gotten it checked out — and had been informed very nicely by the hospital that the patient amount due after insurance payment would be $750 for each test, $1,500 total, and, oh, one more thing, would I be a dear and pay that money up front? If I DID have $1,500 to spare, I sure as heck wouldn't be using it for two long shot tests in a field where cost of services seem to be decided daily in a Monopoly game.

The nurses all understood I didn't have the money for the tests. The pulmonologist, however, wasn't quite getting the picture.

"I don't have the money," I told him, again.

Yes, he said, but there was this x-ray and we really should get it checked out.

But wasn't it a long shot, I asked very nicely. And isn't the first symptom of pulmonary hypertension shortness of breath, which we just ruled out very nicely by those other tests that are going to eat me up in small patient deductibles of approximately $200 - $300 each?

Yes, he replied equally nicely, but see, there's this x-ray and we really need to get this checked out . . .

At this point, we started talking slower and louder to each other to break down the language barrier since I didn't speak the Must Test, Because Doctor Said So language, and he didn't speak in the Poverty dialect.

Perhaps I should have used accompanying sign language — NO (shake head vigorously) MONEY (rub my fingers together) FOR THIS CRAP (shake the test order form).

Then he suggested I just have the one test, and get the other later — since lack of money is evidently solved with extra time. Feeling a bit beat down, I scheduled another follow-up with him — another $50 for specialist co-pay — and drove home.

Halfway to Berea from Lexington, I decided that I had had it. Mucusy cough or no, I was done. It wasn't easy for me, cancelling the appointment the next day, and not scheduling myself for the tests, because let's face it, doctors are intimidating. This guy with lots of education who helped people breath again was telling me to get these tests. Who am I to argue?

But I decided that it was time to do what I should have been doing for over five years while chasing this stupid symptom.

I took my checkbook, paid for both aerobic classes and Zumba classes, started drinking lots of water and started breathing exercises. After all I figured, if I did have pulmonary hypertension, that would be over half the treatment anyway.

Going pretty good so far. Cough isn't gone, but it has actually lessened, and even more important, I'm feeling a whole lot healthier.

I should be in a credit card commercial — aerobic classes, $25; Zumba classes, $30, water and breathing, free; temporarily freeing myself from the insane medical expenses crisis in our country, priceless.

Well, maybe not priceless, but worth . . . let's say . . . $1,500.

Kentucky's State Tree: Tulip

The great outdoors

Clint Patterson, College Forester

One of my favorite species of trees is Tulip Tree; scientific name Liriodendron tulipifera. The tree is commonly called "tulip poplar" or "yellow poplar", but it is in the Magnolia family and not a poplar at all. The poplar misnomer comes from the way the leaves flutter in the wind similar to the way a cottonwood tree, a true poplar, does. Also, the extremely tall, large cylindrical trunk that tulip trees often attain is quite similar in growth form to the towering cottonwood.

The tulip tree is one of the largest trees in the Eastern deciduous forest type, and has grown to 190 feet tall and ten feet in diameter in the Southern Appalachians.

The early settlers soon learned from the Indians how to make dug-out canoes from tulip tree logs, and in the Southern United States, they often referred to tulip tree simply as "canoe wood". William Henry Harrison, Daniel Boone, and other famous figures were known for making huge dug-out canoes up to eighty feet in length, from single logs for transporting troops and supplies.

The wood of tulip trees is soft and easily worked, but also much stronger than would be expected from such a fast growing tree, and it is quite rot resistant as well. These qualities made tulip tree an ideal wood for building, and were cited when choosing tulip tree as Kentucky's State Tree. Tulip tree is also the State Tree of Tennessee and Indiana. Kentucky coffee tree was also "in the running" as the State Tree here, and the lengthy and contentious battle between the two tree factions is pretty interesting. You can read about it at the following link: http://www.net-state.com/states/symb/trees/ky\_tulip\_poplar.htm

When my wife and I were just starting out, we lived in a trailer and didn't have a garage or out-building. I was working as a timber buyer, and couldn't believe that lumber was so high, while at the same time I wasn't able to get much for nice and big, straight tulip tree logs. So, I decided to trade a load of tulip logs to a saw mill in exchange for sawing up half of them into two-by-sixes and one-by-sixes for me to use for lumber.

I had never built anything larger than a bird house, and the only tools I had was a chainsaw and a hammer. Undaunted, I bought twelve treated six-by-sixes, a bunch of nails, some hinges, roofing tin, a level and a hand post-hole-digger. Then I borrowed a ladder and Grandpa came over for a day and showed me how to set the posts square and plumb. Working on the project by myself, in less than a month I had a thirty-two by twenty-four foot barn-like building with a loft, workshop area and space to park a car on one side. The success of the building was a real confidence booster for me, and served as a pivotal moment in my life.

By April, tulip trees around Berea will begin to bloom. Their flowers are not quite as beautiful as other members of the Magnolia family, but their light green, tulip-like flowers with orange flecks have a charm of their own. Notice the tulip-shaped leaves that flutter in the wind, and the straight, cylindrical trunk. The fast-growing tulip tree is a great choice for planting on your property if you have the room for a large tree. It is readily available at most local nurseries.

"Let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not." — Galatians 6:9

From our readers

The Board of Berea Faith Community Outreach, Inc. (BFCO) wishes to thank the Berea community for your generous support of the Food Bank, Bereans United for Utility and Rent Relief (BUURR), and the Frank Gailey Transient Fund.

During the past several years of extremely challenging economic times, the community has increased its donations of food and dollars to support our programs that reach out to those in need. We are especially grateful for the fresh produce that is donated during the growing season, which complements the canned goods, frozen items and dry staples that are always available. We operate completely with volunteers, thus administrative costs amount to only about 3 percent of our annual budget. Your contributions go directly to help those in need.

Thank you, Berea, for your ongoing support.

Pat Hickey, President

household food production. Promoting business and household energy efficiency is the focus of the Energy Efficiency group. This could include providing incentives for efficiency and exploring the possibility of on-bill financing through Berea Municipal Utilities for efficiency upgrades.

The Local Financing group has a goal of creating a local investment fund that would facilitate investment in local businesses and create an "entrepreneurial friendly community." The Tourism group has a goal of broadening the definition of tourism to include recreational activities, arts and events, history, scenery, and even exercise, while continuing to support artists and crafts-people.

According to Matt Oyer with the City of Berea, the workgroups are still open to new members. They are also identifying ways to keep the community and stakeholders informed as their work progresses.

More information about the strategic goals and action plans for the six workgroups are available online at the BEAT website: <http://mybereaeconomy.wordpress.com>. BEAT also has a Facebook page, where information about upcoming meetings is posted.

The public is invited to the next large group BEAT meeting, on Thursday, February 23 at 6:00 p.m. at Berea Baptist Church. At that meeting, all of the economic development workgroups will present more details about their goals and action plans.

The Legislative Research Commission (LRC) is appealing Shepherd's ruling, and has been successful in bypassing the Court of Appeals to go directly to the Kentucky Supreme Court. Chief Justice John Minton has given attorneys until noon on Friday to file all motions that the Supreme Court should consider. The LRC is hoping that the Supreme Court will restore the legislative districts signed into law last month.

As of the Friday, February 10 deadline those filing for election in the 36th District were Democrats Bradley Bud Montgomery of Berea and R.W. "Buckwheat" Gilbert of Stanford; and Republicans Larry Woods and Nathan Mick, both from Lancaster.

In the 81st House District, incumbent Rita Smart is the only Democrat to file while two Republicans, Mary R. McGill Long of Berea and Tiffany Nash of Richmond are listed by the Secretary of State as candidates for the office.

In the 73rd, Republican incumbent Donna Mayfield will be challenged by Democrat JoEllen Reed. Both are from Winchester.

that statistic has changed, and whether it signals any change in crime in Berea. When looking at a five year span, however, the aggravated assaults in Berea spiked in 2009 and 2010 with 52 and 77 respectively, after 11 incidents in 2007 and 15 incidents in 2008; numbers more in line with the 2011 data.

In general, according to the annual report, overall criminal activity in Berea significantly increased in 2011, with 45 percent more criminal citations given and 38 percent more arrests made. Citations are given for such things as disorderly conduct, and more recently, possession of marijuana - a charge that previously would have caused an arrest.

Incidents of murder and rape continue to stay very low in Berea, with only two murder charges and one attempted murder charge in the last three years. Before the murder in 2009, there hadn't been one in Berea for 20 years.

"I had just become chief," Gregory said rue-fully, "when we had that first murder in 2009. And then two years later, another one, after going so long without even one."

In terms of rape, there have been two incidents for each of the last four years. The Berea Police Department does have a much higher average of clearing, or solving, their crimes than the national average. Berea police solve an average of 70 percent of their violent crimes compared to the national average of 47 percent; and they solve 29 percent of the property crimes compared to the national average of 19 percent.

While this statistic may be somewhat misleading, because of the much smaller numbers of violent crimes here, Berea compares favorably to cities of similar size, who on average solve 54 percent of their violent crimes.

The officers in the Berea Police Department worked a lot more overtime in 2011, since the department was short by five officers. Two of them were on either FMLA leave or worker's comp leave, two were undergoing in-field training, and one was in the acad-

my. While the department kept up the numbers out on the street, it has taken a toll on the existing officers.

"I really appreciate their sacrifice during this time," Gregory said. "I have such a great group."

Gregory struggles with turnover in the department, as Berea loses different policeman to jobs with better benefits or higher pay. Once an officer receives their certificate, they can basically make a lateral move to any other department in Kentucky. Hazardous duty retirement, Gregory said, can be an attractive benefit that draws officers away from Berea. The City of Berea has not purchased it, because of its high expense. Other areas, such as Richmond and Madison County, are struggling with those high costs currently.

The Berea Police Department only has one officer with 10-14 years of service in their rank; there are eight officers with 5 - 9 years of service, and 20 with 0 - 4 years of service in their rank. That includes ten officers, four sergeants, three lieutenants, two captains and the police chief.

lifelong bond, while also providing companionship and comfort to others.

"We've both had kids who are shy and have warmed up," said Lowe, who heads the local branch of Pawsibilities. "There are times when a child will read to a dog, rather than at home. Some kids really love it--they get one book after another."

Both animals and owners go through evaluation and training at the organization's center in Frankfort before the dogs become certified as therapy or service dogs, with the owners as their only handler. The time involved, according to Lowe, "depends on each individual. Temperament is a big part of it; getting along in groups. Some only take a few weeks, others a year.

It's not so much the length of time as doing what they're required to do."

In all of the therapy animal, service dog, and pet obedience classes, there are no angry words, no harsh yanks on the leash.

"It's all positive, treat-based training," said Lowe. "No choke collars."

Once certified, the dog-owner partners become part of a statewide therapy team that visits nursing homes, assisted-living facilities, senior centers and other venues. Other dogs and cats train as facility live-ins, or as home medical alert animals.

"These are just pets with good temperament and obedience that do volunteer work in the community," she reiterated.

Morgan, now two years old, began her training as a puppy with Lowe, and has been a therapy dog in the Pawsibilities program for a year and a half. Named for a Dr. Seuss character, six-year-old Sneeches began her life with Jane Bihl as a show dog.

"I realized that she was very gentle with kids," recalled Bihl.

After doing basic obedience training, she said, "We got interested in therapy."

Sneeches, because of her age and experience, passed her therapy certification with flying colors, and joined the program "not quite a year" ago.

On her business card, besides her owner's contact information, Morgan lists her available services: judgement, advice and criticism are "not available," but hugs, kisses, and listening are "free."

If your facility is interested in hosting therapy animals, contact Lisa Lowe at (859) 321-6690, or lisalowe@roadrunner.com. ## Coaches Look Ahead To District Competition

Madison Southern Girls and Boys face Model in the post-season for the 5th year in a row

By Jonathan Schinhofen
Citizen Sports Reporter

Lady Eagles vs. Lady Patriots

The 44th District post-season tournament features the third meeting of the Madison Southern Lady Eagles (10-15) and the Model Lady Patriots (9-16) of the season.

Southern split the regular season games with Model, losing at Model in overtime and winning at home. This is the 5th year in a row that the Lady Eagles and Lady Patriots square off in the first round. The Lady Eagles have won three of the previous four District Tournament games against Model.

Lady Eagles head coach Summer Simmons is keeping her team focused on their last regular season opponent for the time being. They have a 3-day break to prepare for Model. The two teams generally face each other at least twice a year, so they know what to expect of each other.

Simmons said the Patriots "are coached well and play hard," and that her players have to be ready for that.

The game is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. on February 22 at Eastern Kentucky University's Alumni Coliseum.

Eagles vs. Patriots

Southern and Model are at it again, playing each other in the first round of the 44th District playoffs for the fifth year in a row. Model won the matchup in 2008, and Southern has taken the three postseason games since then.

Model's record this season is 15-11 and Southern's is 8-18. But win-loss records do not say much about the relative strength of two teams.

Each school makes its own schedule and there is no requirement to play other teams in the District during the year. Strength of schedule plays a big part when it comes to wins and losses. Southern has played seven teams ranked in the top 20 in the state this year.

Earlier this season, Model beat Southern on January 10 by a score of 74-68. If it's hard to pick the favorite in this one, the coaches are not going to be much help.

Model head coach Wes Scarberry said, "We were very fortunate to beat them this season. Madison Southern presents a very challenging game for us. They have really good guard play in [Chris] Roberts and [Tyler] Abshear. All their players shoot the ball extremely well, but also have the ability to get to the rim, so defending them is very difficult. They play a variety of defenses to keep teams off balance, so we have a lot to prepare for."

Southern head coach Shane Buttry has a weapon he had been missing in junior guard Mike Rothermel, a key player whose absence while recovering from an injury hurt the team.

"The game could go either way," said Buttry. "They are quicker than us but we have some advantages against them as well."

As Scarberry alluded to in his comments, Southern runs a pick-your-poison sort of offense. They can shoot from the perimeter, but can move the ball inside if the opponent decides to defend the long-range shots.

The game is scheduled for 8:15 p.m. on February 22 at Eastern Kentucky University's Alumni Coliseum.

Berea Teams Face Tough Battles Against the Formidable Lady Indians and Indians

By Jonathan Schinhofen

Lady Pirates vs. Lady Indians

The Berea Community High School Lady Pirates basketball team opens up the District tournament this year by playing the Madison Central Lady Indians, just as they have in the previous four post-season tournaments. The Pirates lost each of those matchups.

Central is defending the 44th District championship and the 11th Region championship, which earned them a trip to the Sweet Sixteen last year.

At 23-10, the Lady Indians look just as strong this year as they did last year. Lady Pirates head coach Jerry Bingham acknowledges the Lady Indians as the favorites in the tournament but believes his team has a chance to win.

Bingham said, "We will work hard this week to put in a game plan that will help us compete and hopefully challenge them for a win in the end. We must do a good job of taking care of the ball and keep the turnovers down have a chance to win."

The game is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. on February 21 at Eastern Kentucky University's Alumni Coliseum.

Pirates vs. Indians

The Berea Community High School Pirates and Madison Central Indians square off in the first round of the 44th District postseason tournament for the 5th year in a row. Berea has lost the last 4 games, and are without a win in the District tournament since 2006.

The Indians are currently 26-1 with one regular season game to go. Given that Berea's record is 13-15, and that the Indians have taken every District championship this century, it would not be surprising if Madison Central fans considered the game an inconvenient preliminary to winning the championship. It may be an acceptable attitude for fans, but not for Madison Central head coach Allen Feldhaus.

In order to win the championship, Feldhaus said, "you must take one game at a time, starting with Berea. Come District time, our record means absolutely nothing. Berea played us well last year in the first game and I promise you we will not take them lightly."

Berea head coach Bill Smallwood acknowledges that his team is the underdog.

"It truly isn't anything new to our basketball program," Smallwood said.

The David-and-Goliath nature of small school vs. big school does not need to be retold. It is a fact of life at Berea. In every game Smallwood expects his athletes to play up to their potential as individuals and as a team. Usually, his expectations are met.

If pride, intelligence and intensity put points on the scoreboard, Smallwood's teams would have more championships. As it is, the Pirates have shown that they can play a good game even against giants like Central. Last year, Berea lost to Central in the first round of the District tournament by just 9 points. Central then trounced Madison Southern by 23 in the District finals and won 2 more games before losing in the 11th Region championship game.

The game is scheduled for 8:15 p.m. on February 21 at Eastern Kentucky University's Alumni Coliseum.

Zoogleman Visits Silver Creek, Inspires Students

Submitted to The Berea Citizen

Jennan Lahamer and Jayshawn Ethridge, above, play the game invented by Will Caudill, the Zoogleman, kneeling behind them. The Zoogleman visited Silver Creek Elementary to demonstrate his invention.

By Taylor Allen and Corie Smith, Fifth Grade
Special to the Citizen

The following story was written by Allen and Smith, two students of Silver Creek Elementary, about their visit from The Zoogleman.

Mr. Will Caudill, known as the Zoogleman, told an inspiring story that started when he was a young boy.

When "Willie" Caudill was four years old he was playing with his brothers and fell on a rock and broke his hip. During surgery to repair his broken hip, he contracted the Polio Virus, which caused him to stay in the hospital for four years. During this time, "Willie" really developed his imagination in the hospital. Through this imagination he designed a game he could play, because he could not play sports.

Zoogleman has been traveling our nation for 24 years telling his story of hope, determination, courage and an imaginative mind. Mr. Caudill's story brings many laughs and giggles to all who have heard his courageous story.

The instructions to this fun-filled game are:

1. Find a partner maximum of two people,
2. Throw the zoogle under-handed as if throwing a softball. This throw cannot spin in the air and if it does you will lose a point. Then your partner will get a point.

3. If your partner does not catch the throw that is directed to them, you get a point and they lose a point.

These are the rules of how to play the fun-filled game:

1. If your hand touches the colored section of the zoogle stick, you will lose your hand (behind your back).

2. If your leg touched the colored section of the zoogle stick, you will lose a leg (behind your back).

We very much appreciate the Zoogleman coming to our school!

Mardi Gras Fun-Raiser Sunday

By Sheri Patterson
Citizen Reporter

You don't have to head south to have a fun Mardi Gras Celebration. The Union Church Mission Team invites you to their Madi Gras Celebration here in Berea on February 19. The festivities will follow church services at 12 p.m. in the Union Church Community room.

The fun event includes a pancake and fixins lunch, silent auction, photo booth and more. Suggested donations are $10 for adults, $5 for children or $20 for a family.

The team is hosting the Celebration Fund-raiser to help provide scholarships for the mission trip to Jamaica.

The team will be going to assist with R.A.I.S.E. Jamaica, a project of Christian Services International (C.S.I.) located in St. Mary's Parish Jamaica. R.A.I.S.E. is the acronym for Restoring Agriculture and Investing in Sustainable Enterprise. They will be visiting and working on the 196 acres recently donated to C.S.I. for the purpose of promoting and sustaining the livelihoods of people living in the area.

In honor of Scout Sunday on February 12, 2012, the Berea United Methodist church welcomed attendance from BUMC Boy Scout troop 74 and Webelos II pack 516. The young men began both the 8:30 a.m. and 11 a.m. services by presenting the flag of the United States and leading the congregation in the pledge of allegiance.

During church services, Paul Rominger, Boy Scout charter representative from BUMC, presented the church with the 2012 charter membership. This year Troop 74 celebrates 75 years of scouting in the Berea area. Troop 74 is the only troop in the Bluegrass council to reach this achievement.

Troop 74 invites any young man between the ages of 11 and 17 to visit a meeting. Meetings are held at 7 p.m. on Thursday nights in the Berea United Methodist Church.

Lambert Leaves Lessons for Leisure

By Sheri Patterson
Citizen Reporter

Berea Independent School will not be the same next year. The school will be saying goodbye to a very special teacher.

Brenda Lambert, who teaches high school English, has announced her upcoming retirement after 43 years at Berea Community School. Brenda has been teaching there since it was built in 1969.

Brenda was born and raised in Berea, and attended Berea High School; graduating in the Class of 1964. She states she was influenced at an early age by her mother, the late Marie Holt Williams, who believed that along with being nurturing, loving, and supportive, you also had standards and expectations.

In her early years, Brenda developed a passion for music. She began playing piano at the age of 12. She was in the high school choir and was the piano accompanist to the Glee Club. She has continued this passion at the Westside Baptist Church, where she has been the pianist since 1973, and the choir director since 1989.

Brenda first knew she wanted to be a teacher when she was in eighth grade. She credits her Aunt Neureul Miracle, who taught at Rockcastle and was later the superintendent, as being an inspiration to her. She also was strongly influenced by her junior and senior English teachers, Mabel Todd and Cora Cook.

Berea Community School, built in 1969, hired Brenda to

Word From Berea Streets

Do you feel the school day or the school year should be extended?

Angie Chasteen from Berea said, "No I don't, because I think every parent should try homeschooling because there are free services available on the Internet and it provides a bond between the parent and child like no other."

Amber Lineham of Berea said, "No, I feel the schools are fine the way they are."

Chad Underwood of Crab Orchard said, "Yes, I believe school should go year round to give a better education and make kids smarter."

Student of the Month

Favorite Part of School: Band.

School activities: Band, TSA, tennis.

Education influences: Mrs. Lisa Jones, Mr. David Ratliff, Mr. Kendall Gadd.

Proudest Moment in School: Achieved a Distinguished rating and a 1st place at the 2010 Hazard competition for marching band.

What does school mean to you? It is more than just a place to get an education; it is the major way children get social experiences.

Role Models: Mom, brother, Lisa Jones, David Ratliff, Kendall Gadd.

Favorites: Musician - I favor many -- I listen to all kinds of music; movie - 300, I love their courage; holiday - Christmas, I love being with my family; school subject - math, I like the challenge it gives me; book - Ranger's Apprentice, the continuous quest is interesting to me; place to vacation - Hanging Gardens of Babylon, I love nature; place to live - In the country but still close to town, I like to have my privacy.

Teacher of the Month

Meet Bill Smallwood, a teacher of sixth through twelfth grade at Madison Southern High School. He has three children with his wife Pam, who works at the KY Department of Criminal Justice. His oldest, Katie, works with Macy's corporation; his middle child, Tess, is in her third year of med school at U.K.; and his youngest, Hayley, is studying musical theatre/English as a junior at Transylvania.

Teaching for: 28 years.

Why teach? Too many reasons to mention, but probably the driving force had to do with a counselor in high school who told me that I was too "gifted" in math/science to become a teacher, and that I should move toward engineering. My grandfather was teacher of the year in Kentucky in 1957 (year I was born). From that counselor, I realized that our most important resource, our children, shouldn't have to settle for teachers who go into the profession for the wrong reasons. We need the best of the best that our colleges produce and I felt I had a lot to offer. As a health educator, I get to cover the practical issues that life throws at us which keeps things interesting and intriguing.

Degrees: Associates degree in electrical engineering from U.K., BS in PE/health education from ECU, master's in school health from ECU, administration certifications -- principal, DPP, instruction supervision, ECU.

Favorite part of teaching: Conversations/connection with students, helping guide and explore healthier lifestyles with students. Creating an environment conducive for students to feel comfortable sharing what they know and comfortable enough to hunt for the answers.

Semester goals: Leaving students with a practical base for moving forward in a healthy way. Making strong enough connections that our student will feel comfortable coming back if they need support later.

School activities: Postponing sexual involvement adult leader, high school head basketball coach, high school head baseball coach.

Who has helped you most in your education? Probably my wife, children, students. They know it is/had been important to me, therefore, they keep me focused on the task at hand. Early administrators in our district as well... Supt. Wallace, my first building principal, Dr. Betty Watson, my first instructional supervisor, Peggy Kelly. Teachers such as Jason Bunnell, Judy Gabbard, were excellent teachers who also helped mold my teaching. Coaches I have met that made a major impact on the importance of teaching and keeping it fun were Jim Valvano and Rick Mageris. Some of the best teachers I have ever met were coaches who understood how the two were linked.

Proudest moment as a teacher: Tons... All the moments when a former student comes back to share an impact that the class made on them or when a student goes into the health field for a career choice for all the right reasons. Selfishly speaking, the support and recognition of being a quality teacher despite being a PE/Health guy by those who understand what teaching is really about. My evaluations from administrators being a big part of that understanding.

Role models: I have several. All those sports figures who go about their business in a humble/professional way. Those who recognize "team" as the most important concept when working with others. Al Kaline, Tubby Smith, Billy Graham, Walter Cronkite are some notable people who impress me with their humility.

Favorites: Musician -- Love garage rock, heavy metal, hard rock, folk, emo, OLD country (rebel rousers); Movie - Scent of a Woman and Apocalypse Now; holiday - Thanksgiving; school subject - health; book - Anything by Pat Conroy; place to vacation - Europe - many places... Italy being the favorite so far; place to live - Maui.

Mystery Out Of Montessori

Montessori Method

Schuy Roop, Holding Hands Montessori School

The Montessori Method is used today across the world. It can be a mystery to most, but it's really not mysterious at all. It's simply based on using the child's natural curiosity and ability to learn.

Have you ever seen children accomplish something totally on their own for the first time? You see the smile and sheer joy that embodies their whole being. We have all enjoyed that feeling of accomplishment too. I recently replaced our toilet seat, of all things, and performing this task successfully gave me great satisfaction and a sense of independence. In a Montessori classroom children get to experience these feelings throughout their day, which is why the Montessori philosophy is so successful in igniting the joy of learning within the child.

Peek into a Montessori classroom and you will see a mixed age group of children, spanning three years of development, freely working in a curriculum-rich environment. It consists of the following subject areas for the 3-6 year olds - Practical Life, Sensorial, Language, Math, Science, History, Geography, Art and Music.

Freedom is essential in the Montessori philosophy and is often misunderstood by the casual observer. The children are free to choose work within acceptable rules; it is called freedom within limits. Children work independently and together on various materials. These materials are self-correcting which promotes the feelings of success, satisfaction, and independence. They are presented in a way that holds the curiosity of the child.

The teacher is trained to be an observer, a guide and a facilitator. Observation is a daily duty the teacher performs. The observations help to maintain a dynamic learning environment that continues to meet all the children's developmental needs throughout the year.

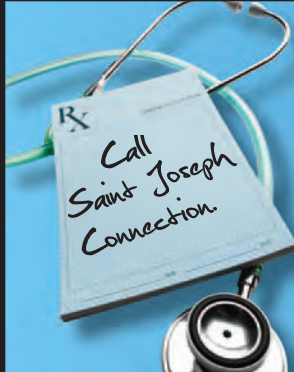

The key pieces to the puzzle of Montessori are freedom within limits, the prepared environment, the trained teacher and the Montessori materials. All pieces help the child feel successful and independent, cultivating a lifelong joy of learning.

teach the freshman and sophomore English classes. Brenda's first year teaching ironically included the teaching of her two brothers, Wendell and Kendal Holt, and will end with teaching her granddaughter, Sahara Gentry.

Brenda was asked to be the cheerleader sponsor and enjoyed that role for 17 years from 1969-1986.

Brenda admits, "Although I was never a cheerleader myself, I have had good memories and experiences with them."

Brenda has also served on the high school Site Based Council since 1991.

She stated, "You should pick your battles. When you feel something is so important, take a stand for what you believe in. It must be solved and dealt with."

She has worked extensively with the ESS (Extended School Services) Program accommodating and helping students before and after school, and even meeting up with them at McDonalds over breaks to make up missed work.

Although Brenda received her Rank 1 secondary principleship from Eastern Kentucky University in 1982, she states teaching English and being in the classroom has always been her passion -- she never wanted to be in administration. Brenda's favorite thing about teaching is the interaction she has had with her students and the ability to play a supportive role in their lives. She believes teaching English offers a unique and personal insight into the thinking and lives of her students, and she couldn't imagine teaching any other subject.

Brenda has enjoyed journalism because it gives the students communication tools to use throughout life. It helps the students find issues they are passionate about.

When Brenda is not in the classroom she enjoys spending time with family. Brenda's husband is James Lambert, whom she married in 1984. She has a son Sean and a stepdaughter Lora. Celebrations and holidays are special times in the Lambert home with all the family getting together. Friday evenings are generally spent going out to dinner with her brothers. She enjoys reading anything she can get her hands on, crafts, sewing, and tending to her pets.

Brenda has been passionate about teaching and has been heard to say "Teaching isn't just a profession, it's a lifestyle."

She is proud to see her students succeed in life in their careers and families. She has enjoyed a sense of continuity by teaching two generations in the community.

Brenda advises others to "work hard and have pride in your work". She feels fortunate to have loved the job she has had.

Brenda has no concrete plans at the moment for how she plans to spend her retirement other than enjoying time in her new sunroom and swimming.

PASS Positively Pushes Success

Written by Donna Caldwell from Madison Southern

PASS, a Positive Approach to Student Success, plays many roles in the success of students at Madison Southern. Madison Southern has been utilizing the PASS program since the 2008-09 school year, which is based on a coaching system -- with a behavior coach, Kirsten Estep and an assistant, Dashana Rowlette.

The PASS program provides positive behavior interventions that allow students to be successful in the educational setting. In addition, PASS creates a positive and supportive environment within its classroom that allows students to decompress from stressful situations, have one-on-one instruction for academic and social skills, and allows students the opportunity to evaluate behavioral decisions and their repercussions.

The PASS program not only relies on active communication between fellow teachers and students, it prides itself on a positive home connection to students who are at times "at-risk" of failure or dropping out of school. Communication to parents and guardians allows teachers to educate them on Infinite Campus use, tutoring, educational field trips and programs at Madison Southern that could positively enhance their children. Currently the PASS program has logged over 80 calls home this school year.

As a response to intervention, PASS is a preventative measure in decreasing the number of detentions and suspensions at Madison Southern and focusing on keeping each student in the classroom as much as possible. Through social skills instruction, monitoring progress and assessing future needs of potential PASS students, the PASS program is able to provide support to a number of students.

A primary focus of the PASS program at Madison Southern is also decreasing the number of truancy occurrences among our student body. As a member of the Truancy Diversion team, Mrs. Estep touches base with students and parents emphasizing the importance of being at school. As a team member and PASS Coach Mrs. Estep offers support for the student in order to eliminate the obstacles or barriers that are in the way of the student attending school regularly, whether it is transportation, school anxiety or issues at home.

The PASS program at Madison Southern is many things to many people. The impact that the PASS program has had on the students of Madison Southern is reflected daily throughout our classrooms. Madison Southern is very fortunate to have been granted the ability to implement a program that works at eliminating student issues in order to provide more focused students in the classroom.

FROM THE BEREA CITIZEN ARCHIVES FEBRUARY 1982

The Berea Community High School Thespians Club had succeeded in setting a record. It was the fifth consecutive year the club had been sent to state with original material. They had competed with, The Quiet Place, a play written by the director of the school's drama department, Eddie Kennedy. In individual honors for Berea students in regional competition, Christy Tate won best actress and Steve Cook and Tara Bellando were named to the all-regional cast.

Conley Saylor, owner of Superior Food Market was pictured with two employees who had each completed 10 years of service. Receiving $100 savings bonds from Saylor were Arlie VanWinkle and Gerald Combs. Herman Hundley had won a fishing tournament at Dale Hollow Lake.

Mrs. Pearl Baker was accompanied by Marilyn Bailey and infant daughter, Amy Lynn, to Alexandria Ky., where they were overnight guests of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Kincaid. Mrs. Baker's sister, Florence Campbell returned to Berea with them.

Joyce Ann Hannan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Hannan of Center Street had been promoted to assistant director of St. Anne's Nursery in Juneau Alaska.

John Butwell, son of Mrs. Ruth Butwell of Prospect Street had accepted a job as staff writer and reporter for the Jackson County Sun in McKee.

Maude Combs of Estill Street had spent several days in the Berea Hospital undergoing tests and treatment.

Members of the American Association of Medical Assistants who had attended a meeting at Boone Tavern were, Marian Benge, Ann Lopez, Margaret Thurman, Billie Dyer, Jeri Heinemeyer and Connie Hazel.

Sixteen students from Berea had been named to the Eastern Kentucky University Dean's List. They were, Valerie F. Alexander, Linda S. Begley, Dennis L. Blackburn, Roger D. Burnell, John R. Homeroom winners shown with Stephanie are (l-r): Weston Carl, Keith Richmond, Jerry Killpack, Regina Hylton, Tiffany King, Regina Ballinger, Kim Williams and Stacy Durham.

Weather balloon found

WHAT GOES UP—Tom Davis, a farmer on Berea Route 5, checked on what he thought was trash caught in one of his trees, and found a high-technology surprise. The 'trash' was a weather balloon, which had burst and fallen to earth after reaching seven miles up in the atmosphere. Opening the box attached to the parachute, Mr. Davis found a pouch and instructions to send the equipment back to its point of origin, Knoxville, Tenn. (Photo by Donna Frost)

Fear For Felines & Five Lanes Heard by Council

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

The Berea City Council again heard from property owners on Highway 25N about the proposed five-lane construction design that the state has submitted. Since many owners viewed the plans, and realized that the new design would take away a great deal of their parking, they have organized to try to stop the current design and get a smaller project going.

Chuck Conley, a residential property owner on Highway 25N, addressed city council first, "It seems to be the council was unaware of the contentiousness of the issue. My real question at this point is if there is a reason why a 5-lane won't work, what can we do besides fuss and fight."

The Kentucky Department of Transportation already owns the right-of-way that they are proposing to take to expand the current two lane highway to five. It had been purchased back in the late 1940s, when the highway was first constructed. Since that time, practically all property owners adjacent to the highway have built on to the state owned land, many of them unknowingly.

Dan Sipple from Sipple's Chiropractic stated that he felt disheartened, since no one had visited his business to speak to him, and unsupported by the city council members.

Richard Bellando responded strongly to Sipple's complaints, stating, "There's not a person on this council who didn't hear you, who doesn't support you."

Others informed Sipple that they had been speaking to City Administrator Randy Stone about the concerns of the property owners, as

Wildfires Threatening Berea's Forests

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

Research contributed by Clint Patterson

Though it seems too early to worry about wildfires or forest fires, the fact is the spring fire hazard season started on February 15. Even with the wet conditions of the last several months, there have already been 50 fires in Kentucky that have burned almost 1,500 acres.

"Forest fires are a relatively common occurrence in Kentucky," Clint Patterson said, the Berea College forester, who pointed out that last year there were over 1,800 forest fires in Kentucky with over 54,000 acres burned.

Southern Students Experience Monster Skids

Madison Southern students in Driver's Ed, (l - r), Newt Howard, Will Walker and M Jay Parson, experienced driving for the Skid Monster program in Southern's parking lot -- a program sponsored by EKU. This is the first year that the school has brought EKU's program to the school, according to Duane Cress, the instructor of Driver's Ed. The two yellow wheels on the vehicles exaggerate small mistakes that a driver makes, sending the car easily into a skid with the smallest miscalculations. It teaches teenagers how to prevent skids as well as how to pull out of them. One participant recently had an accident on Valentine's Day, when his car skid into a pole. When one student was asked how he felt after driving the vehicle, he said, "nauseous."

Gilbert Auctioning for Chili Night Out

By Beth Curlin
Special to the Citizen

Chili Night Out bidders will be entertained again this year by the auctioneering antics of a local minister, Kent Gilbert, pastor of Union Church, on February 25 at the Berea Arts Council's annual fundraiser at Berea Community School. Decorations are being created by Aaron Knapp and Eric Crowden. Appetizers and cakes for dessert are being cooked up by members of the Berea community.

Perhaps Gilbert's most famous auctioneering feat was several years ago when the event was held during a terrible snow storm. Kent auctioned off a snowball. Kent auctioned off a snowball, to get the bidders "warmed" up, and he actually got $25 for it.

Gilbert has been a mainstay for the Berea Arts Council auction, cajoling audiences at the live auction almost every year since its inception nine years ago. He wasn't ever really trained in the skill, he said. Pam Corley, who needed someone to do the auction for a cat and dog neuter and spay program to raise money years ago, knew Kent's father had done auctioneering, and she told Kent, "You can do this!" So he

As members of the Berea community, many of us enjoy coming together to celebrate school pride, demonstrate good sportsmanship, and encourage friendly rivalry among the various athletic teams within our school district.

As our community strives to be welcoming, inclusive, and one that truly embraces the rich diversity of our citizens, we encourage parents, students, and all community members to show their school pride by participating only in school-sanctioned events that unify, rather than divide us.

Regardless of the original intent, last year, the "Rebel Run", a loosely organized, unsanctioned caravan of sports fans divided our community deeply, when members of the caravan displayed divisive memorabilia and shouted racial slurs to members of our African-American community as they drove by.

We have been, and will continue working with, school officials, teachers, parents, and law officials to publicly denounce such acts of hate and bias, to provide valuable learning opportunities to the students, and to clearly promote a message of unity and inclusiveness during the district tournaments, and beyond.

We hope you commit to joining us in these efforts and we certainly wish all Madison County teams and fans a safe, respectful, and successful tournament season that reflects the true spirit of competition.

Who Wants to Work it Out

Scenter Stage

and feel entitled to have their every demand met?

It's not just the political climate in town either. It's everywhere, from the red/blue conflict in this country that's swiftly becoming class warfare, right down to the family unit where husbands and wives are more inclined to just throw in the towel and look for greener pastures than to "work it out."

It seems as if no one is willing to budge at all from their own position. And putting the greater good or the needs of someone else ahead of one's own, well forget about that.

Reminds me of a little story I heard about three young boys who happened by the President just as Mr. Obama was falling from a bridge. The boys jumped after him with no regard to their own safety and rescued him.

Mr. Obama was so grateful that he wanted to thank each of them by giving them something they'd always wanted.

The first boy asked for a trip to Disney Land and just like magic the following summer he was in Disney Land.

The second boy asked for a pair of Nike Shocks and sure enough the next day he was wearing a pair of the shoes.

The third boy asked for a wheel chair with a plasma TV, cup holders and hydraulics. The President was very puzzled so he asked why the young man wanted a tricked out wheel chair since he didn't look disabled.

The boy replied, "I will be after my father finds out I saved you".

According to a old John Lennon song, we can work it out, but I'm thinking he may have been deluded when he was a young Beatle.

Is it just me or do people really not want to work anything out these days. For most of my life I've thought people in general and especially the people of Berea, the majority of the time, get along or at least they try to.

What's going on? Is it that the ME generation has taken power or that the selfish have spawned children and grandchildren who are even more self-centered, demanding

Working for Well Being of All

Letters from Berea

Beth Myers, Editor

er who had to insure the survival of all.

I didn't understand this as a kid. It's a simple concept, but difficult to apply to our understanding -- when we become responsible for something, our relationship to it can, and should, completely change.

I was reminded of this moral at the city council meeting this week, as different property owners spoke about their concerns and frustrations with the proposed redesign of Highway 25N into five lanes.

It struck me that Berea residents, and property owners, can freely advocate for what they want -- whether bike lanes, the future of their business or a turn lane instead of the proposed five lanes. But the city council members as leaders of the city are in a very different role. They have to look at the whole, and evaluate what's best in terms of traffic, the businesses along the 25N highway and safety of drivers. The whole issue is not as clear cut from a broad perspective, as it is from an individual perspective.

My favorite local pharmacy is down there, along with my mechanic and the car dealership where I bought my last car. It's a great corridor of local Berea businesses, and I don't want to see even one of them suffer. On the other hand, I've also been held up coming out of Save-A-Lot, and gotten pretty frustrated every time I want to make a left hand turn onto the highway. And I've had my own share of close calls as vehicles lurch on and off the highway. Would turn lanes solve the problem? Would a three lane solve the problem? I have a lot of questions, and I would be uneasy if the city council members rushed into any kind of pledges of support.

And there's the larger concern of the state owned right-of-way. There's a lot of private development built on land that is state owned, and that will continue to be the reality whether the highway is three, four or five.

I wish that weren't the case; I wish these businesses didn't face this hammer coming down. But they are facing it, and it will be tricky negotiating through all the different threads of this tangled picture. But as with unraveling any tangle, it's best done with patience, time and gentle hands, since pulling and tugging leads to more snarls and intractable knots.

Perhaps we should all act as if someone told us, "take over, cap'n," and we worked to insure the well-being of all in our fair city.

Honoring Veterans and Trees

The great outdoors

Clint Patterson, College Forester

Since we're close to the Bluegrass Army Depot, I thought it would be appropriate to recognize a unique accomplishment in American military history. Of course, it also has to do with trees.

During The Great War, later called World War I, the importance of aircraft in warfare became apparent. Just a few years after the first airplane was invented by the Wright brothers, these fragile, wooden crafts began to be transformed into fighting machines by American and European military forces.

The best wood for manufacturing airplanes was Sitka spruce. According to General Brice P. Disque, in 1919, "Sitka spruce, generally found in scattering clumps of trees in the forest of the Pacific Northwest, proved to be the best of all wood in a combination of the necessary qualities of lightness, strength, resiliency, long and tough fiber, and would not splinter when struck by a rifle bullet."

The United States was at a distinct advantage over the European powers in that huge quantities of the best timber for airplane construction were at its disposal in the Pacific Northwest. However, getting these enormous trees, grown mainly on steep, remote mountainsides, to the processing mills was another matter.

To make the situation worse, timber workers were on strike at this time. General Disque, after studying the dilemma, concluded that resolving the lumber situation was crucial to the defeat of the Central Powers, and recommended that an Army division be employed to do the work themselves.

Beginning with the U.S. Army Signal Corps., the Spruce Production Division was formed, and by May of 1918, a force of over 28,000 soldiers was busy at work transforming the giant trees into lumber. A monumental feat in engineering and ingenuity, the Spruce Division's use of trucks and cars is credited as the first large scale use of motor vehicles in the Pacific Northwest.

Needless to say, the Allies won the war and combat soldiers who had fought in Europe returned home. Soldiers serving in the Army's Spruce Division in the forests of Oregon and Washington, though never leaving America, were no less heroes of the war.

About ten years ago, my family and I, while visiting relatives in Oregon, saw the largest known Sitka spruce at the time. The top of the tree was blown out in a storm in 2007, but when we saw the tree it was two hundred feet tall. The tree is still alive, and measures seventeen feet in diameter. It is believed to be about six hundred years old.

Let's remember our veterans, recognize the importance of our forests and honor them both.

Thank You for Nighttime Lighting

Dear Editor,

I would like to issue a top level "Good Neighbor Award" to First Christian Church of 206 Chestnut St. in Berea. The design and installation of exterior nighttime lighting on their renovated facility is excellent. The exterior lighting at this location is a perfect example of best practices under most LEED and "Dark-Sky" certified installations. It also meets municipal or state lighting regulation requirements and costs no more than less evolved equipment. As you can see when enjoying First Christian's presence, the use of lighting that does not intrude on neighbors or send glare into the sky ends up enhancing your own facility, saves energy and contributes to a healthier nighttime civic environment. Thank you, First Christian Church. Your efforts are attractive and appreciated.

Reader Comments on 25N

Dear Editor,

Yet another meeting tonight (2/21/12) where a few, who have been, for many years using land that they had no right to be using, rent free, pitching a fit because the state now proposes to use land that they, the state, has owned since the 1940s to improve traffic flow on the north end of town. It is amazing the mindset that some of these people have adopted.

The state has come up with an effective plan to aid in traffic flow on the north end of town for the long term, using land that is already the state-owned right of way, and has been for more than 60 years.

If there were any justice the state would tell the city "Fine, do it your way". Then let the city pay the total cost of the project.

Farristown Flyers Achieve Smaller Goals

By Jonathan Schinhofen
Citizen Sports Reporter

The Farristown Middle School Flyers boys basketball team failed to achieve a postseason victory this season. The 6th grade did not make the tournament, and the 7th and 8th grade teams went down in the first round. But for a program fielding its first team, basketball coach Jeff McClain had more important goals than winning a lot of games. Any coach will tell you that it takes more than a year or two to build a great program, and this year was a year to achieve smaller goals. Teaching the players the fundamentals, laying the foundation for future years, and developing chemistry between the players have to come before big wins.

And Coach McClain is used to winning. He played for three years for the Murray State Racers, starting every game last year, his senior season. The Racers won the Ohio Valley Conference Championship in his junior and senior seasons. He was honored after last season with the Popeye Jones - Mr. MSU Award, which goes to a player displaying excellence on and off the court.

McClain also teaches in the Positive Approach to Student Success program, which is an individualized program that enables students with emotional and behavioral challenges to succeed academically and socially.

Foley 6th Grade Takes Championship

Foley Middle School Warriors 6th grade basketball team beat Rockcastle for the District Title in the Commonwealth Middle School Athletic Conference Tournament. The Warriors also finished as regular season champions with a record of 14-2.

In the championship game of February 18, the Warriors started the first half slow, but came back from a 14 point deficit to win in overtime. With 5.3 seconds left in overtime the game and the game tied at 38, Chase Ramsey lined up to shoot two free throws. He hit them both, and the final score was 40-38.

Including the postseason and nonconference games, the Warriors' record this year is 21-5.

The Foley 7th Grade boys also made it to the championship game, but fell short by one point, losing 30-31 to end the season.

Recap For Berea Middle Teams

The 6th grade Berea Middle School Basketball team was coached by Sammy Castle. The team showed steady improvement and competitiveness throughout the year. The 6th grade team has a bright future as it has both good guard play, but also has some size. Not only do they have good guard play, but they also have some depth at guard. It will be enjoyable to watch this team continue to improve and mature to be even more competitive in the coming years.

The 7th grade team was coached by Henry York, Jr. Of the three middle school teams this year, the 7th grade team faced the most challenges. The team had several new players this season, many of whom had not played much organized basketball. The team did, however, make progress in terms of team chemistry and became more competitive as the year went on. With further experience, the team will continue to improve and will be successful in the future.

The 8th grade team was coached by Ken Atkins. The 8th grade team was successful this season because of contributions by all team members in one way or another. The team showed great maturity and growth throughout the season, winning many close games and coming from behind to win several road games. The 8th grade team is very athletic at all positions, and play very unselfishly. They set a new Berea Community Middle School record for number of wins in a season with 25 wins. They have great potential as a group, and it will be fun to watch them continue to grow together on the high school level.

Lady Eagles Ready for Districts

Eagles' Eye Reporter
Nicole Davis

The girls' basketball team has had an excellent season, with their only senior Jordan Renner, three juniors, two sophomores, five freshmen, and one eighth grader making up their varsity team. They are currently 10-15, and they have had a tough schedule this year, against teams like Dunbar, North Hardin, Conner, and Woodford County. They have played well against competitive opponents. The girls had their senior night on Friday, February 9th and Jordan Renner closed out her home career by scoring 17 points leading Southern to a 46-41 victory against Western Hills. "She is the only senior this year, and the program will miss her!" said Doug Sallee, athletic director.

According to Coach Simmons, the Lady Eagles have given their full effort and attention this past season with hopes to finish strong and to defeat Model in the first round of districts. The game took place at Alumni Coliseum on Wednesday, February 22. Coach Simmons says, "They have improved a lot on handling pressure defense, scoring, and playing their defenses. They had a stretch where they won three out of four games, and they had a better showing in the Berea Holiday Classic than they have had in years past."

The hard work and dedication of the girls on the team has definitely reflected on the court this season, and we are very proud of them! For senior Jordan Renner, we wish you the best of luck in all of your endeavors in life after graduation. We'll miss you, Jordan!

Ethan Lake Signs with The Cumberland!

Eagles' Eye Reporter
Erin Reynolds

On Wednesday, February 1, one of Madison Southern's finest students signed with the University of the Cumberland. Ethan Lake, an exemplary student for his four years at Madison Southern, is moving on to bigger and better things!

Not only is Lake a big asset in the classroom he is also a big help on the field. As one of the captains for the Madison Southern football team he is a grand leader having been involved in many different leadership positions like Youth Leadership Madison County, president of Fellowship of Christian Athletes, and Corps Commander of the Air Force Junior ROTC. Jon Clark was lucky to have a player that dedicated to a single sport.

Lake says, "I am going to miss my Southern home but I am more than ready to move on to bigger things." He is extremely excited to be playing for the University of the Cumberland and can't wait for the summer work outs to begin. Coach Clark is also very excited for him but it is bittersweet. Lake is Clark's first player to sign with a college. He is sad to see Lake go with all the help that Lake brought the team. He now has to watch Lake move on and even though it is hard for him to do he is very excited.

Even though Coach Clark is a little disappointed in the loss he is happy to see Lake being able to further his career in football. He can't wait to see what is in store for Lake and neither can all of us at Madison Southern High School!

Spanish Club Gives Back

Eagles' Eye Reporter
Brooklyn Hymer

The members of the Madison Southern Spanish club have been very busy over the last few months! On November 5th the Spanish club students participated in 'Feed My Starving Children' food packing event. They packed more than 3,000 meals that day. The food was shipped and distributed to over 80 different countries throughout the entire world.

Another activity was led by Erik Seaman, a professional dancer who came to Southern for a Spanish club meeting after school to give the students free dance lessons. Club members had a blast learning how to Salsa, Samba, and Meringue!

The club has taken time after school as well to create and design Valentine cards and decorative flower crafts. They plan on distributing them to the patients at Berea Health Care Center to make their Valentine's Day special!

Also, this year the club members will participate in the Special Olympics in June. This event is held in Olympic town, and it gives the competitors something to do in between events. At the Special Olympics the Spanish club sets up an art table and helps the kids make fun crafts. This is not only fun for everyone participating, but it is also a community service opportunity for the club members.

Future Spanish Club meetings will include teaching the members of the club how to prepare various foods and make crafts from different countries. The club has already made a big impact within the community and hopes to further their amount of volunteerism!

The Southern Belles Dance Their Way to Success

Eagles' Eye Reporter
Stephanie Riddell

The MSHS Belles Dance Team has had a very successful season so far. They have competed at many dance competitions and in every one they have placed in the Top 5 out of all the dance teams there. Not only do the Belles compete at competitions, they also come out to perform at every single basketball game to cheer on our girls and boys teams!

The MSHS Belles have learned three dance routines so far: jazz, hip-hop, and pom. In January they competed at regionals. This event was not only hosted by Madison Southern but it was co-hosted with Central. At this competition, the dance team won first in jazz and won overall best costume. The Belles also went to Cheers on the New Year's dance competition. At this competition they won 4th place in jazz, and 2nd in their pom routine. Paige Swope also competed in a senior solo and won first place!

There are still some dance competitions left in the season which everyone should come out and watch! On February 25 they will be competing at state in the convention center in Frankfort. On March 10 they will be competing at nationals in Gatlinburg, TN. At both of these competitions the Belles will be performing their jazz, pom, and dance solos! Make sure to come out and wish them luck as they dance their way to success!

Swim Team Completes Season

Eagles' Eye Reporter
Sydney Collins

The Madison Southern Swim Team wrapped up their season over the weekend of February 10 at the Region 5 swim meet. The meet took place at the ECU Natatorium, where there were 25 teams from central Kentucky participating. Some of these teams were Southern rivals such as Berea Community, Madison Central, and Model. The preliminaries took place on Friday, where the girl's 4 x 100m relay and the boy's 4 x 100m relay qualified for the regional finals. Freshman John Eipert also qualified in two individual events, which is a first in Madison Southern's history. He qualified in the 100m breaststroke and the 200m individual medley.

Those who qualified in the preliminaries returned again on Saturday to compete for an opportunity to go to the state competition. Unfortunately, none of the Southern swimmers qualified for state. However, all of the qualifiers that competed lowered their times. Coach Troy Collins said "I don't care that no one made it to state, it's amazing that we had qualifiers especially in two individual events. I am very proud of my swimmers and all of the hard work they have put in this year!" Freshman John Eipert, on the topic of his qualifying status in two individual events, said, "It's really cool that I'm the first Southern swimmer ever to qualify in individual events. It doesn't matter that I didn't make it to state this year, it was a great experience and there's always next year!"

The swimming Eagles are celebrating a successful year as their season draws to a close. They've worked so hard and have been really successful. Good job Eagles!

MSHS Special Olympics Team

Eagles' Eye Reporter
Tara Chrisman

Students at Madison Southern have been given the opportunity to work with the special needs department at the annual Special Olympics. If students or citizens choose to volunteer their time at this heart moving event they may participate in the unified partner relay. This is where students from the special needs department partner with their fellow high school students in a relay race against teenagers from other participating schools.

The MSHS students: Dakota Anglin and Micah Clark, enjoy events such as the walk run, the soft ball throw, tennis ball throw, and the ball roll. But don't think that is all the students that are involved with this program; MSHS has more than 10 students participating!

MSHS has participated in this event for the past two years under the coaching styles of Lisa Johnson, Betty Horn, and helper Kelli Hicks. When asking them if there is one thing that you would like people to know about these students, Betty Horn answered "They are very unique, talented, and very capable of anything that they put their mind to, if you get to know them you will fall in love with their personalities."

Regionals are the 28 of April at Bryan Station; the state competition location is still to be decided. This event cost $55 a participant. If someone would like to send in money feel free to send it to MSHS. Checks should be made out to MSHS Special Olympics.

The Special Olympics is a great opportunity for both students and adults to come out to volunteer their time while supporting our talented Eagles.

Benefit Concert Held for Kayla Dudley and Luke Poynter

Eagles' Eye Reporter
Chelsey Morgeson

The students and faculty of Madison Southern reached out recently to help the families of two fellow Eagles. After a tragic car accident that hospitalized two senior students and two other individuals, those who are close to Luke Poynter and Kayla Dudley felt the need to help with the expensive medical bills that have resulted. After breaking his neck in two places, Luke was put in a halo for several weeks but was allowed to go home to recover. Kayla, on the other hand, who suffered multiple serious injuries in the crash including a broken neck, back, and foot, has had to go through several reconstructive surgeries and will likely be hospitalized for a while. The hospital bills that accompany these drastic procedures are incredibly overbearing, and because of this the friends of Kayla and Luke decided to take action to help out.

Mrs. Sheila Reed's third period class, in which both Luke and Kayla are enrolled, joined together with other students and faculty to organize a talent show to raise money for the families. On February 7, the students of Madison Southern were asked for a $2 donation. Those who chose to donate the two dollars were allowed to attend a talent show in the gymnasium where students, faculty, student teachers, and even students' family members performed their extraordinary talents to those who wished to attend. All of the money raised went directly to the students' parents to help lighten the burden of the medical bills that they have received. Performances ranged from playing musical instruments to dancing, as well as singing too.

The Madison Southern dance team performed their excellent routine for the students, and Sabrina Wallace performed her award-winning solo as well. Kaylee Thomas and her younger sister Lauren also performed two clogging dances that had won several competitions for the duo. The honors choir of Madison Southern performed two songs, and seniors Will Muncy, Gina Woods, and Julie Woods also sang for the audience. The staff and substitute teachers also got involved with songs being performed by Brent Muncy, Cheryl Hayes, Kathy Stringfield, and Ms. Esch, a student teacher from Eastern Kentucky University. Probably the group that was most involved was The Parkers, who consisted of senior Dustin Parker and his family, along with junior Dillon Abney. Together, they performed a variety of songs in multiple different genres for all of the students to enjoy.

In the end, the school raised approximately $1,800 for the families of Luke and Kayla. We are very proud of the effort being put in to helping these fellow Eagles, and know that this hospitality will be continued in any future endeavors.

The state of Kentucky has had a Mock Trial program for nearly thirty years. This program has been offered at all schools across the state, and approximately the best 30 schools will compete for the title of State Champion. The winner of state will then go on to compete in the national competition May 3-6.

This year's members include, Katie Scott, Logan Spradlin, Conner Niceley, Emily Adkins, Elliott Board, Will Carr, Eden Lewis, Josh Kincaid, John Eipert, Taylor Edwards, Sara Castle, and Andrew Parsons. The team at Southern was established five years ago. They are excited to get their competitions started.

The competition that the team will be participating in is March 16-17 at the Jefferson County Judicial Center in Louisville. The case that the team will be participating in is Commonwealth v. Morgan Smith. The case is about a retired police officer that is accused of shooting and killing his much younger girlfriend, after she sought a domestic violence order against him. They are really excited to finally start their competitions!

FFA and the Archery Team Join Forces

Eagles' Eye Reporter

Will Muncy, a member of FFA and the MSHS Archery Team, shooting during a flight at the tournament.

Madison Southern FFA chapter cooperated with the Madison Southern archery team to host the second annual archery tournament on January 14. Teams from all across Kentucky attended in order to hone the skills of their archers. Due to having many mutual members from FFA and archery, they've always tried to cooperate with each other in order to benefit both programs.

Will Muncy, archery member and FFA president had this to say, "It is always a pleasure to see two of the schools most competitive organizations cooperating for the benefit of their members." FFA members who are not a member of the archery team, assisted by working the concession stand and serving as field judges during flights.

The high school male and female divisions were dominated by Madison Southern archers with Matt Lake placing second, Will Muncy placing fourth, and Luis Quiles placing fifth. Christian Carter, a former MSHS archer placed first and the third place winner, Mikal Marston, was from Clay County. In the female division, we had Kayla Dudley place first, Amber Potts place third, Cynthia Clark place fourth, and Amanda Baker place fifth. Brittany Bowman from Clay County placed third in the female division. This was a successful event and benefitted both programs.

Madison Southern's Got Talent!

Eagles' Eye Reporter
Amanda Collier

On Saturday February 4, Brittany Perkins, a freshman at Madison Southern tried out for America's Got Talent. The audition took place in Charlotte, North Carolina. She stood in line for eight hours in what was said to be the biggest turnout in America's Got Talent history. When it was finally her turn, she tried out singing Beautiful by Christina Aguilera for the producer of the show. Brittany will find out in March if she made it.

Brittany has been singing since she was eight years old, her grandfather as her inspiration. Besides auditioning for America's Got Talent, she sings at many different places. This past December she performed at Southern Lights in Georgetown. She also performs at Country Place Jamboree in Frankfort, and sings at benefits. The newspaper staff and all the students and faculty at Madison Southern, wish Brittany the best of luck!!!

Cheerleaders Bring Home Another Grand Championship

Eagles' Eye Reporter
Lauren Taylor

The Madison Southern Cheerleaders competed at the Capitol Cup Cheer and Dance Championship at ECU on February 4. This is the second competition the girls have been to, where they have brought home more than one title! They competed in three divisions; sideline, two and a half, and time out cheer. They also competed against all the schools there for the high school grand champion. They won 1st place in all divisions.

Before the competition, the girls had some drastic changes they had to make to their routine. Several of the teammates were injured close to competition time. With the injuries that occurred at last minute, they worked so hard to prepare for the upcoming event. They practiced for three hours each night the week of the competition and from the looks of their trophies, it paid off! Coach Michelle Devere says, "I am so proud of the team for being able to pull together before competing. They are so great about always having the ability to face adversity in a positive way." The cheerleader's next competition will be at Americas Best, which is hosted in Gatlinburg, Tennessee in March. They hope to bring home yet another win! Great job and good luck girls!

MSHS Tennis: Ready to Serve

Eagles' Eye Reporter
Ethan Lake

As spring approaches, the Madison Southern tennis team is working hard to prepare for the upcoming season.

The last few weeks, the tennis team has been hitting the courts in order to hone the skills they need to improve on since last year. On the boys' side, there are only two returning players. Jeremiah Sparks and Elliot Sizemore, both seniors, will provide experience to an overall young and inexperienced team. Returning for the girls are three seniors: Emily Erwin, Trina

Coles, and Katie Scott, as well as the number one doubles team from last year. The girls have a little more experience on their side, which the team hopes will lead to a winning season.

Coach Elaine Phillips says, "I am excited for the season." She expects the team to perform at a very high level that will lead to great success overall.

The Eagles will take to the courts for the first time on March 15 against Pulaski County at home. Start time is 5 p.m., so make sure you come out and support the MSHS tennis team.

Madison Mentoring Movement

Eagles' Edition Reporter
Sierra Horvat

Over the summer of 2011, the senior class president, Leanna Rowlette and Madison Southern High School faculty member, Joshua Williams worked together to jumpstart the mentoring program created by the Superintendent Teen Task Force. This program is designed for high school seniors to mentor a child from one of the local middle schools or elementary schools.

At the beginning of the school year, the seniors were given the opportunity to apply for the program. Many seniors jumped on the opportunity to participate. They had to apply and go through an interview process to be considered for the program. The students who were chosen to be a mentor were assigned a student at one of the following schools; Shannon Johnson Elementary, Silver Creek Elementary, Farristown Middle or Foley Middle School. The seniors who were chosen to mentor go to their assigned school and work with their mentee on different topics depending on the child. This ranges from behavioral issues to assistance in a specific core curriculum class. Once a month all of the mentors go as a group to the school and partake in group games and activities that focuses on team building and communication skills. They also use this time to meet once more with their mentee individually to discuss grades and goals that were set at an early stage.

This program is a great opportunity for the seniors and the younger kids. This is a learning experience for the seniors at Madison Southern High School. It teaches them responsibility and how to be a good role model. The young kids that the seniors mentor really look up to the seniors and seem to benefit from the program.

Dance with a Purpose

Eagles' Eye Reporter
Leslie Williams

Student Council, Beta Club, and FCCLA are collaborating this spring to put on a memorable fundraising event. March 23rd will be our first annual Dance with a Purpose, dance-a-thon in the MSHS cafeteria. Students are to get sponsors to donate money depending on how long they can dance. These clubs are also asking for community donations that can be sent to MSHS Student Council. All proceeds will go to St. Jude's Children's Hospital in Memphis, TN. This is our opportunity as a school to take part in touching lives from around the country, and around the world.

St. Jude's Children's Hospital has a mission to find a cure for cancer through research and treatment for children. The hospital is the only hospital dedicated to childhood cancer and other childhood diseases. It opened its doors in 1962 and started with a 20% survival rate, today St. Jude has an 80% survival rate. Children come from all over the world, and no child is ever denied treatment for financial reasons. St. Jude also has a Ronald McDonald House; this is a free facility that parents and family members can stay at while their child is in treatment. It takes $1.7 million a day to fund St. Jude. Most of this money is provided by small donations from everyday people.

One of our very own teachers, Mr. William Dooley has a nephew who is currently a patient at St. Jude, so this fundraiser is close to his heart. Carson Dooley is four years old. He was diagnosed with Acute Lymphoblastic

Leukemia on July 10, 2011 at the age of three, less than a month before his 4th birthday. Carson and his family currently live in Mobile, Alabama and drive weekly to Memphis, TN to get treatments. Carson received fourteen weeks of treatments pre-remission. He was considered in remission on August 24, 2011. He still has 120 post-remission treatments left and is to be finished in February 2014 with all treatments. If Carson stays in remission for ten years he is considered to be cured. Stories like this make St. Jude a hospital to be recognized.

We are hosting this dance-a-thon to raise money for this special cause. We plan to have speakers, games, and prizes during the dance. It won't be your everyday school dance, because at this dance we will be Dancing with a Purpose!

Mr. Dooley's brother, Adam, Brady, Heather, and Carson.

Senioritis Strikes Southern

Eagles' Eye Reporter
Leanna Rowlette

As the month of March rolls around the seniors begin to get restless and are torn between making their last few memories in high school and preparing to enter college. However, just because some seniors are gaining senioritis there are still various events and deadlines to remember!

On February 17, Madison Southern had Senior Night in order to thank the 13 seniors in the Class of 2012 for participating in the dance team, basketball team or band. The seniors consisted of Jordan Renner, Rachael Miller, Kristen Gibson, Blake Puckett, Brandon McGuire, Chris Roberts, Sarah Cole, Sierra Lainhart, Felicity Smith, Ryan Poynter, Elliot Sizemore, and Will Walker.

Seniors who may not be as good on the court as they are in the kitchen were highlighted in the annual Senior Cook-off. Approximately 50 students and parents attended the event on February 9. The student's food entries were divided up into several categories consisting of meats, cookies, pies, appetizers and much more. Mr. Quinlan from the Youth Service Center generously collected different products such as a microwave, alarm clock, and other necessities you may need in college for door prizes.

The seniors still have several dates to add to their the calendar such as a job shadow/college visit on March 6 and cap and gown pictures on April 16 and. Marhc 6 is viewed as an opportunity for seniors to experience their career and college by either visiting colleges they are planning to attend or job shadowing a specific career. Students will need to turn in a permission slip before March 1 to Ms. Allen in Room 224.

The days at Madison Southern for seniors are slowly coming to an end so make sure you make the best of them!

well as driving down there and viewing the situation for themselves. Vi Farmer said from her experience in local government that, "things take a long time, longer than we would want." When city council member Ronnie Terrill asked Mayor Steve Connelly to confirm that he was behind and supportive of the property owners, Connelly encouraged the council to be careful and discreet when considering the situation. "We can not rush to judgment . . . We need to listen to the citizens who are affected, the state and others who are not as directly affected. We shouldn't become as Ronnie suggests cheerleaders," Connelly said. "We need to get all the information and weigh the pros and cons." Things became a bit heated between Sipple and Connelly at one point, as Sipple complained that he wasn't hearing support from the mayor like he was from the council members. Different people including the mayor and some council members stated that they would like to lower the animosity and work through the process. Eddie Evans of Evans Tire and Auto asked when the project would start, since he was concerned that he may look out and see them constructing this spring. Stone assured him that despite the project being slated for this spring, it would probably not begin until the spring of 2013. Stone addressed the property owners at one point, stating that city government tried to represent the people to the best of their ability, but they would never make everybody happy. Along with the concerns of property owners, the biking community has weighed in on the project as well with some asking for a separate lane strictly for bikes. Stone also reported that District 7 has decided to run a model for a three lane section that would basically turn into the space for a four lane. Larry Linville from Linville Insurance gave some information to the city council that he had collected on traffic counts as well as data he had collected on how much time it took to transverse Highway 25. With a stop watch, he traveled back and forth on Feb. 17 between Ellipse Street and the Bypass on Highway 25 to see how long it took. Between 7:18 a.m. and 5:30 p.m., he took the route 16 times at various times of the day. He reported that it never took longer than three minutes and 40 seconds to travel. "I don't see a big traffic problem with this, folks," Linville stated. He also reminded council members that the traffic count for Highway 25 has been declining the last 15 years. In 1997, the traffic count was 17,600, 16,500 in 2002, 14,000 in 2005, 11,700 in 2008 and 13,615 in 2011. When council member Virgil Burnside asked Linville if he saw a concern with the getting in and out of businesses on Highway 25, he stated that he did. "I don't support a three lane," Linville said, who reported that he filed a great deal insurance claims on a three lane, since people would drive right through it instead of using it as a turning lane. He instead supported putting some different turning lanes in at different points.

Robert Johnson addressed the mayor about his comments at the last city council meeting, where the mayor mentioned that he was having the city attorney look at the open meetings law to see if the board of adjustment had violated it. Over three weeks ago, the board of adjustments had heard from a property owner on Adams Street who was interested in gaining a conditional use permit to harbor chickens. According to Mayor Connelly, the chairman had requested that the meeting not be televised, which caused him to wonder if the open meeting law had been violated since all meetings are traditionally televised. "I wondered if the deliberate decision to not televise it would contravene that procedural due process," Connelly said, who also expressed concerns that findings of fact were not brought out by the hearing. Johnson stated that the request had been turned down two times, and the only reason it was even an issue was because of one member of the board of adjustments. "I feel like I'm being railroaded," Johnson stated, before leaving the chambers. Council member Jerry Little said he was concerned about the chicken ordinance, because when he voted for it he thought there was a clause where the neighbors had some power to keep the conditional use permit from going through. Council member Billy Wagers stated that was why he voted against the chicken ordinance, because there was no language in the ordinance giving the neighbors the right of refusal. Mayor Connelly said that's why the council should look at the ordinance again. In the work session before council meeting, members heard from Pamela Slokowski and Terri Williams who have joined their organizations together with one other to form C.A.R.E. (Coalition of Animal Rescue Efforts). The organization wanted the city council to consider putting aside some funding for them, so they could expand their work of neutering and vaccinating free roaming cats in Berea. The City of Berea already gives a small amount of support to the Madison County Animal Shelter to help fund an animal control officer because of dog problems from over a decade ago. C.A.R.E. has neutered 203 cats so far. Burnside stated they should take some future time to consider the financial request. Dale VanWinkle of Codes and Planning and Chief Roy Curtis from the Berea Fire Department gave their 2011 year end reports to city council. VanWinkle reported that the total permits for 2011 were 450. The year 2005 had the highest number of permits issued with 655, with the highest number of new residences built in a six year period, but the slump hit in 2009 when permits issued dropped to 400. Both the year 2010 and 2011 have showed steady increase, however, which VanWinkle stated is probably a sign that Berea is pulling out of the economic downturn. Editor's Note: In next week's issue, there will be an article detailing the changes in the codes and planning department, and what that signals for Berea's economic future.

did, and he's been doing it ever since. "I know the form and I just try to bring fun to it. I just ham it up, and I had heard my dad do it a long time ago." Another reason Kent does the auction every year that he is able, is that he believes in the power of art as an educational and a spiritual tool. It is central to the program at Union Church. "We have had a long history of artists, Mildred Strickler, Virginia Pieland, Les Pross, Dorothy Tredennick, to name a few, who donated art to the church and brought artistic qualities into the worship. Whether it's dramatic, music, or visual, art gives some kind of window or voice to the Spirit. You can say things with music, sculpture or pictures that you can't say with words. There is a power in dance that you can't get in static worship. It is a passionate exploration of the divine impulses and the spiritual. You are using all the senses, part of our core way of engaging ourselves and the world. Art is a way of investigating the spiritual life—in a church or not." He also believes in the work of the Berea Arts Council. "The arts are a critical component to any community. It stimulates community conversations, allows us to know each other and our abilities. It's a huge factor in the quality of life for every citizen—engagement with others and your own sense of beauty, pain, sorrow. The Arts Council has given opportunities for training, exposure and Chili Night Out has become Berea's snazzy social event. It's a great, great festive occasion. It's a wonderful time to see people dressed up and enjoying all that amazing art for one night, and possibly go home with some," Gilbert said. Knapp and Crowden, along with creating the decorations for the evening, are contributing artists and have pieces in the show. They are using paper as the theme and medium. "This year we wanted a theme that was more in line with an installation art work. It's a large space, and we are limited by where we can and cannot hang decorations. Paper being such a diverse medium, we thought we could meet the needs of the event while also creating structures that in themselves could be considered artwork", Knapp stated. The two have been working late nights and the weekends have them folding, cutting, and gluing in a frantic pace to get everything ready by February 25th. "It's a fine line between mass producing in order to meet the deadline, but also keeping enough uniqueness and variety to keep all the decorations visually engaging. We want people walking around and really enjoying the decorations as art. I'm curious to see if anyone takes a few center pieces home," Knapp said. Knapp's artwork up for auction is "Porn for Narcissus", a large photograph of the artist which has been signed hundreds of times. It was the result of a performance piece of the same name at Berea Coffee and Tea in which the artist watched himself on TV for three hours while repeatedly signing the photo. Crowden has made a temari, a Japanese folk art which consists of embroidering geometric patterns across the surface of a large ball of thread. "The pattern I chose for this year's auction temari is called "Hito Hude-Gaki" which literally means one stroke brush. It is stitched on a spiral path but ultimately creates an interlocking net of stars across the entire surface." Crowden has been involved with the decorations for Chili Night Out for six years now. "The Arts Council at its core is all about encouraging the creation and appreciation of the arts. We want the decorations to reflect that as well. Every year we hope to craft an event that people eagerly anticipate and then provide them with a visual experience very different from what has previously been done." Sustainability still plays a role in Chili Night Out this year, as Berea College Agriculture students are again preparing the chili and breads. Many of the ingredients that go into the chili are out of season, such as the 220 lbs of tomatoes, plus the peppers, carrots, and celery, to name a few. According to Jessa Turner, office and farm marketing manager at Berea College, the amount of food grown at the college is not as high as they would like it to be.

"However, we are still able to provide several key ingredients including the ground beef, garlic, cornmeal, butternut squash, eggs, and a portion of the tomatoes that we preserved from last year's harvest just for Chili Night Out. There are also behind-the-scenes sustainability aspects that are included with the use of Berea College Farm products, like certified organic produce, pastured hens, Animal Welfare Approved beef. And we are also happy to again provide compost bins and compostable dinnerware which will be turned into compost that will be used for next year's vegetables." Tickets for Chili Night Out are still available and can be reserved or purchased at the Berea Arts Council.

Jonathan Shell Files for 36th District

I grew up here in Garrard County. I am a fourth generation family farmer and businessman. I have served on the Garrard County Farm Bureau for five years and currently serve as the Vice President. I attended school here and will raise my family here. I see the issues that are important to the people. I believe that I offer a fresh perspective on effective leadership. I believe that we need a new focus on the economy and opportunities for the citizens. I believe in the 36th district because my roots are here. Together we will get Kentucky back on track. As a farmer, with a degree in agriculture business from Eastern Kentucky University, I rely on networking to buy, sale and trade goods. This personal business style encourages personal accountability, improves communication, and ensures that you know the people in your community, because they help sustain your livelihood. As a farmer, I do not receive a scheduled paycheck. We receive compensation solely based on our goods. When money comes in, I am required to be an avid planner and wise investor to ensure for a prosperous future. My occupation requires me to be able to create budgets that are flexible enough to meet short term needs and strategically plan for long term goals. Financial responsibility is a trait learned on a family farm often not seen. Each financial decision made on the farm is made with deep care because of the direct impact it will have on the family. I will work as hard in Frankfort as I do here and I will listen to the needs of the people in the 36th district.

the Berea College forests, and the Daniel Boone National Forest, Patterson has reason to care about the scary statistics of forest fires in Kentucky, and specifically in Madison County. Last fall, over 100 acres of Berea College forest were burned when a brush fire around the Owensley Lake area got out of control. That same area burned the spring before. Those fire-damaged trees are currently being harvested by Berea College.

The true tragedy of the damage of wildfires, according to Patterson, is that 60 percent are considered arson, with 99 percent caused by humans. Of the 50 wildfires that have taken place in Kentucky so far this year, 33 were determined to be arson.

"Why anyone would want to intentionally start a forest fire; which can not only damage trees, but also threaten homes, businesses, and even lives, is a good question," Patterson said. "The wanton burning of the forest is nearly always detrimental to forest, its wildlife, and to the property owners who stand to lose value when trees are irreversibly damaged."

One of the largest forest fires in Berea took place in 1987, near Indian Fort; a fire that destroyed over 600 acres. People who have hiked around the Pinnacles can still see the scars of that fire on the path towards the East and West Pinnacles. Signs inform people of the historical fire, and the measures that are being taken by Berea College to reclaim the land.

"The fire was determined to be arson, with three ignition points along Highway 21 near Indian Fort," Patterson said. "The fire swept up the Indian Fort slopes, and back down the other side of the mountain." Even 25 years later, Patterson confirmed, the forest has not recovered from the destruction. The fire occurred in the summer, during a drought, so the hot fire killed not only most of the trees, but also burned up the organic humus soil layer. That soil will not fully recover for decades.

According to the Kentucky Department of Forestry, the spring wildfire season normally peaks in March and starts winding down in April. During these months, it is illegal to burn anything within 150 feet of any woodland or brushland between 6 a.m. and 6 p.m. These daylight hours are when weather conditions are more likely to cause a wildfire to spread.

Patterson pointed out that there are some reasons for burning the woods, such as promoting the regeneration of oak trees, but those types of burns need to be controlled by professionals who can handle them. While historically, Native Americans and early settlers burned the woods to clear land for livestock or to clear out the underbrush, the arson today seems to exist only for the destruction of the forest and land. People convicted of wildfire arson can spend up to five years in prison and possibly up to $10,000 in fines. Reporters of arson, who can remain anonymous, may be eligible for a cash reward of up to $1,000 if the information leads to the arrest and indictment of the arsonist. "Kentucky's forest resource covers nearly 50 percent of the state," Patterson said, "and should be highly valued and vigilantly protected, not sense-

lessly damaged by arson fires

March is Colon Cancer Awareness Month. Stay Healthy. Get Screened.

Colon cancer can be prevented if caught early. When found at its earliest, most treatable stage, colon cancer has a 90 percent survival rate.

Early detection is critical since colon cancer often produces no symptoms during early stages. The American Cancer Society recommends that everyone get tested for colon cancer beginning at age 50. People should talk to their doctor about testing earlier if they have a family history of colon cancer or have a personal history of chronic inflammatory bowel disease, such as Crohn's disease or ulcerative colitis.

Southern Upholds Strong FFA Tradition

By Beth Myers
 Citizen Editor

Since the first year Madison Southern High opened its doors as the new school in Berea, the Future Farmers of America (FFA) has been an active chapter. Madison Southern was first bestowed the FFA chapter in 1989, and the chapter has been growing stronger every year.

"We started the FFA with 42 members," Wes Williams said, the first agricultural teacher at Southern who worked to start the FFA chapter at the school. "I worked the halls pretty hard, getting kids involved."

Williams taught at Madison Central in their agricultural program before transferring to Southern when the school first opened. Since then, Southern's FFA chapter has eclipsed the mothership, with an equal or greater number of students signed up as Central, who tend to have a higher degree of involvement.

Jan Choate, the treasurer of Madison Southern's FFA Alumni chapter, stated they enrolled their son in Southern even though he was out-of-district, specifically because of the FFA chapter.

Williams ran a one-man show at Southern for two years, teaching the agriculture classes and serving as agricultural advisor to the FFA chapter. As their numbers increased, Brent Muncy was hired in 1991 and then Kevin Anderson a few years later. Altogether, the three of them teach 12 different agricultural classes at Madison Southern with 200 students currently signed up; half of those students are active FFA participants, giving the chapter approximately 100 participants.

Williams, Muncy and Anderson have been able to divide up the classes according to their expertise, with Williams teaching the horticulture classes, Muncy taking on the more mechanical and technical classes such as small engines and ag business and Anderson teaching the animal sciences.

Williams stated that they had a jump in participation when they added the greenhouse in 1992, which led to much more hands-on activities for the horticulture classes.

Officers in Southern's FFA Alumni chapter, who have children taking agricultural classes as well as participating in the FFA chapter, stated that the hands-on component is what makes it such a great program.

"Once you get dirt underneath your fingernails, that's it," Bill Shearer said, who stated that their children were fifth generation farmers. "It runs deep. As a farmer you have to be a physician, weatherman, mechanic, you have to know and do a little bit of everything."

"You get a lot of leadership qualities when you participate," Williams said. "We probably will not send out that many full-time farmers, or ones who will do it as their main role. But they gain so many great qualities when they participate."

The National FFA states that the organization is, "dedicated to making a positive difference in the lives of students by developing their potential for premier leadership, personal growth and career success through agricultural education." This is a commitment that both the agricultural faculty at Madison Southern, as well as the alumni chapter, takes very seriously.

Though most graduates of Southern's agricultural program won't become full-time farmers, many choose careers that are closely connected. Some may go into studying soil conservation, veterinary science or environmental science. Williams estimates they graduate three students every year that go on to major in some agricultural degree -- approximately 50 percent of the agricultural program's graduates.

"We're blessed here with our FFA in general, the excellent advisors," Larry Lake said, the president of the FFA Alumni chapter.

He related one incident where their son Matt, an agricultural student, called Williams while the family was with Matt's sister.

"She told Matt, that just wasn't right for him to just call his teacher to talk," Lake said with amusement.

The agricultural program at Southern also assists with the other academic programs in the school. Kids in agricultural classes will have the opportunity to use what they've learned in math and science, as they plant crops, calculate a business plan for a farm or consider animal ailments. Many subjects become more relevant to students when seen through the lens of agriculture.

Parents in the alumni chapter see value in different parts of the program. Lisa Harrison, the vice-president of the alumni chapter, stated that the leadership development was important. Missy Lake added that it was such a close group in FFA, which gave the students an important community to participate in. Choate remarked that her son

Homemakers Club Celebrates Valentine's Day

Alina Strand and Barbara Taylor measure and cut scarf for cultural arts activity at White Station Homemakers meeting.

Fourteen members of White Station Homemakers Club met at Middletown Baptist Church on February 8. President Becky Knauer called the meeting to order. A reading of "Luck or Love" was conducted by Pam Trageser.

The roll call was answered with our fondest valentine remembrances. Linda Calico read the minutes of the January meeting, and Nancy Scarlett gave the treasurer report.

The business meeting continued with reminders of the International Tea at EKU, the annual meeting in April, a reminder to get projects completed for cultural arts, and complete Get Moving Madison County. A rummage sale can be planned for this spring or summer.

Betty Schiederma had a presentation about food products with high salt content. Different members offered suggestions to reduce the use of these products. Becky Knauer presented information for a healthy heart and stress relieving measures. It was agreed that nearly everyone liked chocolate. The meeting adjourned for arts activity.

Linda Calico led the group in making a scarf from a t-shirt. The scarves were quick, colorful and simple, and a nice pin can really dress this up.

During social time, snacks were served by Marie Rowland and Nancy Scarlett with a Valentine theme. Chocolate dipped fortune cookie and chocolate roses were enjoyed by each member.

The next meeting will take place on March 14 at Middletown Baptist church at 1 p.m.

Greater Tuna Takes the Stage

One of the most popular comedies of the American theater, "Greater Tuna," will be presented for a five performance run at Berea Arena Theater beginning Wednesday, Feb. 29 and playing through Sunday, March 4.

Written by Jaston Williams, Joe Sears and Ed Howard, the play opened in New York in 1982, and became a sensation when the writers also played all 21 parts. Presented as a down home, friendly morning radio broadcast in Tuna, Texas, the audience meets an entertaining collection of citizens from the greater Tuna area.

The production stars three Arena Theater favorites, John Stauffer, Gary McCormick and Eddie Kennedy, who quickly change from one character to another as they present a "slice of life" in the community of Tuna, Texas. The topics and characters are as relevant today as when this hilarious comedy was first written, leading co-directors Kennedy and McCormick to say, "the more things change, the more they stay the same."

"Greater Tuna" takes the stage at Berea Arena Theater from Feb. 29-March 4. Evening performances - 8:00 p.m.; Sunday, March 4 matinee - 2:00 p.m. Tickets are $8 for adults, and $5 for students/child. Reservations are strongly recommended and may be made by calling 986-9039.

Berea Methodists Host Lenten Luncheons

The doors will open wide this spring as the Berea United Methodist Church celebrates Ash Wednesday and the Lenten season. The Lenten season began with an Ash Wednesday worship service on February 22 at 6:30 p.m.

This next week will see the start of the annual Lenten Luncheon Series. The series begins Wednesday, Feb. 29 and continues each Wednesday through April 4, the Wednesday before Easter Sunday. This year's theme is "Remember and be Thankful: Redemption".

Each luncheon begins at noon in the Parish House, 101 Fee Street, with a brief program including interesting speakers and special music. Following the program, a light lunch will be provided. Those attending should be able to see the program, enjoy a meal, and return to work within 45 minutes; the event ends around 12:45 p.m. Reservations are not necessary; simply come and join in the spirit of community and in celebration of the season of Lent.

The first Lenten Lunch will feature the Rev. Lee Hubbard as speaker. Rev. Hubbard served many years in the mission field, focusing on Eastern Kentucky. Music will be provided by the church's music minister, Mary Miller.

Other speakers include Randy Dinsmore, claimants' representative, on March 7; Flora Norsworthy, St. Joseph - Berea Hospital chaplain, on March 14; Tom Seel, chief financial officer and treasurer of FAHE on March 21; Dr. Everett Schaeffer, retired physician and missionary on March 28; and Andrew Baskin, associate professor of general and African and African-American studies at Berea College on April 4.

The church is located at the corner of Chestnut and Fee Streets in Berea. For more information, or for transportation, please call the church office at 986-3485.

FFA

had such a transformation from his freshman to senior year because of working within FFA, going from a more reserved student to mastering public speaking and communication.

The strong community is one of the reasons that the alumni chapter is hosting a FFA Alumni Reunion on March 1 from 6 - 9 p.m. The potluck is open for all Southern graduates who participated in FFA, and will take place in the Madison Southern cafeteria. They are hoping to recruit participants for their Alumni FFA chapter, since many people do not know about their group. Their chapter gives a scholarship to an agricultural student every year, and also helps out with camp fees and other expenses with FFA trips and conferences. They are hoping that if they recruit more members of the alumni chapter, they can financially assist even more students.

"There's a lot of ag students that don't necessarily get a lot of support," Choate said. "We want to help all the kids."
