COVID-19 cases reach record high

Omicron 'spreading like wildfire'

FRANKFORT (KT) – Kentucky had its highest number of new COVID-19 cases and the highest positivity rate ever recorded, Gov. Andy Beshear said in a video Tuesday.The state reported 6,915 new coronavirus cases with a positivity rate of 21.74 percent.

"Omicron is spreading like wildfire throughout Kentucky," Beshear said. "We are seeing a surge the likes of which this country and this world have not seen in our lifetimes."

Madison County reported 582 new cases from Dec. 27-Jan. 2 for an average of 50.1 cases per day.

The omicron variant doesn't seem to be making people as ill as previous variants but Beshear was concerned that the vast numbers could overwhelm the medical system.

"It will fill up our hospitals, and it will create challenges for others who need care," he said.

More than 7,200 Kentuckians have had first dose of vaccine and more than 18,000 received a booster on Monday.

Around 1,646 Kentuckians are hospitalized with COVID-19, and intensive care units in eight of the state's 10 hospital regions are at 90% of capacity or greater.

Some 136 ICU beds are available statewide.

Kentucky reported 21 more deaths as a result of the pandemic Tuesday.

Crews with the City of Berea Public Works and the Madison County Road Department are bracing for the first major snowfall of the year forecast for Thursday-Friday.

Crews began preparing for the predicted snow event that could bring between 2-4 inches of snowfall throughout the region Wednesday. The city isn't short on salt and has approximately 800 tons stored at its Public Works facility on Harrison Road.

Court to assist in debris cleanup after twister strikes area

The Madison County Road Department will be assisting residents with the clean-up of debris after an EF-1 tornado struck sections of the county, mainly the Union City area on New Year's Day.

Madison County Judge-Executive Reagan Taylor declared a State of Emergency on Sunday. In response, the county road department is launching a "Tornado Relief Debris Removal" program. The road department will pick up tree debris Jan. 10-31.

"There is no doubt the tornadoes that ripped through northeast Madison County, specifically the Union City area caused large amounts of property damage much of which was in the form of downed trees," Taylor said. "We are pleased to be able to provide citizens with an option for curbside

City leaders review revising sewer access policy

By Andy McDonald
For The Citizen

The Berea City Council heard the first reading of an ordinance that would prohibit industries or commercial businesses from accessing city sewer facilities unless they reside within corporate city limits.

The proposed ordinance reviewed Tuesday comes on the heels of moves to incorporate new parcels into the Berea Industrial Park. Officials said the measure is meant to ensure that businesses using the city's sewer infrastructure are helping maintain the system by paying their share of municipal taxes.

During discussion of the measure, Councilmember Ronnie Terrill questioned whether there are currently any industrial or commercial sewer customers outside city limits, to which Mayor Bruce Fraley replied that is not the case.

Councilmembers Cora Jane Wilson and John Payne asked how property owners not currently within city limits could access city sewer service, to which Fraley replied that said property would have to be annexed into the city. Property owners annexing into the city would have to foot the bill for connecting to the city's sewer facilities, Fraley said. The ordinance will come up for review and a final vote on Dec. 18.

In other business, the council unanimously adopted a resolution to honor

Abe Meissner Yates

Abe Meissner Yates, 17 of Berea, passed away peacefully with his family by his side on Saturday, Dec. 18, 2021, at UK Chandler Medical Center.

Abe, the son of Joe Yates and Robin Meissner and the brother of Grace Meissner Yates, was born in Pontiac, Michigan on December 31, 2003. He is also survived by his many and very dear family members, friends, and his girlfriend, Ollie Bellando.

Abe was a senior at Madison Southern High School. He was a talented guitarist/composer (@88pandas), enjoyed playing Lacrosse, and was an exceptional student (he would have written this better than any of us). He hoped to study artificial intelligence at Carnegie Mellon University's School of Computer Science. He coded for fun. He was affectionately known by many as The Abester, Abeybaby, Rocket, Abob, Sir Dookie, and The Ginga Ninja. Abe was a critical thinker who liked to challenge himself (Math Rock key signatures). His whole life, he was mature beyond his years, but the goof came out occasionally thanks to the special people in his life. Abe was so loving, thoughtful and considerate, as well as confident and self-assured. Words truly do not do justice to describe his heart and soul. The world was better with Abe in it.

A Memorial Service will be conducted at 7 p.m. Friday, January 7, 2022, at Combs, Parsons & Collins Funeral Home. His Assistant Principal, Mrs. Lisa Banks, will be leading a time of reflection. The service will be livestreamed at www.cpcfh.com.

Friends may visit after 4 p.m. Friday at the funeral home.

Abe sacrificed to provide the hardest gift to give and his family is thankful for the incredibly compassionate staff at UK Chandler Medical Center and Kentucky Organ Donor Affiliates.

The family suggests that expressions of sympathy be made to Kentucky Organ Donor Affiliates, 10160 Linn Station Rd., Louisville, KY 40223 or Richmond Area Arts Center, 399 W. Water St., Richmond KY 40475.

Please help Abe live on through remembrance.

Commitment and finishing leave no room for regrets

"If you start something, finish it."

I heard those words pretty often from my Dad when I was young and haven't forgotten what it means to be committed even in my current stage of adulthood. For the most part, he was talking about sports and not giving up, but the saying has applied to every area of my life.

For the most part, I've tried to adhere to my Dad's words. Sometimes I have faltered, but have always given my best in my career profession, hobbies and other things such as household chores and financial responsibilities.

I was a member of the boys basketball team at Berea in high school and wasn't the best player, but tried to be the best teammate and made memories doing it. I loved being part of the team, even if that meant not being the star player or in the rotation.

Keith Taylor

During the past few weeks, numerous college athletics have opted out of playing in the postseason to avoid risking injury with their eyes on the NFL Draft instead of putting team above self.

There is nothing wrong with looking ahead to the future, but the present also is precious. They're moments that you can't take back once a decision has been made. In other words, game over and there are no instant replays to fall back on once the proverbial buzzer sounds.

I don't get why any player would decide not to play in a bowl game after putting blood, sweat and tears into the regular season? From the recruiting process to the final game, schools and administrations have invested in a player and I would think skipping a bowl game to avoid injury is a selfish move. Don't players risk injury during the regular-season too?

Many may disagree and think the player is protecting his future, but what if that player never gets an opportunity to play another game and played his last down? Did the player just think of himself instead of the team during the regular-season?

Makes you wonder.

Some professional players are guilty of seemingly selfish acts, too. I watched in complete disbelief after Tampa Bay Buccaneers receiver Antonio Brown ran off the field in a game against the New York Jets on Sunday.

Apparently Brown has some issues, but there is a right way to handle frustration and anger. Instead of making a scene, why didn't Brown talk to his coach and ownership in private if issues were abundant in his life? He left his team and his teammates behind and Tampa Bay coach Bruce Arians said Brown was no longer on the team following the contest.

Arians didn't want to talk about Brown, but instead he wanted to answer questions about Brown's former teammates who didn't join Brown in leaving the field. I applaud Arians for his actions following the game and hope that Brown gets the help and support he needs in the future.

There is something to be said about commitment, whether you're playing football or checkers. Fight to the finish and you will have no regret because you gave your best.

New year — Volunteer

By Leslie Smart

Over the past year, we at CHI Saint Joseph Health have formally recognized A Year of Humankindness. The special year served as a launch of our new brand promise, Hello humankindness, and celebrated the simple acts of kindness across our hospitals and clinics carried out by our employees and our communities.

Our volunteers are the epitome of humankindness. They so selflessly give of their time and their experience within the walls of our hospitals, but also, especially during the time of COVID, out in their homes and the communities. They brighten the days of our patients and staff – playing piano in some facilities, helping our cancer care teams, connecting with patients and escorting them to their destinations, and working in our gift shops.

As we have paused volunteer services in our hospitals during surges in the pandemic, our volunteers continue to serve. Our crafters contribute handmade hope - making stuffed animals, cancer hats, prayer shawls and pocket prayer quilts to share with our patients. This allows them to stay connected to our ministry and to our community.

Our volunteers manage the gift shops in the hospitals throughout the ministry and, starting in February, will assume responsibility for our gift shops at Saint Joseph Hospital and Saint Joseph East. This new opportunity will allow our volunteers to give back even more to our community as they make decisions about how to use proceeds in our facilities. For instance, at Saint Joseph London, our volunteers use proceeds from the gift shop, which they staff, to award scholarships for students of our employees. At Saint Joseph Mount Sterling, they've contributed to Giraffe Omnibeds to care for our youngest patients. The Flaget Memorial Hospital Auxiliary provided funding for 3D mammography.

We have around 300 volunteers across CHI Saint Joseph Health, many of whom are retired. Our numbers typically grow in the summer, as we welcome teen volunteers into our hospitals. Our volunteers say their work at our hospitals give them the opportunity to remain active and to give back to their communities. It gives them that human connection that we all need, especially as we continue to navigate a global pandemic.

We expect the same is true for volunteers at other organizations in our community. These interconnections are more than just a transaction of activity given by the volunteer, received by an organization. They highlight an important piece of the fabric of our society – allowing us to work together for a common cause of improving our communities and recognize the humankindness that lives inside all of us.

It's been a difficult few years as we've navigated the pandemic, and we are grateful for our volunteers and for those who serve in other ways in our community. As we start a new year and you reflect on your New Year's resolutions, consider finding a way to give back to the community. Whether it's at our hospitals, your church, your school or another community organization, volunteering is humankindness.

Develop a plan

Proverbs 29.18 "Where there is no vision the people perish. "Everyone needs a strategy. You may be 25 or 85 years in age.

Who cares? Probably the only one who cares about your age is you. Your age either tells you that you are too young or too old. Remember, age is only a number. We have to put numbers aside and go with our hearts. If God is in it then don't worry about the number.

Glenn Mollette

What do you want to do? One of the ways to know the will of God is to determine what we believe we would enjoy doing. The will of God is what we would determine to do if we just had enough sense. We will never rise above what we do not want to do. If we want to do something our chances of success are greater.

What is stopping you? Consider your life and where you want to be and determine the blockades. Sometimes the greatest blockade is the decision to move forward. Until we make that decision we aren't going anywhere. Once we know then we can assemble what is required to reach our destination.

Learn from the past and put it behind you. Past failures often eliminate us from life participation. We remember when we failed. A life that is fearful usually accomplishes far less than the life that has faith and confidence. Fear freezes us in our tracks.

Who are you today? Who you are and the direction you are going is far more important than where you have been. You can't change the past but you can steer your life in a new direction.

Develop a life action plan. Why not plan a strategy for the next six months and even the next year? You and God can determine where you will be. Start today!

Recipe from the heart

As we are now looking at the possibility of snow in the days ahead, soups and stews are always a comforting food. This is a soup my mother makes on a regular basis in the winter. Its really good with some crackers while you are snuggled up reading a book or watching your favorite television show or movie.

Here's How It Works

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9X9 grid, broken down into nine 3X3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Greet the new year with humility and kindness

At the dawning of the new year, many of us strive to change something about ourselves - losing weight, breaking a bad habit, getting more organized, budgeting, etc. but what would happen if we focused more on internal renewal rather than external facade? Or avoided simply changing for the sake of a resolution? Now, of course, working on a healthier you is always important. However, what's inside can be just as draining and unhealthy as what's outside at times. Aren't the two interwoven in many ways?

Carrie Grant

Reflecting on the last year, it's painstakingly evident that everyone has had a difficult time in some manner. I think it's safe to say that it's unlikely that anyone will walk away from this pandemic unaffected. Yet, we are still so hard on ourselves and others - critics without cause, quite often. I know that through the timeline of writing this column I've been met with my own self doubts and worries, particularly after the death of some important people in my life where I was made to question things they could no longer discuss with me or put my mind at ease about. I've taken the blame for things that were beyond my ability to change. I'm sure everyone can think of a time recently that they were met with less than kindness from someone near them.

It's the blessing and the curse of small town living. We know too much about one another to be just "extended" family, relatives, or simply neighbors. We often see the best and the worst of those nearest us, and it makes it easy to be critical of them in times of our own hardship- because we have the information at hand and have witnessed most any of our neighbors or loved one's mistakes. It's like a ready-to-use explosive that we set out to detonate in our own times of turmoil- because often it's easier to see the flaws in those around us than to get a grip on ourselves.

However, as we enter the new year, let us greet the less than kind neighbor or family member with humility and kindness, strength and compassion, love and grace, because it's likely that no one has left the most recent year unscathed. It's is easy to be critical of those around us, but when we cast a different kind of light on these issues, we gain perspective. That perspective can lead to a stronger community built on kindness and humility, rather than criticism and anger.

C.S Lewis said, "Humility is not thinking less of yourself, it's thinking of yourself less."

I hope that as a community, we begin to think more about our neighbor and gain perspective on humanity, show some humility, and grow together stronger, despite the divisive circumstances in the world around us.

Appalachian heritage

A fixture at Berea college since 1938, the Christmas Country Dance school provided a week of concentrated instruction in Appalachian folk dancing, the English folk dances from which the mountain dances sprang, traditional music and crafts, for teachers and students and those who love the traditional arts. Classes offered included contra dancing, English country dancing, Appalachian clogging, sacred harp singing, and woodcarving. Participants could also take part in a Mummer play, an ancient British reenactment of the ritual death and rebirth of the year, which is traditional performed at the Solstice time; or learn the art of the Morris, a British ritual dance which developed from the Mummer tradition. The Christmas School was started by an Englishman, Frank Smith, who joined the staff of Berea College Foundation School in 1923. His involvement in the folk recreation movement inspired him to travel the mountains of the southern highlands in 1933 to explore the possibility of starting traditional folk dance and activity programs in Appalachian communities. Smith quickly bumped up against a wall of religious opposition; not only were most forms of social dancing considered sinful, but also considered to be a source of drunkenness and violence. Working with what was acceptable (English folk dances, the Kentucky "running set" taught in the settlement and folk schools, and traditional play-party games), the first Mountain Folk Festival was held in Berea in the spring of 1935. When the demand for folk recreation leaders outstripped availability, Smith launched the first Christmas

County Dance School in December of 1935. Sessions were offered in country dancing, Morris and Sword dancing, and crafting shepherds' pipes. There were public demonstrations of English and American country dances, Morris dance and audience-participation singing. By 1959, more relaxed attitudes toward dance forms and a greater appreciation of mountain music allowed staff musicians to bring in what Loyal Jones called, "rowdy old banjo and fiddle tunes," with contra dancing in 1969, and Appalachian clogging in 1974. Over the years, prominent instructors have included Richard Chase, Loyal Jones, Matt Boggs, the McLain family, the Ritchie family, Warren May, and Pamela Corley. From its initial enrollment in 1938 of 32 people, the Country Dance School had grown to 300 students in 2004.

First baby

The new year brought more than wishes for a prosperous future for Alyssa and Clint McMaine of Berea. Around 4 p.m. on Thursday, January 1st, the couple gave birth to Evan Isaac McMaine, the first baby born in Madison County in 2004, at Richmond's Pattie A. Clay Regional Medical Center. Evan weighted 9 pounds and was a little over 21 inches long. He was the couple's second child. The couple had recently moved to Berea from Richmond and received numerous gifts from local businesses to mark the occasion.

Alcan, ARD success

Alcan, a global leader in aluminum recycling, raised $30,000 during its second annual America Recycles Day (ARD)aluminum can recycling contest to benefit the Cans for Habitat program. Alcan employees from 13 different U.S. states collected and recycled nearly one million beverage cans through ARD which took place November 15, 2003. "Alcan's aluminum can recycle campaign is a great success story for recycling aluminum and Habitat for Humanity – the value of the aluminum and the corporate match raised over $30,000 that will benefit thirteen Habitat affiliates, "stated Marth Finn Brooks, senior vice president, Alcan, Incorporated and president and CEO Alcan Rolled Products Americas and Asia. "Aluminum is the perfect metal for a project like this because it is the most valuable recycled beverage packing material, earning up to 20 times more for its collection than other types of packaging." In Madison County, Alcan's Berea plant on Mayde Road collected 5,700 pounds and raised $7,337 for Habitat for Humanity making them the recipient of the 2003's $5,000 grand prize for their local Habitat affiliate. Employees and members of the Berea community collected the most cans with 5,700 pounds as well as topping the average collected per employee at an astonishing 52 pounds. Alcan, a national sponsor of America Recycles Day, held the recycling contest to coincide with the ARD celebration that focused on creating and maintaining awareness for recycling and its benefits.

Make 2022 a year to remember

"It is finished." Yes, you may have read this message in the Bible. They were the last three words that Jesus spoke hanging on the cross. My devotional reminded me of these three words one morning.

David Shew

Yes, 2021 is in the rear-view mirror. It has been a year of change in my life. First, I moved back to Madison County. A dear friend of almost 50 years passed away. Another life-long friend had double lung transplant and is doing quite well. The social security checks keep coming, and they make me thankful.

I moved into a new residence which was a blessing. Another dear friend of the family passed away and has gone to her heavenly home. Celebrated many birthdays for family members and dear friends. I have watched my family celebrate Advent again. I have been watching a brother go downhill, and it hurts.

Life is full of constant change. You can view the changes with a positive mindset or a negative mindset. Hopefully, you will choose the positive viewpoint and be there for your family and friends. Everyday is a challenge of some sort. Embrace the challenge and enjoy the ride.

Ask for forgiveness and lend a hand to a neighbor. Stop and watch the sunrise or sunset. Listen to the birds and a baby's cry. Share a piece of cake with a friend. Pay for a stranger's meal and make them thankful. Stop and smell the roses.

Call you mother, father, brother, or sister. Don't wait another moment to tell someone that you care. Pray for peace in the world and our community. Help someone who is down on their luck.

Make 2022 one to remember and make memories. Take a picture. Smile and say thank you. Call someone and make them smile. Don't be a Debbie Downer and a Frowning Fred.

Be thankful that 2021 is finished and embrace 2022. Make Madison County a haven of friendship and remember those in need, especially our neighbors to the west who lost everything in the devasting tornadoes.

Oh yeah, looking forward to the opening of Bucee's! Happy New Year to all!

A changed life requires more than a New Year's resolution

Roger Alford

I shared a story here some years ago as told by my good friend Seymour Wattenbarger, a fiery preacher from the hills of southeastern Kentucky.

It went like this: Many years ago, a man widely known for his drinking and cavorting showed up at one of Bro. Seymour's revival services. That man, Bro. Seymour said, might have best been described as a reprobate. He would get home in the evenings, stumble out of his car and stagger up the sidewalk, cussing loudly and kicking at his dog.

That fellow got saved in the revival service and immediately gave up his drinking and his wicked ways. The change was so drastic that when he got home that night his dog didn't recognize him and nearly ate him up.

I love true stories about the transforming power of the gospel. Jesus can take a hard-hearted man and make him a new creature.

I thought it would be fitting to share Bro. Seymour's story again as we begin the new year, considering all the people who may be struggling this week to keep their resolutions to become better people.

You see, the Lord can bring quick change into our lives, even to the point of giving a man with a nasty disposition a heart filled with love for God and for his fellow man.

The Bible refers to a spiritual heart transplant: "A new heart also I will give you and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart" (Ezekiel 36:26).

The most frequent resolution made by Americans is to lose weight. Others resolved to get organized, to learn a new skill, to start a new hobby, to travel more, to quit smoking or to spend less money.

When we make resolutions, we're attempting to change ourselves for the better, which may or may not work. When we turn our lives over to Christ, He changes us for the better, and that works every time.

Jesus makes a dramatic change in the lives of people who give their hearts to him.

One rather rough old fellow told me that he felt so clean on the inside after getting saved that he just had to take a bath and clean himself up on the outside.

While we may abandon our New Year's resolutions a few days or weeks into January, the change that Christ brings is lasting. He cleanses us from all unrighteousness (1 John 1:9).

When the Lord saves people from broken and shattered lives, He gives them brand new lives that are better than before. That's what he did for the fellow at Bro. Seymour's revival, and that's what He does for every new believer.

And, when it happens, your dog should be the first to recognize the change.

Tourneys aplenty

By Mike Moore
For The Citizen

The last full week of the year meant that area teams participated in a variety of holiday tournaments. For the Madison Southern Eagles, that meant traveling to Campbellsville to play in the Campbellsville High School Holiday Classic.

The Eagles (9-4) won two of three, knocking off Washington County, 80-69, and Glasgow, 62-58, and falling to Marshall County, 72-53. Braden Hudson led Southern against Washington County with 31 points. Jay Rose added 13. Rose led Southern with 22 points against Marshall County, while Nate Turner finished with 11.

The Eagles had three players in double figures against Glasgow as Casen Nobbe finished with 16, followed by Hudson's 11. Turner recorded 10 points in the win.

• The Berea Pirates (1-10) went 0-2 during the Chain Rock Classic in Pineville. The Pirates fell to Middlesboro, 54-47. The Pirates also fell to Floyd Central, 82-46. Stats for those games were not posted to the Kentucky High School Athletic Association's website on Tuesday morning.

• The Berea Lady Pirates continued their winning ways by going 2-1 in the Ryan Keeton ExP Realty Ohio River Classic in Raceland. Berea rolled past Elliott County behind a 20-point, 11-rebound effort from Madison Howell. Alexis Newman finished with 10 points. The Lady Pirates suffered their first lost of the season, falling to Heritage (Maryville, Tenn.) 46-28. Chesney Lovins finished with 12 points and 10 rebounds. The Lady Pirates closed out the tournament with a 64-36 win over Raceland. Howell finished with 26 points, while Lovins finished with 11.

• The Madison Southern Lady Eagles trip to Orlando, Fla., resulted in a third-place finish in the KSA Events Holiday Classic. The Lady Eagles (7-5) had little trouble knocking off Bayside (Palm Bay, Fla.), 46-4. Bella Moberly led Southern with 17 points. The Lady Eagles fell to Heritage (Plantation, Fla.), 46-29, as Hadley French led the Lady Eagles with eight points. The Lady Eagles closed out the tournament with a 37-33 win over New Bedford (Mass.), as Morgan Flannery finished with 20 points. Moberly also grabbed 13 rebounds in the win.

Drivers advised to use caution

Gov. Andy Beshear and the Kentucky State Police (KSP) are preparing for Thursday's winter weather as snow and ice are predicted to impact the commonwealth. KSP asks motorists to be aware of the changing weather conditions in the next 24 hours.

"Winter weather is here in Kentucky, and it's important to plan and be patient on the roadways," said Gov. Andy Beshear. "We are fortunate to have KSP and other emergency personnel ready and available for those who are experiencing emergencies this winter season."

KSP has developed a list of items motorists should place in their vehicles before the weather sets in. This includes a winter weather kit with a cell phone charger, blankets, first-aid kit, jumper cables, windshield scraper, collapsible shovel, and a flashlight with batteries.

KSP Public Affairs Commander Captain Paul Blanton reminds motorists to wear their seat belts, slow down, leave more space between cars and prep their car with the necessary supplies in the event they were to become stranded.

"I encourage Kentuckians to avoid any unnecessary travel when road and weather conditions are dangerous," said Blanton. "If travel is necessary, I urge you to review road conditions before you leave, clear your windows and mirrors and be patient."

In addition to the roadway reminders, KSP is asking citizens to refrain from dialing 9-1-1 to obtain road and weather conditions.

"Our radio rooms experience a high number of calls from citizens inquiring about road conditions. It's important we leave the lines open for individuals who are experiencing real emergencies," Capt. Blanton said.

KSP will use Facebook, Twitter, and their website to share winter weather updates. Before traveling, drivers are encouraged to check road and weather conditions by visiting the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet online traffic, roadway, and weather portal website.

The mission of KSP is to promote public safety through service, integrity and professionalism using partnerships to prevent, reduce and deter crime and the fear of crime, enhance highway safety through education and enforcement, safeguard property and protect individual rights.

Legislature: Redistricting a top priority

FRANKFORT (KT) – The 2022 regular session of the Kentucky General Assembly was called to order Tuesday with legislative redistricting part of the discussion on opening day in the state Senate.

House Speaker David Osborne, R-Prospect, unveiled his chamber's plan during a press conference last week, while Senate President Robert Stivers, R-Manchester, gave the outline of the plan for his chamber in a press briefing after the Senate adjourned for the day.

A major difference between the House and Senate plans, other than the House has 100 districts and the Senate 38, was that the House redistricting proposal has four redrawn districts where incumbents will be running against each other (two from each party), while Stivers says the Senate will have none.

"This map is based on Constitutional premises which are sometimes in conflict, but the courts have resolved this," Stivers said. "Splitting of counties being primarily in the Kentucky Constitution, the Coting rights act of 1969, and the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution, regarding equal representation. We feel with that being our guiding principle, that our map is very much in conformity to those principals, and with the input of the Democratic Caucus, particularly in Louisville."

The Senate is also preparing the map for Kentucky's six Congressional districts, and to make them as equal as possible, part of eastern Jefferson County will be removed from the Third District, which is currently held by Democrat John Yarmuth, the only Democrat in Kentucky's House and Senate delegations.

Yarmuth is retiring at the end of 2022, and two Louisville Democratic state lawmakers, Sen. Morgan McGarvey, the Senate Demo-

now," Berea Public Works Crew Leader Steve Collins said. "We've saved a lot of salt because we haven't had to go out and (salt the roads) this year. If it's a light snow, we will just do intersections, hills and stuff like that. If it's a big event like they're talking about right now, you've got to use what you've got to use so (the snow) doesn't get bonded to the road."

Collins said the main goal is to stay ahead of the forecast.

"We always try to prevent it from bonding to the road early," he said. "We're going to pre-salt city hall (early) and some of our sidewalks, steps and try to get ahead of it. We're getting all of our trucks ready and make sure everything is working."

Berea Mayor Bruce Fraley said the city is prepared from top to bottom.

"Roy Curtis, our Public Works Director, and his team are ready for this expected inclement weather situation," he said. "Our salt bins are full and our trucks are ready to go when the snow starts falling. We are urging everyone to monitor the weather situation and to avoid any unnecessary travel, particularly on Thursday afternoon into Friday morning. Additionally, our first responders in both our police and fire departments are always well prepared for any emergency situation that we may face."

The Madison County Road Department also has plenty of salt available for the next three months. Road Administrator Scott Shepherd said both locations are "currently full of salt." He added the county purchased an extra 200 tons of salt and stored in reserve.

"We're probably better on salt than any time we have been in the past," he said.

"We've been able to budgetary buy extra salt with that money and that's the reason we are at full capacity."

The Kentucky Transportation Cabinet (KTYC) began pretreating bridges, overpasses and routes on Tuesday in preparation for the wintry weather. The state pre-treated roads in District 7 with salt-brine, a salt water treatment that is a "very affordable, pro-active approach to address roadway safety concerns."

Shepherd said the county will be at full capacity with its trucks and staff. He added the county also is making sure the GPS trackers are still working.

"We do have a full staff of drivers to drive the trucks," he said.

Collins urges drivers to use caution in wintry weather conditions.

"If you don't have to get out, don't," he said. "If you do, slow down and just give us room, because we'll have a full team out there of eight guys and if it gets real bad, we'll have another team come in behind them and work 12-hour shifts. We'll try to be ready. If the radar says it's coming, we're going to be out and about."

Shepherd agreed.

"It helps us to do our job better if people will stay home if possible," he said. "If they could give us room to work, we can do our jobs lot quicker and we can actually get them back on a safe road faster.

If they could also not park vehicles on the curbside, and that really hinders our drivers and is a safety concern for us and we're not as able to do as good of a job when those vehicles are on the curbside."

tree removal in Union City to help with their cleanup. As I am sure everyone can appreciate, the curbside program requires extensive coordination, as well as compliance with the federal laws so we ask that citizens be patient with our staff as they work to address everyone's pickup needs."

The National Weather Service and Madison County EMA confirmed a tornado with sustained winds of 105-110 miles per hour began in the vicinity of Lexington Road, moved across the Eastern Bypass and settled in Union City last Saturday. The areas of Noland Road, Walker Parke Road and Doylesville in the Union City area received the most damage from the third tornado that has have been confirmed in Madison County during the past three weeks.

The path of the tornado was determined to be approximately 1.6 miles. The tornado also struck the western part of Estill County on the same day.

Also Tuesday, City Administrator Rose Beverly revealed a report from Business and Tourism Development Director Donna Angel, who said merchants reported the best holiday shopping season in town since before the pandemic. "The downtown businesses reported that they had a better Christmas season than even 2019. So, they had a fantastic season. I would say that I know that the Tourism and Business Development Department has really done a really good job of working hard to promote those businesses, and I would say that I think it shows," Beverly said.

Beverly also asked the council for a budget amendment in the Parks and Recreation Department budget, amending a line item by another $30,000. Beverly explained the department had to repair a water line leak at the park at a cost of nearly $19,000. The measure was approved unanimously.

Addressing traffic in the city, Ronnie Terrill asked Beverly about the progress of a traffic study for the intersection of Plaza Drive and Prince Royal Drive. Terrill expressed concern that the construction of new businesses on Plaza Drive will aggravate traffic congestion in the area. Beverly said she would get back to Terrill on precisely when the traffic study will begin.

During mayoral comments, Mayor Fraley announced the appointment of Jeanie Hogg to replace the late Robert "P-Nut" Johnson on the Berea Human Rights Commission. Hogg will fulfill his Johnson's term, which runs through February of 2023.

In other news, Councilmember Jerry Little, who chairs the Public Works Committee, reported the committee voted to recommend the installation of new street lights for Cherry Road and Meadowlark Road for the purposes of public safety.

The committee also discussed parking issues in the city, Little said.

In a final note, council members expressed their good wishes for Sarah Rowlette Stillwell, who is leaving her post as the media manager for the Business and Tourism Development Department. In a letter to city officials, Stillwell said she is officially leaving the department on January 7 in anticipation of the birth of her first child. Though her tenure was only six months, officials said Stillwell made a positive impact.

"We're going to miss her services there," said Teresa Scenters. Jim Davis and Wilson also wished Stillwell the best.

Twice the fun

UK edges Iowa to notch 2nd Citrus Bowl win in four years

UK 20
Iowa 17

Kentucky's return to the Citrus Bowl turned from sour to sweet in a matter of two minutes Saturday.

The Wildcats, making their second appearance in four years, saved their best for last, scoring the go-ahead touchdown with less than a minute remaining and sealing the deal with 48 seconds left on an interception to hold on and defeat Iowa 20-17 in the Citrus Bowl at Camping World Stadium.

"We knew it would be a 60-minute football game and again, it was," Kentucky coach Mark Stoops said. "Our team is used to playing a lot of close games, tough games, against quality opponents, and that was the case."

Kentucky (10-3) notched its fourth consecutive victory to close out a 10-win season for just the third since the 1950 season. Two of those double-digit win campaigns have come under the direction of Stoops, whose team has developed a knack for winning close games in the postseason. The Wildcats have won their past four postseason games by seven points or less, including Saturday's squeaker over the Hawkeyes.

The team's recipe for success, Stoops said, is a result of his team's toughness.

"I think it comes down to our players caring about each other and having a toughness and having a resiliency about them," he said. "You know, respecting the game. We talked about playing the game with honor, and they do that. These players do. This is a player-led team."

Much like its 27-24 triumph over Penn State in its first postseason visit to Orlando four years ago, Kentucky made heroic plays down the stretch to hold off the Hawkeyes, who rallied from a 13-3 halftime deficit and led 17-13 late in the fourth quarter.

Stoops wasn't surprised by Iowa's two touchdowns in the second half.

After Kentucky's defense forced a three-and-out, Kentucky quarterback Will Levis connected on a 52-yard strike to teammate Wan'Dale Robinson, who made several jaw-dropping moves past two defenders, that put the Wildcats on the 1. After a false start, Chris Rodriguez scored on a 6-yard run, breaking a tackle in the backfield and barreling into the end zone, to set the final margin with 1:54 remaining.

When it came down to crunch time, Robinson just relied on his natural ability.

Cats honor Tubby then roll to easy victory

LEXINGTON (KT) — Kentucky honored one of its former coaches and then took care of business to close out the calendar year on Friday.

The Wildcats welcomed back former coach Tubby Smith, who led the school to it seventh national championship in 1998, retired a jersey in his honor and then collected their fourth straight victory with a 92-48 win over Smith's High Point squad.

It was Smith's first visit back to Rupp Arena since the 2006-07 season and he was showered with a loud roar and plenty of applause, while surrounded by family and friends on the court during the pre-game ceremony. Smith was given his rightful place in the rafters of Rupp and given a jersey by University of Kentucky Athletics Director Mitch Barnhart. Smith's wife, Donna Smith, was chosen as the honorary "Y" during the second half.

"We were honored and pleased by the (ceremony) and having a banner raised in Rupp Arena," Smith said. "I couldn't be more happy and I was happy to have my family here with me to witness this moment. … There isn't anything I can look back on and say this left a bad taste in my mouth. It's always been a joy to come back to Lexington (and) this is a place my family calls home more than anywhere else. It (was) good to be back and be honored this way."

Kentucky coach John Calipari admitted he got a "little emotional" during the ceremony and wanted Smith to know he was "loved" by the school's fan base.

"He is just one of those gracious guys," Calipari said. "… he doesn't do stuff to get anything back. He just doesn't. It's kind of like when a guy has been doing something the same way for 35-40 years … that's Tubby. He is who he is (and) and he's a great basketball coach."

Smith's squad couldn't keep pace with the Wildcats (11-2) who notched their fourth consecutive victory and did so in convincing fashion. Kentucky, which has scored 90 or more points in three of the past four games, knocked down 10 shots from the 3-point line and it was Kellan Grady who provided a lift from behind the arc with seven treys on 10 attempts. Grady connected on five long-range bombs in a 20-5 run by the Wildcats that put the game away by outscoring the Panthers 49-23 in the second half.

"When we make shots like we made today, we're going to beat people and there's going to be a big margin," Calipari said. "We kind of wore them down … we were a little bit much."

'It got slick, quick'

First major snow event kept city, county road crews busy last week

By Keith Taylor
Citizen Publisher

The Berea Public Works Department began repairing pot holes within the city following a snow storm that blanketed the county last Thursday and dropped eight or more inches of snow on the roadways.

Crews worked three 12-hour shifts to keep roads within the city cleared but were caught off-guard by the arrival of the snow on Thursday morning.

"I don't think I've ever seen it get slick so quick," Berea Public Works Crew Leader Steve Collins said. "I don't think anyone expected it to get slick as quick, but we were loaded up and ready to go. We were ready, but it took time to get the snow off the road."

Collins said one salt truck slid into a ditch, but added it's not uncommon during a winter storm event.

"That happens," he said.

The Berea Police Department responded to approximately 15 collisions and 50 motor vehicle assistance calls.

The department applauded the community for "helping one another during the storm."

"We saw countless acts of

Hello, snow!

The recent winter storm late last week gave Berea and Madison County residents a chance to enjoy the eight inches or more of snowfall that fell, plenty enough for sleigh rides, building snow figures and making snow cream. In top photo, Raylee enoys the snow, while Brianna and Audriella walk down Pinnacle Street last week. At left, Robyn Fayne and her son built "Suzie the Snow Diva." More snow is forecast for this weekend and the amount will largely depend on which of two weather systems dominate the Ohio Valley region starting Friday-Saturday. Madison County Schools and Berea Schools used NTI days or a traditional snow day during the first full week of the school calendar year. (Photos submitted)

Coyle, Barger granted budget requests by court

By Keith Taylor/Citizen Publisher

The Madison County Fiscal Court approved a budget for the Madison County Sheriff's Department during his bi-monthly meeting Tuesday at the Berea City Annex.

The court invested $4.9 million into Sheriff Mike Coyle's office, which he said will be beneficial and help his deputies and staff "put a good product out." The court also supplemented $1.6 million to sheriff's budget for 2022.

Coyle thanked the court for its "continued support" of the sheriff's office.

"Public safety, especially in these times, is very well, as you know, a necessity that

– Duane Curry, Heart Care Success Story

Duane and Juanita Curry grew up together. Now they hope to grow old together. The couple met when they were 2, grew up the best of friends, and married right out of high school. When Duane showed signs of heart trouble after a day of working outside, his family rushed him to Baptist Health Richmond, where doctors found two blockages in a descending artery. Today, he says the phenomenal care he received has given him new life for the years ahead with Juanita, his four children, and his grandkids. "Baptist knocked it out of the park," the avid Little League coach said. Learn more about our advanced Heart Care services at BaptistHealth.com/HeartCare.

John Dale Thomure

John Dale Thomure, 67, and a proud veteran of the United States Army, passed away on January 6, 2022, at his home in Berea, Kentucky. John was a beloved husband, father, grandfather and leader and leaves behind a legacy of lives touched and impacted by his character and inspiration.

The son of the late Ralph and Carole Thomure, John was born in Milwaukee, Wisconsin on November 17, 1954. He enlisted in the United States Army in January of 1973, excelled during basic training at Ft. Leonard Wood, Missouri, and married his lifelong sweetheart, Naomi Ruth Alcorn, on August 24, 1974 in Richmond, Kentucky.

Service to country fueled John, and he and his Army bride, Naomi, shared innumerable moves (while raising three wonderful children) across the nation and the globe, which included postings to Fort Campbell (Kentucky), Germany (twice), Fort Polk (Louisiana), Fort Benning (Georgia) as a drill sergeant, Fort Drum (New York) where he proudly served as the senior non-commissioned officer -- company first sergeant -- for an intrepid group of cohorts in Bravo Company, 2/14th Infantry, 10th Mountain Division, and the United States Military Academy at West Point (New York), where he served to lead and guide cadets in the Department of Military Instruction. He retired from active duty in April of 1996 at the rank of master sergeant, following his final assignment instructing ROTC cadets at the University of West Virginia.

John was preceded in death by his parents, along with two of his nephews, Troy Marschang and Jesse Dean Alcorn. He is survived by his wife, Naomi Thomure, son, Ralph Thomure, and his wife, Shari, daughters Anna Rynders and husband Darrin, and Carole Steneck and husband Chuck, sisters Mary Beth Bonet, Kathee Thomure and brother-in-law Gary, Linda Monje and brother-in-law Richard, and brother, James Thomure, and sister-in-law Christy. He is also survived by three grandchildren of whom he was immensely proud – Hunter Fetterley (currently serving in U.S. Army at Ft. Carson, Colorado with 1st Space Brigade), Ashlyn Fetterley, and Charles Steneck.

John Thomure led an honorable life as an American warrior; committed to his faith, country, and family. None who ever met him were not immediately taken by his pride in all three. He was a patriot of the highest order and will be greatly missed. The family is planning a memorial and inurnment ceremony in the Spring at the Thomure family burial plot in Farmington, Missouri.

Talking about the wild and wacky weather

Keith Taylor

The first week of the new year had us all talking about the weather.

On New Year's Day, a pair of tornadoes were confirmed in Madison County, and by the end of the week, much of Berea and Madison County had received eight or more inches of snow. On Sunday, however, rain and warmer temperatures wiped away white landscape.

I don't remember the last time a big snowfall melted so quickly or is time flying by faster than we realize? Growing up, it seemed like snow stayed on the ground for a period longer than three days. It was on the ground long enough that my sister Taunya and I had enough time to go sleigh riding and even build an igloo or even a snowman. Sometimes Mom made snow cream and I remember it had to be fresh snow and not a pile that had been stuck on the ground for a couple of days.

These days, I don't spend any time building snowmen or sledding down hills, but rather chasing sledders and snowmen builders with my camera. I usually see folks sledding and building a snow figure, but this time, I didn't see as many folks out and about. Maybe it was the freezing cold temperatures or maybe simply staying inside was a higher priority. Perhaps I was looking in all the wrong places.

I'm not sure.

We did receive a tremendous response on our Facebook page as readers submitted their snow photos for us to share with others of their snow experiences last week. Those contributions are very much appreciated and we enjoyed each and every submission.

You may notice in this week's paper a new addition, a tribute and memoriam to those who left us in 2021. During the year, front office manager Libby Horn compiled names of our family, friends and neighbors who left us in 2021.

Our goal was to include every name that appeared in our newspaper and apologize in advance if we missed a loved one's name. Just know that it wasn't intentional.

This is our first attempt at what we plan to be a yearly feature in January of each year. Our three funeral homes — Davis and Powell, Lakes and Reppert — are our sponsors for this project and we appreciate their support.

Our thoughts and prayers are extended to my predecessor Teresa Scenters, whose husband, Tex Scenters, died on Friday of a massive heart attack. Tex was a big contributor to our farming community and his presence will be missed.

Keep Teresa, her sons Mark and Adam, and the rest of their family in your thoughts and prayers during this difficult time.

Addressing the mental health crisis

By Hilary Brown

In December, the U.S. Surgeon General issued an advisory regarding the mental health crisis in children brought on by the COVID-19 pandemic. In response, Kentucky Children's Hospital (KCH) signed on to the "Sound the Alarm For Kids" campaign dedicated to raising awareness and allocating resources to address this crisis.

"Providers everywhere are calling for change in regard to access to mental health services for children, said Scottie B. Day, M.D., physician-in-chief at Kentucky Children's Hospital. "But first we need to work together to reduce the stigma and have conversations about mental health."

UK HealthCare pediatric psychologist Alissa Briggs, Ph.D., answers frequently asked questions regarding the unprecedented crisis children and adolescents face today.

What are providers seeing in KCH and the pediatric clinics right now?

As an adolescent mental health provider, I am seeing the same mental health concerns that I saw before the pandemic. However, several patients' new mental health concerns are directly linked to the pandemic. In addition, many patients who struggled with mental health before the pandemic are either doing worse or having difficulty healing. Most adolescents cite prolonged isolation from peers, fraying peer relationships, and lack of organized activities outside of the home as contributing factors to their worsening mental health. We have definitely seen an increase in eating disorders and self-injury, and unstructured time at home is likely a factor in this increase. When school and activities resumed, mental health improved for some, but some remained stuck in depression, anxiety and self-harm behaviors.

What has contributed to the increase in suicide attempts and suicide ideation?

Hopelessness, financial stress, feeling like a burden and loss of relationships are all driving factors for suicide. The pandemic certainly increased feelings of hopeless, financial stress and changes in relationships for many. In addition, as many parents struggled to juggle remote school, quarantines and work, it is reasonable to assume that this could create some feeling of burdensome in some children and adolescents.

How do issues such as socioeconomic status, race, sexual orientation and gender identity factor into this increase?

Many adolescents who fall outside of the cisgender and straight category rely on their peer group for support. They may be out at school and not at home. For these adolescents, lack of access to affirming peers and/or an affirming environment could contribute to stress and suicidal behavior. On the other hand, adolescents who were experiencing discrimination and harassment at school due to their sexual orientation and/or gender identity may have found it to be a relief to be at home with affirming parents. Having at least one parent who is affirming of the adolescent's gender identity and sexual orientation reduces the adolescent's risk of suicide significantly.

Do you think the social stigma surrounding mental health is what keeps parents from talking to their children or even taking their child's mental health concerns seriously?

Actually, I think an inability to recognize the signs that an adolescent is struggling with mental health and limited emotion-based communication skills are what prevent parents from addressing their adolescent's mental health. When people are in a stress response, they may respond with fighting (an increase in arguments, outbursts and irritability), flight (avoidance of people and situations) or freeze (shutting down, crying and not communicating). These may be interpreted as behavioral problems and addressed in a more punitive approach rather than as signs that an adolescent is struggling. Adolescents can demonstrate their need for support in ways that serve to push away the very people they need.

In addition, many parents have not learned how to truly listen. Listening involves much more than hearing. It involves eye contact, positioning your body toward someone, a supportive expression, reflecting emotions you perceive in the other person, and paraphrasing what you are hearing them say. Looking at a phone is a huge barrier to beginning communication due to the nonverbal behavior required. Have phone-free time at home. In addition, many parents jump into trying to solve problems rather than first focusing on the emotions and concerns the adolescent is trying to express. Many adolescents I see for therapy indicate they do not feel their parents truly understand how they feel or what they are trying to tell them. I highly recommend the "How To Talk So Kids Will Listen and Listen So Kids Will Talk" series by Adele Faber and Elaine Mazlish for all parents.

How has the pandemic affected the mental health of children and teens?

It has made things worse for adolescents who were already struggling and made it difficult for adolescents who were doing fine.

In addition, many adolescents have experienced trauma associated with family members' infections. Trauma activates the stress response system, and if this system is activated frequently or continuously, it becomes difficult to turn off. When the stress response system is stuck on, we end up with depression, anxiety, and symptoms of post-traumatic stress.

KPA statement on HB 132

The Kentucky Press Association has represented Kentucky's newspapers for 152 years. It is the 10th oldest state press association in the country and represents all 170 newspapers published in Kentucky.

Our members work with stakeholders to maintain transparency in state and local government in Kentucky, through protecting Kentucky's Open Records and Open Meetings laws and by ensuring every Kentuckian has the unfettered ability to exercise their First Amendment rights to free speech.

The KPA is supports passage of HB 132 and we applaud Representatives Kulkarni and Nemes for bringing it before the Kentucky General Assembly. Our members have a tradition of pushing back against government overreach, of investigating corruption and abuses of power.

The Kentucky Press Association believes deeply in the Freedom of Speech enshrined in the United States Constitution. But when the powerful use baseless lawsuits to punish those who criticize them, that speech is no longer free.

SLAPP lawsuits, when used by big government or billionaire developers, are meant to exhaust an individual's financial and emotional wherewithal. The intention of the lawsuit is not to seek justice through the courts – it's meant to drain the target's bank account, to exhaust a person's will to fight, so that the cost of their speech is so high that they cannot afford it anymore.

SLAPP lawsuits are the worst kind of private censorship, where the powerful use their resources to crush the voice of dissent.

The Kentucky Press Association encourages members of the Kentucky General Assembly to pass HB 132, to ensure Kentuckians across the Commonwealth can speak their minds without fear of retaliation.

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9X9 grid, broken down into nine 3X3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Cheerful imprints

Robert Louis Stevenson said, "Every heart that has beat strongly and cheerfully has left a hopeful impulse behind it in the world, and bettered the tradition of mankind."

Carrie Grant

Most anyone who has read this column, even only once or twice previously, likely knows that I am a person who values tradition in not just my community, but also my family.

For those who may not know me, I come from a rather large family. My "immediate" family count stands at around 22. That number includes aunts, uncles, cousins, and the cousin's children. My family holidays were always huge. In reflecting on these holidays recently, I realized a few things that are common in our family, and even among families like ours in the community, that are not so common these days for others. Some of these things I feel like are just lost in translation for later generations, and some I think people just view as dated and ignore them, hoping for the best.

My dad's mom was a Type A event coordinator. Granny never left any family member, lonely friend, in-laws of grandchildren, nieces and nephews, pastors, community members…anyone really…out of her holiday gatherings. One thing she did expect of us as her family, though, was to pull our weight at the gatherings we held. She ensured that the date worked for everyone, planned accordingly, cleaned her home to the White Glove Standard, prepared main dishes, baked desserts, and cooked sides, but she always asked what others in attendance would bring. As she aged, her children started splitting events up and hosting them in their homes to take some of the burden off of her. However, these traditions of potluck style celebrations remained intact. As I'm writing this, the mental image I keep getting is of my aunts, granny, mom, and cousins in the kitchen putting up food, washing dishes, cleaning up, and getting ready to play a card game or board game. There is something so comforting about that memory- because it's one that happened every year. Everyone had a job. Everyone was included. Everyone was necessary to the functioning of our family holidays. Even at the wake after my grandmother's funeral this past year, I swept up crumbs in my granny's dining room from the just-finished dinner- and I thought to myself, "Granny would have been proud of me for cleaning up for her." I know everyone who cleaned in preparation for that day, and tidied up after, probably felt the same way. It was something ingrained in us by her. Everyone pulled their weight.

This is not uncommon in our community. Often, events held at church are potluck style, and I know every cookout I have ever been invited to I have always taken a dish with me. Taking something into a cookout or celebration is a tradition to me, because it is what has been expected of me throughout the years in my own family. Even wild game cooks that we would have at friend's homes, there were always lots of choices because everyone pulled their own weight.

As I've grown older and am married and have multiple schedules to juggle - I find myself missing the comfort of my grandmother's planning and execution of events. So often now in places outside of my own family, it's not asked that I bring a dish, or I am asked not to wash dishes, or am left completely out of the throws of event planning, I feel out of place and awkward. While this may sound trivial or "petty" to some, it's an important tradition to me. It's important to respect the way I was raised by my family. To this day in my own family I know that if I walk into the kitchen I will be put to work, because as my Aunt Beth and Uncle Monk say, "Make yourself at home"...and home in their house is in the kitchen, just as it is at my parent's home and the rest of my dad's sibling's homes. There is something about having my hands in food preparation and contributing that makes me feel at home.

I understand that some may view allowing a guest to wash dishes or bring a dish might be against the way they were raised and taught, but sometimes making someone feel included or loved might be the ticket to their heart.

My grandmother left a cheerful imprint on her family in the way she did holidays, and that is why we still do them that way. I hope to leave that same cheerful imprint on others and maybe bring a little of my granny's traditions with me wherever I go.

Heart of an Eagle

At the age of six, most sports fanatics are supposed to be scripting their future homeruns, touchdowns, and buzzer beating three-point baskets. However, six-year-old Roger Rose was instead lying in a coma after suffering a massive stroke. His parents were praying for his life, while doctors predicted he would never walk again. In 2012, the then Madison Southern junior was a member of the varsity basketball team. Rose was in a coma for more than a week. When he awoke, his right side was completely paralyzed. He had to adapt and learn how to do things left-handed. He learned how to walk, run, and eventually how to play basketball again. While his legs were "basketball ready," his right arm was not, and he wore a protective brace on it when he left the house. He dribbled, passed, shot, and defended using only his left arm. It took six years before Rose was able to participate in sports again. When he was at Foley, he tried out and made Foley's eighth grade basketball team. Later, Shane Buttry gave the chance to play for Madison Southern. Rose always gave every opportunity his all. On December 9, 2011, Rose came off the bench late in the Madison Southern vs. Estill County game. With less than a minute remaining, Rose found himself with the ball and an open three-point shot. He put the shot in, hitting nothing but net! This pushed Madison Southern's score over 100. In addition to being a part of the basketball team, he was also a member of the Madison Southern Tract Team, competing in discus and shot put.

Shelter razed at Indian Fort

The razed area where a shelter use to stand at Indian Fort Theater resembled a ruin of an ancient temple. Concrete footers sticking up on concrete slabs dividing it into what looked like rooms or mazes were all that remained. There were two toilets resting along the periphery of concrete, along with three sinks and. Some trash. This was all that remained of the restrooms that had fallen into disrepair. The state area with the hills rising on either side, which had served as the scenery of the first runs of Kentucky's first outdoor musical, "Wilderness Road," remained. However, the stone audience seating, as well as the stone walls had fallen victim to the decades that had passed since the theater had last been used. Berea College owned the theater along with the forest and walking trails that lead to the East and West Pinnacles. The decision to take down the Indian Fort Theater shelter was made in November of 2011 and there was no opposition since the consensus was that the structure was no longer safe. Vice President of operations and sustainability, Steve Karcher state that the immediate problem was that things had become so rundown and as a result were unsafe.

Tillie the Hiking Guide

Anyone who has spent any time hiking the trails at the Pinnacle were familiar with a black and white border collie mix named Tillie. According to Ron Deaver, Tillie's owner, "she's totally dedicated to Indian Fort hiking. There are so many different people she knows and who know her. She lives with us, but she is very much her own dog. She gets up every morning and stretches. She then heads out to the parking lot to wait. She does hang out around the stove with us at night. Then the next morning, she's out again." The Deaver family lived in what was referred to has the "forester's cabin" and keeps watch over the Berea College Forest property. Tilly took on community outreach and guiding on the trails. Ron Deaver found Tillie on the campus of Berea College, where he worked. They had lost their dog that same morning in an accident. He saw Tillie sitting in front of Woods Penn. Ron got out a string and asked the dog if she wanted to go home with him. She walked to the care with him, got in and never left.

Shabazz speaks

Attallah Shabazz, eldest daughter of Malcom X, spoke to a large audience at Union Church as a part of the Martin Luther King Celebration. Her message was one of peace and love. Bitterness, resentment and racial disfunction were noticeably absent from her message. Shabazz spoke of memories of a happy childhood and the loving relationship that was fostered by her parents. "They were a fine example for me to follow," she noted. She remembered watching her father being killed by assassins. She and her family mourned his passing and they asked why it should happen to "break the hearts" of his family. Maturity had brought Shabazz a sense of peace, understanding and purpose. She had spent a great deal of time traveling to college campuses speaking to young people of nurturing and love. During her lesson at Berea College, she challenged the listeners to feel good about themselves and have a positive attitude. She urged pride of self and one's accomplishments. No matter the race or culture, she asked that listeners accept their place in a multicultural world where there is a blending of cultures and each culture contribute to the whole, enriching it. During the question-and-answer session, the question was posed whether at some point a national holiday would eventually memorialize Malcom X ash was done for Martin Luther King, Jr. Shabazz acknowledged that the memories of what her father did for her as a parent and mentor was enough.

Winter weather is truly for the hardy

I am so thankful to be sitting inside watching the snow piling up outside. I made it home to a crockpot full of potatoes, carrots, and roast meat. I left work early around noon. I think everyone else did, too. There was so much traffic! Traffic bunched up because so many were driving so slowly. Caution is a great idea, but I think we could manage 25 mph instead of 10 mph. I kept expecting to pass a wreck, but it was just slow traffic.

My husband was not so fortunate. He was stuck on Southbound I-75 for close to 8 hours. If only his jury duty had been completely cancelled in Lexington. It also would have been helpful if there had been up-to-date radio communications for motorists. At least he had a bottle of water, a small blanket, phone charger, and enough gas in the tank.

Tammy Whittamore

Do you remember the days when this type of snow would have been pretty ordinary? I remember one year when I was in high school, Menelaus Road had a section that was completely drifted over by snow. The wind just filled it in, and it was days before it reopened.

We lived in the country, so it was common to see mostly trucks in the worst snow. I believe some people even used chains to increase traction. My Pop talked about using snow grip tires with studs. He also reminded me about adding weight to help vehicles go. I put concrete blocks in the trunk of my car to help it stay on the road. It was no big deal. Everyone just took it in stride. Life was just hard work. If you slid off the road, someone would pull you out with a chain or get a tractor to get the job done. It seems we are not as hardy and capable as the previous generation.

People used to have to make do. My dad said when he was a kid, they would use an old car hood to slide down the hills. I know students on campus have to be creative, too. A trash can lid or cardboard can be pressed into service to enjoy some sled time. When we were kids, we could never keep up with waterproof gloves and boots for all of us. My mom would just put bread bags over our gloves and then slide our arms into our coat. Problem solved!

So, stay home and stay safe.

Optimists are amazing people, always seeing the bright side

Roger Alford

A country boy known for his extreme optimism was touring New York City when he slipped and fell from the Empire State Building.

As he passed the 17th floor, someone standing on the balcony asked him: "How's it going?"

"So far, so good," he responded.

I almost hate to admit that I chuckled at that old joke when a co-worker shared it. There's just something funny about some fellow who can be optimistic in such a dire situation.

Believers have every reason to maintain positive attitudes when facing life's difficulties. That's because they understand, no matter what they face, they don't face it alone. They have a friend who sticks closer that a brother. That friend is Jesus.

"When the righteous cry for help, the Lord hears and delivers them out of all their troubles" (Psalms 34:17).

Believers realize the Lord can steer them around troubles, take them through troubles, or deliver them out of troubles. Sometimes, that deliverance is to escape the bonds of this life and enter into the next, an eternal life in heaven.

The chorus of one of my favorite songs says: "I'm a winner either way, if I go or if I stay, for I'll still have my Jesus each passing day. I'll have my healing here below or life forever if I go. Oh, praise the Lord, I'm a winner either way."

The Bible is clear that the greatest win is to go to heaven, a place of eternal happiness. No more pain. No more dying. No more disease. No more wheelchairs. No more suffering. No more hospitals. No more funeral homes. No more cemeteries. And no more crying. Think of that, no more need for Kleenex.

"He will wipe away every tear from their eyes" (Revelation 21:4).

With all that in mind, the optimistic country boy who slipped and fell from the Empire State Building may not be as clueless as that old joke suggests. Perhaps such a one would understand that he's not long for this world, but that a better world awaits.

Perhaps he understood that he's a winner either way.

COURT

we have to have," he said. "The men and women of the Madison County Sheriff's office, I'm very proud to say, that the money that we receive from our fees that come in every day, each year and the support we get from this court, we're able to well-train and put our people out (and do their jobs)."

Coyle told the court the budget was "much needed."

"We have in all of our line items that we bring forth — vehicle maintenance, fuel — right on down the line (in the budget). We can't control what the costs are good stewards of the taxpayers' money and we watch every dime that goes out. We're in a business to protect and serve. I think that this budget that you all are assisting on is going to help us in the future retain our folks that we have — the men and women that work for the Madison County Sheriff's office, so we can go forward with our main service and that's to protecting the people of Madison County. I want to thank you all for your support."

Fourth District Magistrate Tom Botkin praised Coyle and his staff for its service to the community amid the many challenges that have arisen over the past two decades.

"They are keeping our citizens safe," he said, adding that the war on drugs is an expense that has burdened the department in recent years.

Madison County Judge-Executive Reagan Taylor said Kentucky State Police Post 7 employs 7 troopers that cover Madison County.

"With seven state troopers working Madison County, that equates down to about 1.2 troopers per shift, if you had three shifts per day, seven days a week," he said. "If you go back 10 years ago, there was probably 14 just working Madison County. The times have changed a little bit and I'm glad that I can help support and protect our community. I'm glad to be able to sit here and support law enforcement and make sure my family and everybody's family is safe."

The court also approved the Madison County Clerk 2022 budget, which allocates $27 million for the clerk's office. Clerk Kenny Barger said the budget "is not actually a real budget."

"Our expenditures must meet the receipts and that doesn't ever happen," he said. "We are always under our dispersement for everything and most of that money is taxes. We collect taxes, pass those onto districts and we collect commissions and fees to keep our office running. The only thing I control on the budget is our salaries, office expenses and equipment, We've kept that down."

Barger said the clerk's excess fee account at the end of December totaled $2.1 million. He anticipates $3 million will be in the account by the end of the term, an increases from $900,000 last year.

"On top of that money, we return 25 percent quarterly to the Fiscal Court," Barger said, adding the clerk's office returned 808,000 to the court last year and anticipates returning more money to the court in the future.

"I was surprised when the numbers were presented today. At the end of December in our excess fees account, there's $2.1 million dollars."

Barger praised his staff, which he said he's "beyond blessed" to work with, who help run a "very efficient office."

"We do everything we can with the dollars that we are given and we want to return back as much as we can to the Fiscal Court," Barger said. "We also want to provide the best customer support service as possible in our office — the folks I work with in my office are doing that day in and day out."

The court also approved architect contract with Integrity Architecture PLCC for the Madison County Temporary Court Facility renovation project at 116 West Main Street in Richmond (formerly the Chase Bank Building). The circuit court staff will be housed in the facility while the Madison County Courthouse is being renovated. The court also approved a building construction contract to DW Wilburn as the construction manager of the renovations.

The court will be reimbursed for the costs of the renovation projects by the Administrative Office of the Courts.

Jailer Steve Tussey said the Madison County Detention Center is currently housing 473 inmates — 283 are in the facility and 140 in other counties and 50 in home incarceration program. He adding that his staffing situation is "dire," because of COVID-19 and has staff, contractors and inmates who have tested positive and is running with a "skeleton" staff. "Be patient with us," Tussey said. 'We're doing the best we can."

Bill aimed at rolling back motor vehicle property tax increase

FRANKFORT (KT) – Legislation designed to roll back at least part of the up to 40% increase in motor vehicle property tax announced by the Department of Revenue in a letter to county Property Valuation Administrators earlier this month has been introduced in the House.

Rep. Patrick Flannery, R-Olive Hill, has said, "A 40% increase on your motor vehicle taxes is uncalled for and, in my opinion, the Department of Revenue is not following existing law. In fact, they are making their own rules and have since 2009, running the span of three gubernatorial administrations, both Republican and Democrat."

He introduced a measure dealing with the valuation spike Monday afternoon, which has received the designation House Bill 6. Single-digit bill numbers are usually indicative of a legislative priority by a chamber's majority leadership.

kindness from people helping one another," Berea Police Chief Eric Scott said. "We also want to thank our police, fire and public works department for working countless hours to ensure the safety of our citizens."

Scott said "those moments are challenging," but added "it's the selfless acts and American fortitude that make our challenging moments bearable."

Berea Mayor Bruce Fraley praised the response by the city's road crews as they combated heavy snow and cold temperatures that followed on Thursday and Friday night.

"Our guys did a great job," Fraley said. "They are committed to keeping the roads clear and making it as safe as we can for our citizens and businesses."

The Madison County Road Department also had its hands full with the snow removal and Madison County Judge-Executive Reagan Taylor praised the response by his road department.

"We've had a challenging week or so and I want to thank our road department and glad we were able to serve the way that we were," he said.

"We got a lot of positive feedback of our county routes and keeping those cleaned off. I'm very appreciative of that."

Magistrates also praised road crews.

"I've never seen my county roads as clean as they were as quick as they were," Second District Magistrate Roger Barger said. "They done a great job."

"It hit so quick it was hard to keep everything up and going, but I spent one evening with Scott (Shepherd) and he was on the ball with the radio, loading trucks and the road crew did a tremendous job," said Third District Magistrate John Tudor.

Fourth District Magistrate Tom Botkin gave a standing ovation to Shepherd and his staff for a job well done.

"I received calls from people that were very pleased with how quick that the county roads were cleared and they wanted to relay that you and to your people," he said.

Kenny Barger also volunteered and assisted with snow removal and Botkin praised the Madison County Clerk for his assistance.

"Kenny knew what the shortages were down at the road department and has a license and has the skills to do that, and volunteered his time to go out and do that," Botkin said. "Those routes he drove, a lot were in my district, and those routes were exceptional."

"I'm glad to help and I enjoyed it," Barger said. "I hadn't been out (in a while). I grew up in trucks and drove for my dad for years and really enjoyed being back out and enjoyed helping."

First District Magistrate Ben Robinson also praised Madison County Sheriff Mike Coyle and his office for their efforts.

"I know that scheduling during snow events is an issue, the accidents that were on I-75 and within the county. I want to commend you for the great work you all did as well," he said. "I know there were people in ditches and what have you and I would assume you all were able to rescue and help them out."

Creating a will

Drafting a last will and testament is an essential component of estate planning. Despite the importance of having a will, a recent survey from AARP found two out of five Americans over 45 do not have one.

Putting wishes down on paper helps avoid unnecessary work and sometimes heartache upon the death of a loved one.

Wills allow heirs to act with the decedent's wishes in mind, and can ensure that assets and possessions will end up in the right hands.

Estate planning can be tricky, which is why many people turn to attorneys to get the job done right. Attorneys who specialize in estate planning will no doubt discuss the following topics with their clients.

Assets owned

Make a list of known assets and figure out which assets are covered by the will and which will have to be passed on according to other estate laws, such as through joint tenancy on a deed or a living trust. For example, life insurance policies or retirement plan proceeds will be distributed to your named beneficiaries. A will also can cover other assets, such as photographs, clothing, cars, and jewelry.

Guardianship

Parents' wills should include a declaration of who they want to become guardians their underage children or dependents.

Pets

Some people prefer to use their will to also dictate guardianship for their pets and to leave money or property to help care for those pets. However, pets do not have the legal capacity to own property, so one shouldn't gift money directly to pets in a will.

Funeral instructions

Settling probate will not happen until after the funeral.

Therefore, funeral wishes in a will often go unnoticed, states the legal advisement resource Find Law.

Executor

An executor is a trusted person who will carry out the terms of the will. This person should be willing to serve and be capable of executing the will.

People who die without a valid will become intestate.

This means the estate will be settled based on the laws of where that person lived, and a court-appointed administrator will serve in the capacity to transfer a piece of property.

This administrator will be bound by laws and may make decisions that go against the decedent's wishes. To avoid this outcome, a will and other estate planning documents are crucial.

Financing funerals

According to Lincoln Heritage Funeral Advantage, the average funeral costs between $7,000 and $10,000. It can be easy to overlook planning for such a large expense, and many people may think their funeral costs will be covered by their life insurance policies. However, that isn't always the case and certain complications can arise.

The funeral planning information guide Funeral Basics states that sometimes insurance policies become invalid if payments have not been made. Policies may have liens on them, or some named beneficiaries may no longer be alive. This can stall the process as issues are worked through. In addition, it can sometimes take between six and eight weeks for beneficiaries to receive life insurance policy payouts. Since many funerals take place within a week of a person's death, it's unlikely that surviving family members will be able to finance funerals with life insurance payouts. In addition, some policies may not be assignable, which means the benefits cannot be assigned to go to a third party who will file the claim for you (i.e., the funeral home or an assignment company with which the funeral home partners). It's important to determine if an existing policy is assignable and to take appropriate measures if it is not. Individuals may want to consider burial insurance or preneed funeral insurance. Another option is to use preplanning services, which allow people to prepay for funeral expenses and make planning decisions regarding the services and burial so that family members will not be tasked with financing and/or planning a funeral during a difficult time in their lives.

Out of the Blue

TyTy on point

TyTy Washington's debut as Kentucky's starting point guard was a memorable one.

Washington set a school record with 17 assists to go along with 17 points, leading the Wildcats to a 92-77 win over Georgia Saturday. Washington was thrust into the point-guard slot after starter Sahvir Wheeler suffered a neck strain earlier this week.

The performance by Washington enabled the Wildcats (12-3, 2-1 Southeastern Conference) to bounce back from a 65-60 setback to LSU last Tuesday in Baton Rouge. In addition, Washington inscribed his name in the record books, surpassing the previous school record of 16 assists set by John Wall during the 2009-10 season.

He was excited to become the school's single-game assist leader, but was even happier Kentucky remained undefeated at home (12-0) this season. Although his role changed, his mindset remained the same under adversity.

"Winning takes care of everything," he said. "It keeps everybody happy and so I just go out there each and every night and find different ways to be productive. … at the end of the day, I just want to win, and going into games, I always think, winning first and having a winning mentality."

Following the loss to the Tigers, Washington "had a feeling" that Wheeler wasn't going to play against his former team and didn't want Wheeler to rush back on the court. He was simply willing to carry the load.

"This team has really good depth and we know if one man goes down, the next one steps up and that's what I felt like we did tonight. … I had to step up as a leader and going through the whole week of practice, my teammates were telling me, 'we go as you go' so you just lead us. … to go out there be comfortable and be a leader, that takes a lot of pressure off of me."

Support from his teammates, combined with some adjustments on the offensive end of the court, paved the way for Washington's breakthrough performance against the Bulldogs.

Faith, pet 'secret sauce' for Mintz

Davion Mintz has relied on a higher power when he has struggled at times this season.

"I just put my faith in God," he said. "I prayed and prayed about it, and I just kept working. All the signs God was giving me was to just keep working. Don't stop."

Even when times were hard, Mintz kept pressing through. He missed three games in November, but slowly got back into a rhythm and has found his groove in a time when the Wildcats have needed him the most. The graduate senior guard has produced valuable minutes off the bench in the absence of Sahvir Wheeler, which has forced freshman guard TyTy Washington to take over the reins at the point-guard position.

In a 65-60 loss at LSU last Tuesday night, Mintz scored 16 points, including the 1,000th of his career, and followed that upon with a season-high 19 in a 92-77 victory over Georgia Saturday night. It marked the third straight game the Creighton transfer has scored in double figures and he's averaging 15 points per game during the past two weeks.

In the win over the Bulldogs, Mintz sank five 3-pointers and he said it "felt amazing" to see his shots fall at a rapid pace.

"It had to pay off," he said. "I have been working my tail off every day, every night, getting extra shots. (I've) just (been) working tirelessly. It can't rain forever — the sun has to come out eventually, so > "I prayed and prayed about it, and I just kept working. All the signs God was giving me was to just keep working. Don't stop."

I was happy to see that."

In times of struggle, Mintz never lost confidence in his shooting abilities, but admitted it was "tough just getting my rhythm back."

"I think it was more of a mental thing for me and just getting a groove back and getting to my spots again," he said. "Then honestly, just confidence — knowing that I'm a shooter, and the team, and coaches don't care how much I miss, they just want me to keep shooting. So, the encouragement gained my confidence back. So that was my turning point, I knew it was going to turn around."

He compared his struggles on the court with overall life experiences and said the sport provides valuable life lessons.

"The game of basketball teaches you so much about life," he said. "You can be putting in so much work and sometimes things just don't go well for you. But if you just stay faithful and committed to whatever it, is you want in life, it's going to click. This right here, these past two games, have been a testimony of my hard work honestly and the encouragement from the staff and my teammates really."

He also has gotten emotional support from his dog Ghost, which Mintz said has been the "secret sauce."

"When I got ill, Ghost left," he said. "He was still gone during that period when I was still struggling. He came back just recently — like a couple of weeks ago — everything has been uphill. … It's been great with him around and he makes everything easier. He's probably the reason I'm actually playing well."

Relatively known as a positive person on and off the court, he wasn't always that way and admitted that he was a "sore loser" at times while growing up, but again, his faith and upbringing kept him grounded.

"I was super into myself," he said. "It was hard for me, especially having an older brother, I just wanted to be better than him. Just the way my parents raised me and my faith in God, you can't be a sore thumb on a hand — you can't be like that.

"I know if I'm at a place where I'm not my best and I'm leaking negative energy that's going to spread like a virus to other people, even when it's hard, you've got to smile and be happy for others even when it's not the best for you because it's going to be your turn and you're going to be looking for others to clap for you when you're doing well. That's all I try to do."

Upgrades could boost boat dock

By Mary Margaret Cheeks/Staff Writer

The Madison County Fiscal County hopes a grant with the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources will help provide improvements to the Wilgreen Lake Marina. The court approved a resolution to apply for a Fish and Wildlife Boating Access grant application.

Madison County Treasurer Glenna Smith said the application is an opportunity for "cities, counties and state agencies to partner with KDFWR to renovate and utilize construction to boating access within its jurisdiction."

Monies from the grant are set aside from the Sport Fish Restoration Act of 1950. The KDFWR is currently taking grant applications and the court is attempting to make use of the grant to help improve boat access at Wilgreen Lake Marina. The county will partner with KDFWR and provide all required documentation as well as 25 percent match to funds that are granted. The amount awarded will remain unknown until the application is chosen for acceptance.

The magistrates welcomed the idea and hope it will help with general improvements, enhancements and restoration to Wilgreen Lake Marina's current ramps and parking lot areas.

"I am excited about this opportunity," Madison County Judge-Executive Reagan Taylor said. "We talked with them

Coyle reflects on 40-year EMS career

Carlos Coyle never thought saving lives would turn out to be his career path in life, but a certification would change his plans in 1982.

After Coyle received the basic level of certification to be an EMT during his senior year at Madison High School four decades ago, fulfilled his calling in life. Coyle began working for the ambulance service at the time and spent more than 20 years working as a paramedic for the Madison County EMS before taking over as assistant director ultimately becoming the chief officer of the county's Emergency Medical Services.

"I never planned on this being a 40-year career," Coyle said. "I knew I canted to do public safety and help my community, but I really thought I'd be going into law enforcement."

Coyle, who was honored with a proclamation by Madison County Judge-Executive Reagan Taylor and the Madison County Fiscal Court Tuesday at the Berea City Annex, will retire Jan. 31. Taylor proclaimed Jan. 25 as "Carlos Coyle Day."

> Carlos Coyle, Madison County EMS Director

Coyle said leaving his profession will be "bittersweet."

Much like his career began, it transpired in the same manner. While climbing the ranks during his four decades of service to the community, Coyle said "the goal of being director was never anything that I had" and added, "it just happened."

"I never had the goal to be director," Coyle said. "After you've been there a while, you progress through the ranks and I was promoted to a supervisory role after I'd only been there five years. As a shift commander, I helped with the

Shirley Thurston Sergeant

There are many things that Shirley Thurston Sergeant, "Gran", never did before she left us on January 23, 2022.

She never denied her grandchildren ice cream for breakfast; she never learned to drive a standard shift in a car, but instead on a tractor; she never under-appreciated flowers, a new Easter dress, or Amazing Grace; she never thought her closet was too bare to find something for someone in need; she never thought we didn't have enough food or space at the table to feed a high school basketball team; she never turned down the opportunity to play the piano; she never let her daughters wear high-cut shorts or low-cut tops; she never refused coffee or pie; she never stopped teaching; she never took friends, faith, or family for granted; and though she was an only child, she never felt alone.

Born in Corbin, Kentucky on January 1, 1936 to Tom and Virgie Thurston, Shirley lived her life guided by faith and family, her Appalachian community upbringing, and her father's encouraging "You can do it" mantra. She was a mother, teacher, and grandmother, whose generosity of spirit and unwavering support vastly expanded and defined these roles beyond even what she could have imagined as a young girl in southeastern Kentucky.

From her first piano lesson until her last key stroke, music was her first love, affording her a gift that she shared with those whom she knew for a lifetime or for a moment. Most who knew her could recall a time she played the piano for family and friends, for a celebration of love, life, or faith, for children to find their voices, or to fill the silence in a room with joy. She raised spirits with Daddy Sang Bass, touched hearts with The Old Rugged Cross, and found redemption with Amazing Grace.

Shirley attended Union College in Barbourville, KY where she earned a Bachelor's Degree in Education. There she met her husband, Wilson C. "W.C." Sergeant, with whom she learned to embrace change and challenge in their 65 years together. Shirley was the first in her family to graduate college, moving to Germany immediately after graduation, where W.C. was stationed with the U.S. army. She would later earn her Masters of Education, and Rank I from the University of Kentucky, setting her on a lifelong path of teaching in Kentucky and Ohio, eventually settling in Louisville, Kentucky at Minors Lane Elementary. Shirley embraced teaching as a passion and a "calling", which was evident in the many young lives she touched.

Throughout their years together, Shirley was also a dorm mother at Berea College, earned her real estate license and subsequently taught real estate classes, started her own writing consultancy, - The Write School – served on the board of their homeowners' association, and was a member of Alpha Delta Kappa educational organization. She supported W.C. through many creative endeavors, never missing her children's or grandchildren's basketball and little league games, cheerleading practices, equestrian competitions, school plays, concerts, or celebrations.

Those who knew Shirley best, though, celebrated her because she was the pinnacle of patience, the best person with whom to have morning coffee, and everyone's preferred bridge partner; she knew just when to call if you were having a bad day; she knew that encouragement needed to outweigh discouragement; she always had room in her chair for the dog; she knew papers were best graded with smiley faces; her favorite school days were the ones when her former students came to see her; she never complained about doing laundry; her humility was a gift and she never felt sorry for herself; she cherished each friend wholly and individually.

Shirley is preceded in death by her husband of 65 years, Wilson Calloway Sergeant; mother Virginia Deweese Thurston; father Thomas R. Thurston. She is survived by son Steve (Maggie) Sergeant of Owensboro, KY; daughter Ann (Jeff) Gibson of Cincinnati, OH; and daughter Libby (Corey) McGinnis of Mars, PA. She leaves behind five grandchildren: Samuel Sergeant, Leah Sergeant, Connor McGinnis, Ryan McGinnis, and Calloway Gibson.

To celebrate Shirley's life and legacy this week, watch a UK or UL game, give flowers, listen to some gospel music, hit the piano ivories, or, mostly importantly, offer someone a little grace.

Family and friends are invited to a memorial service on Saturday, January 29, 2022, 11:30 a.m., at the Duncan Memorial Chapel, 5600 Old Floydsberg Road, Crestwood, Kentucky. Parking is available on the street. A reception will follow the service from 1 -3 p.m. at Malone's – Louisville at 4370 Summit Plaza Drive, Louisville, KY. Memorial contributions may be made to Union College in Barbourville, Kentucky: https://unioncollege.givingfuel.com/give-union-college

Daisy Jane Burnell Chasteen

Daisy Jane Burnell Chasteen, 80, departed this life for her heavenly home on January 23, 2022 at her residence in Berea surrounded by her family. Mom was born on September 4, 1941 to the late Charles and Gladys Dalton Burnell and was a life-long resident of Berea. Left behind to mourn her passing is her husband of nearly 55 years, Robert, her six children; Dwayne (Nancy) Coffey, Berea, Dexter (Shirley) Coffey, Katy, TX, Tammy (Kenny) Whittamore, Berea, Lora (Philip) Shouse, Berea, Kim (Matt) Dees, Brodhead, and Charles Chasteen, Berea. Also surviving are thirteen grandchildren, Dwayne (Paige) Shouse, Eric (Sara) Coffey, Andrea Coffey, Amanda Coffey, Alyssa Whittamore, Katie Whittamore, Canon Dees, Chase Dees, Casey Dees, Brenna Dees, Reaghan Chasteen, Natasha (Charlie) Byrd, and Austin Thomas. She also had three great-grandchildren, Jackson Shouse, Harper Byrd, and Heidi Byrd. She is also survived by a brother, Harvey (Linda) Burnell and her beloved sister, Charlotte Collett.

Mom accepted Jesus at a young age. She always set a good example for us children and taught us to love God. She was a member of Wayside Christian Church. Her continual prayers for her family have protected us for all of our lives. If there was one word to describe Mom, it would have to be SELFLESS. She always put all of us before herself. There are not enough words to describe how she will be missed.

Per Mom's wishes, there will be no services. She wanted us to remember her as she was in life.

Arrangements were provided by Lakes Funeral Home and burial will be in Madison Memorial Gardens next to her parents.

In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to one of Mom's favorite charities, the Galilean Children's Home, P.O. Box 880, Liberty, KY 42539.

Newspapers continue to stand the test of time

Keith Taylor

Newspapers have been around Kentucky for more than 150 years.

We have withstood the test of time and continue to adapt and change with the times as we navigate through a new era of news, information and communication. We are the voice of your city and county. We report the news, do it without favor or merit and do it fairly.

Our focus is on local, faces and places and strive to produce a top-notch newspaper each and every week. We don't receive funding from any government entity and we are privately-owned by Nolan Group Media, a family group of eight newspapers.

Our NGM owners and publishers live in Kentucky, support local businesses and we are each part of our communities. We print our paper right here in Kentucky and we don't rely on a big cooperate chain to drive our engine. We navigate our own vehicles in each of our counties in which we live and totally rely on the support of our local readers and advertisers to support us on a weekly basis.

Without you, there would be no newspaper and my staff and I would not have a job. The front page would be blank and if you think the internet and social media sites are the best resources for local news, think again. You would not know about government meetings, because Facebook doesn't have a reporter based in Berea. Facebook doesn't have a reporter covering stories or giving you a newspaper to look forward to every week. Social media should be for personal entries and not for unregulated business commerce.

The Berea Citizen has been the voice of record in Berea since 1899 and we still continue to deliver the news to our readers and subscribers on a weekly basis. We are thankful for our readers and advertisers who put their trust in us.

We reach more than 5,000 readers per week in print and that number is supplemented by our online engine — our web site and other social media platforms — and reach an audience that expands beyond Kentucky and all across the globe.

As a member of the Kentucky Press Association Board of Directors, I'm proud to serve our district, which includes Madison, Boyle, Clark, Estill, Garrard, Jessamine, Lincoln, Mercer and Powell counties.

Thank you for reading us and we look forward to serving our readers and subscribers for many, many more years to come.

What $6 can do

Glenn Mollette

When I was 16-years-old, I was invited to speak at a little country church in rural Denver Kentucky, not far from Paintsville.

The church had all but closed its doors, but one man, Harold Rice, and his family wanted to see the church stay open and do well.

A church with few to almost no people typically does not attract too many interested ministers. I had spoken in my home church a few times and was a guest speaker in a few others. Mr. Rice asked if I would consider speaking at the church on the second and fourth Sunday afternoons at 2:00. I agreed, and brought a message to maybe seven or eight people my first Sunday. The crowd consisted of Harold and his wife June Rice and their family. The church was an old building with a pump organ and a sign behind the pulpit that said, "Preach the Word."

I stayed with the little congregation called Liberty Baptist Church throughout high school. By the time I was seventeen Mr. Rice was talking to me about being the official pastor and about ordination. In time I would become the pastor and would be ordained. I was too young, too inexperienced and unskilled for such a responsibility but youth is adventurous and will try what those of us who know better would never consider.

The church grew and we started having 20 to 30 people and often more. People literally received Christ, joined the church and were baptized. This was all amazing.

Even more amazing was Mr. Rice offered me a grand salary of $60 a month to help buy my gasoline. The trip one way from home was over 30 miles so this was appreciated. He also presented me with paperwork for a perk. The church was going to put 10 percent or $6 of my salary into the church denominational retirement plan, then known as The Annuity Board. It's called Guidestone today. He had me to complete a form solidifying my agreement to this monthly contribution. I was about seventeen at this stage and had zero interest or thoughts about retirement. Six dollars a month kind of seemed like a joke.

I was with Liberty church a couple of years or more and about ten to twelve of those months Mr. Rice made that $6 contribution to my retirement faithfully. Although, I never thought another day about it from the moment I signed those papers.

Seven or eight years ago I did wonder if that account even existed.

I called up The Guidestone retirement people and with my Social Security number they told me in a few seconds that the account did indeed exist and my balance was $31,000. Shocked would not describe how I felt. I almost had to pick myself off the floor. If Mr. Rice had made as many as 12 contributions the total invested would have been $72. Now, years later I was looking at over $31,000. Since that day of first inquiring that little $6 account now has over $46,000 and still growing.

The point of all this is save some money when you can. Start as young as possible but even if you are old put something away every month. If you can save hundreds every month that is wonderful, please do.

However, don't ever underestimate the growth potential of saving a little bit of money every month, even if it's just $6. And yes, every time I look at that account, I remember Mr. Rice and the good people of Liberty Baptist Church who not only encouraged me then but are still encouraging me today with just $6.

Tips to stay healthy

Each year, we make resolutions to exercise regularly, eat well, and give up smoking and other bad habits. Following these basic rules could cut heart disease risk by 80 percent, diabetes risk by 90 percent, and cancer risk by 50 percent. But, most of us fail to keep our promises to ourselves.

This year, skip the resolutions and stay healthy by sticking to these seven steps:

- Add strength training to your exercise program. Too many people neglect resistance exercise, particularly women for whom it's crucial for preventing muscle and bone loss with age. In addition to getting at least 30 minutes of cardio exercise on most days, lift weights for at least 20 minutes, two- to three times per week.
- Focus on healthy eating, not dieting. Healthy eating starts with learning new ways to eat, such as adding more fresh fruits, vegetables, and whole grains, and cutting back on foods that have a lot of fat, salt, and sugar.
- Go fish. The oils in darker types of fish, such as salmon, tuna, mackerel, and herring, are good for your heart and brain and may even lower your risk of cancer. Eat fish at least twice a week.
- Drink water. There are 1000's of sugary drinks on the market and we're drinking too many of them. These drinks are the largest source of empty calories in the American diet, and they're causing us to pour on the pounds. Reach for water first when you're thirsty.
- Sleep eight hours a night. Adequate sleep makes you feel better, decreases risk for cardiovascular disease, boosts memory, and reduces the likelihood of being in a car accident. Make your bedroom a sanctuary. Keep it dark, cool, and quiet. Don't work, eat, watch TV, use a phone, tablet or computer in your bedroom.
- If you smoke, quit. It's hard to quit smoking, but you can do it. Even 'social' smoking is bad for your health. Talk to your doctor about quitting and what options are best for you.
- Form a relationship with your Primary Care Physician. After downloading the MyChart app, learn about the many benefits as this provider will help you achieve optimal health and wellness … so what are you waiting for?! Make an appointment.

COYLE

training at that point in time, and then I became assistant director and then ultimately director. My goal was to be a paramedic and it's still the thing I'm most proud of now. I love my job being director, and, hopefully I've been able to grow the service and make it better."

The most memorable times for Coyle occurred during his time on the street as a paramedic and "there's nothing like it in my mind, more rewarding than actual patient care."

"What keeps us going is the desire to serve and a little bit of adrenaline when you receive emergency calls and things like that," he said. "It's often a very instant gratification — maybe you were able to help save somebody's life and you see that in real time and you see that very quickly. You see the fruits of your labor — your training and your education really make a difference.

"When you pick up somebody who's maybe not breathing and you're able to restore them to breathing or maybe their heart is not beating again, you're able to restore (the heartbeat). There's no greater reward than to see that happen."

Coyle admitted working in the EMS field can be difficult at times, especially in tense situations.

"You see the best of people in times and the worst of people in times, and you have to be able to put that in perspective or you couldn't do this job — the things that EMS workers see or the tragedies, the senseless loss of life, the terrible conditions sometimes that they encounter, it's tough. It's tough to see those things, but the good side of that is that we see, hopefully that we made a little difference. We were able to help that person in the situation they were in or the medical emergency that they were experiencing and things like that."

The ongoing pandemic has made things much tougher for Coyle and his staff and admitted it has been one of the "tougher things that I've seen in my 40 years as far as truly impacting the providers, first responders and the health care workers."

"It's been difficult," he said. "It's increased their own volume (for first responders). The difficulty of response is we're having to wear a lot of PPE and be extra careful about how you handle patients with COVID or potentially with COVID and things like that."

Although he's leaving his career, he will spend more time on his farm and getting ahead on a list of things he's behind on, mostly catching up on farm life.

"It's something that's enjoyable and as hard of work as it is sometimes, it's been a good balance to help to help me because I'm probably never relax when I'm out there on the farm."

I enjoy researching different ideas for meals on the internet. When the girls were in school, our schedules were extremely hectic. So, anything that was able to be prepared in a crock pot that the girls liked was always a positive. This soup indeed was a favorite.

MLK Day Marchers learn to be a leader, one must first be a servant

Libby Horn

Taking from Dr. King's February 4, 1968, sermon at Ebeneezer Baptist Church, Berea College professor Andrew Baskin said to be a leader, one must first be a servant. That was the general theme presented on the steps of City Hall following the annual Martin Luther King, Jr. Day march from Union Church. The annual event was organized by Berea College's Black Cultural Center. "For a leader to be great, he must first be a servant," said Baskin. "Each of us should adopt that philosophy to help others." Baskin recommended those in attendance of Berea College's commitment to equality and encouraged all to work toward that goal by finding common ground despite differences. Before concluding the ceremony, former Middletown Consolidated school teacher Dorothy White Miller and retired Berea professor Richard Drake lit a unity candle, using the flame from the march. Before the group headed back to Union Church, all sang, "Lift up Every Voice and Sing" and "Keep Your Eye On The Prize."

Restaurant tax nets nearly $300,000 so far

After two quarters of collecting the tax on prepared food (commonly known as the restaurant tax), the Berea Tourism Commission had a better idea of how much revenue the tax could generate in a year. However, the full picture was still unclear. According to information obtained from the city finance office, the tax had netted $294,910 during the first two quarters ranging from July 1, 2007, through January 9, 2008. "We're now our own city government for the first time in a long time," according to tourism director Belle Jackson. Prior to the tax, the tourism commission was funded annually with roughly $200,000 from the City's general fund. That money would remain in the City's general fund as state law required restaurant tax proceeds to be used for tourism and for those funds to be held in a tourism budget. Tourism was also receiving approximately $110,000 from the transient room tax. Initial targeted plans for utilization of the restaurant tax funds generated were for expanded advertising. Additional planned uses included support tor tourism events within the city.

Korean War vet receives Purple Heart

One of the Forgotten War's wounded received a Purple Heart 56 years after being wounded. Lloyd Preston Johnson received his Purple Heart Medal for wounds and frost bite that he received during the winter of 1950, while serving in Korea. He served with Easy Company, 19th Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division from July 5, 1950, through July 25, 1951. Johnson was honorably discharged at Fort Campbell on May 7, 1953, having served in the Army. He achieved the rank of Master Sergeant. At the time of his discharge, his report of separation showed he was awarded the Combat Infantry Badge, the Bronze, the Korean Service Medal with five bronze stars, the Distinguished Unit Emblem, and the United Nations Service Medal. Johnson also more recently was awarded the Purple Heart, the Korean War Medal, and the National Defense Service Medal.

KSP launches program to help the hearing impaired

Miscommunication between deaf and hard of hearing motorists and law enforcement during tense moments, such as traffic stops, has produced dire consequences nationwide. In an effort to prevent such situations in the Commonwealth of Kentucky, the Commission of the Deaf and Hard of Hearing (KCDHH) partnered with the Kentucky State Police to introduce the Visor Communication Card program. The light weight, double sided, laminated cards contained pictures to represent basic requests, violations and roadside assistance questions used by law enforcement during routine traffic stops. The back of the cards contained instructions on how to effectively communicate with motorists who were deaf or hard of hearing. Deaf and hard of hearing motorists also had access to the cards to carry with them in their vehicle as well. "Communication is a facet of everyday life that we take for granted. For deaf and hard of hearing people, it's a challenge.," said Virginia Moore, interim executive director of KCDHH. "For police officers it's a challenge. So when these two groups come together, communication needs to be quick and effective. This card is not the answer to everything, but it gets communication started to help with something they encounter every day. More than 200 deaf, oral deaf and hard of hearing motorists had applied for the Visor Communication Cards during the first week of existence with thousands more expected over the upcoming months.

Library sowing seeds for spring

Christina Cornelison

As I sit in my office bundled up in layers and looking at the remaining snow that refuses to melt, it seems almost impossible that we are inching ever closer to spring. In fact, the first day of spring is only eight weeks away.

Besides the fact that spring is just lovely in general, this time of year is always an exciting one at the Madison County Public Library, as it marks the official rollout of our Seed Library.

The Seed Library began nearly a decade ago as a collaboration with Sustainable Berea, who collected and donated seeds, volunteered time to help with packaging, and hosted programs.

It was designed to promote gardening education, as well as local food ownership and food security. Food insecurity is a major issue in Kentucky. According to a 2016 study, Mind the Meal Gap, one in six Kentuckians lack access to enough food for an active, healthy life. The same study indicated 22% of Kentucky's children are food insecure. Access to urban gardens - such as the raised beds at both libraries - along with increased awareness and knowledge of how to grow food, are ways to increase food security. Providing these resources is a critical piece of the library's mission to empower and enrich our community.

Madison County Public Library's Community Partners Manager, Paige Beichler, began working on this year's Seed Library last fall, in collaboration with the Clark County Public Library. Clark County's Director, Julie Maruskin, spearheads a regional library consortium for seed selection, purchasing and distribution. These seeds are chosen for their good germination rate and growability in our area. Some are heritage seeds.

Popular seeds in the library this year are flowers, herbs and beans. According to Paige, we have a unique addition of two kinds of dill, Dukat and Bouquet. Dukat is a northern European variety developed to be used fresh on Scandinavian dishes. Bouquet is great for pickling. Along with these offerings, we will soon have nearly a dozen different varieties of tomato seeds.

These tend to fly off the shelf, so plan to pick those up as soon as they are available, and contact the library before you visit.

The Seed Library does not follow the traditional circulation methods used for other library materials - you do not need to check out seeds with your library card, and you also are not asked to return them! Simply visit either location, choose your seeds, take them home and plant them. There is no limit!

Seeds are available for pickup at both Richmond and Berea library locations now. Our Seed Library is housed in beautiful "antique" card catalogs (remember those?) in each building. Stop by and pick up seeds for your spring garden, and register for one of our seed starting programs while you're there! On Feb. 12 at the library's Richmond location and Feb. 19 at the Berea location, Sustainable Berea will offer workshops on gardening with raised beds. Attendees will have a chance to win either a free raised bed or a garden container. On March 12, the library will host a "Start your Garden Seedlings" workshop at both locations. We will provide biodegradable seedling containers, soil, and seeds, as well as Kentucky-specific gardening guides and a Master Gardener, courtesy of the Madison County Cooperative Extension. Other gardening programs, such as a pumpkin contest, are in the works!

For more information on these programs and to register, visit www.madisonlibrary.org/events, or contact either library location.

Tammy Whittamore

My mom has had some chronic health issues through the years. She had a heart attack years ago, and she always worried about having another one. She also had kidney trouble, but she wasn't as concerned about that. A doctor told her, "Your heart will kill you long before your kidneys will." She never thought she would make it to her fiftieth wedding anniversary or to 80 years of age, but she accomplished both.

We knew she wasn't feeling very well, but I guess we didn't realize how serious it was. She just couldn't manage to eat or drink much fluid. It turned out that she had Omicron possibly and a touch of pneumonia. Mom never had low oxygen or trouble breathing, which was surprising. She had a brief trip to the ER getting fluids. Mom was perkier for a few days, but then declined again.

Mom was transferred to Lexington. Each day brought another diagnosis of a new problem. (This did give us a better medical history for her, and we were grateful for the good accomplished.) Unfortunately, family could not visit, only look through a window. She grew less alert. She stopped being able to sip through a straw. After another low blood pressure scare, we brought her home. We knew she never liked seeing doctors or being in the hospital, especially when she was alone. (When you have six children, you should never be alone!)

Mom was always cold before. So now we had her in front of our wood stove, toasty and warm. She had company all the time, even at night. (Mom did get more alert for a while. She was able to speak a little to family.) We held her hands, rubbed her forehead, patted her arms, and loved on her. The Lord was generous to allow our family this time to be together to console one another.

She had a favorite quote. "Life shouldn't be a journey to the grave with the intention of arriving safely in a pretty and well-preserved body, but rather, to skid in broadside, thoroughly used up, totally worn out, and loudly shouting. Wow! What a ride! Thank you, Lord!"

She was very thankful for her life. She counted her blessings for our entire family's health. Mom was confined mainly to her room near the end, but she didn't complain. She was just glad to see us when we visited. She used her time to pray for us every day. She should have spent more money on herself, but she liked helping others. Mom looked forward to donating to charities.

She also enjoyed spending time babysitting the grandkids. She never seemed to get aggravated. She would let them build forts from the couch cushions and sheets. Sometimes the forts would stay up for days! Mom made countless trips picking up grandkids at school and hitting the drive throughs for food. She always said she would never be a slowpoke granny, but a leadfooted one.

Daisy Jane loved her family so much and relied on God for everything. God loved her, too. So, he welcomed Daisy into heaven on the evening of Sunday, January 23, 2022. She will be missed desperately.

How do you put a price on a tap-dancing duck?

Roger Alford

My friend Harold Wainscott has an endless supply of funny stories, but I think his favorite is the one about a very talented duck.

As the tale goes, a circus owner was strolling through a carnival one day when he saw a crowd gathered around a small table watching a duck tap dance on an upside-down pot.

The circus owner had never seen anything like it, and, after some haggling, he bought the tap-dancing duck and the pot for $10,000.

It wasn't long before the circus owner was back demanding a refund.

"You cheated me," he complained. "That duck won't dance at all for me."

"So," asked the duck's former owner, "did you remember to light the candle under the pot?"

We generally equate dancing with happiness. That's why, in most parts of the world, it's a part of wedding celebrations. In the Old Testament, dancing is described as a part of worship.

We're told that "David danced before the Lord with all his might" in 2 Samuel 6:14.

"Let them praise His name in the dance: let them sing praises unto him with the timbrel and harp" (Psalm 149:3).

And God's word tells us there's "a time to weep and a time to laugh; a time to mourn and a time to dance" (Ecclesiastes 3:4).

Every once in a long while, I get to catch a bit of "The Price Is Right," the TV gameshow in which people can win fabulous prizes, includes vehicles, boats, trips, even cash. And when the contestants win, they often cut a jig right there on the stage in front of all of America. They just can't help it; they're thrilled with what is now theirs.

That perhaps is the best explanation I can provide for the happiness the world sees in God's people. They're thrilled with what is theirs: eternal life, a peace of mind that passes all understanding, a joy that shines in their very faces because of their personal relationships with Jesus.

That's why I'm always delighted when I see Christians who are excited about all that God has given them and all that God will give them in the future.

After all, "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for those who love Him" (1 Corinthians 2:9).

So, it's not difficult to cause God's people to feel like dancing.

That tap-dancing duck might have needed a flame under his feet to cause him to dance, but David danced out of a heart filled with gratitude for all that God had done for him, like a guy who has just came out of the "Show Case Showdown" with the greatest prize of all time.

Airport projects will boost county, region

A number of projects at the Central Kentucky Regional Airport (CKRA) are under way that will benefit the community and region, Madison County Airport Board officials said Tuesday.

The projects were discussed at a recent board meeting that touched on airport improvements, as well as discussion of services that would serve local pilots and aviation enthusiasts $256,200, from the Kentucky Industrial Authority.

Board Chair George Wyatt said prospects for securing the loans are good, with possible completion of the infrastructure project by summer. "We're expecting a positive response on the grant within a month or so," Wyatt said.

With the anticipated construction of a new terminal building at CKRA this year, Wyatt said the new waterline will allow for better fire protection, which will lower insurance rates for the airport and surrounding residents. It will also lower insurance rates for prospective corporate clients that wish to park corporate planes in Madison County.

Todd Bloch, of American Engineers Inc., revealed that the application process to secure $1,024,000 in funding for a waterline/sewer extension project is in the final stages as airport officials work to satisfy environmental requirements. The project will extend an eight-inch water line to the airport from the Madison Southern Water District, as well as extending a forced main sewer line from Berea Municipal Utilities.

Wyatt said the project will enable homeowners near the line to connect to the two services.

The board has applied for an Appalachian Regional Commission grant for $1,024,000, or 80 percent of the cost, while the City of Berea has been the sponsoring agency in applying to get a loan for the remaining 20 percent, or "A lot of good things are happening, and we've had good help from the three governments and the community that has enabled us to do this," Wyatt said. "We're very appreciative, but we pay that back by enabling corporate access, which helps drive employment. We provide a good service to corporate clients and that spills over into the local economy when jobs are created."

In other news, officials said discussions are underway to expand flight operations and flight instruction services to county residents. Bloch noted that Wings Aviation is considering offering flight instruction at CKRA. The company already offers flight training in Danville and at Blue Grass Airport in Lexington. In related news, Bloch noted that discussions are underway to form a flight club at CKRA, in which local pilots could pay an annual membership fee, then have access to designated airplanes at the facility.

Other business:

• The T-hangar construction project was completed in 2021, but the contractors are finishing up some final punch list items, including the installation of an underground drain. As a result of the project, 30 new hangers are drawing rent at the airport. CKRA currently has 68 airplanes based at the airport.

• An airport LED lighting project has been delayed because of inclement weather and a shortage of staff, some of which is related to COVID-19 outbreaks. Final plans for the project are expected to be submitted soon, Bloch said.

• CKRA could be receiving a big boost in funding as a result of the Bipartisan Infrastructure Law passed last year. As a result of the law, Madison County's airport could receive as much a $159,000 in federal funds per year for five years, provided it meets matching requirements.

• In related news, Bloch reported that another $10 million may be available for Kentucky airports through the Kentucky Department of Aviation. Officials are waiting to see whether Governor Andy Beshear will propose more funding for Kentucky airports in his upcoming budget.

• The board also unanimously approved a payment of $193,265 to Jade Construction for the extension of a ramp. Officials noted it was a partial payment for work in progress.

Grady's heroics rescue Cats

Kellan Grady goes ups for a shot in Kentucky's win over Mississippi State Tuesday night at Rupp Arena (Mike Cyrus Photo)

Kentucky was without its second-leading scorer but one of its most experienced players provided the heroics against Mississippi State Tuesday night.

Kellan Grady scored eight points in overtime to lead the Wildcats to an 82-74 triumph over the Bulldogs, giving Kentucky coach John Calipari his 800th career victory at both the collegiate and professional level.

The 12th-ranked Wildcats (16-4, 6-2 Southeastern Conference) were without second-leading scorer TyTy Washington who suffered an ankle injury in Kentucky's 80-71 loss to top-ranked Auburn last Saturday.

Calipari praised his team's ability to scrape out a close encounter going into Saturday's showdown at No. 5 Kansas in the Big 12-SEC Challenge.

"It was a game I thought would be like this," the Kentucky coach said. "We struggled to get some baskets when we needed to, TyTy being out probably affected that, but they were good. … We needed this game. I told the guys afterward, we needed a game like this, where we had a chance to end it (in regulation). … We're going to Kansas and they've been in a couple of close games. We had to be in this kind of game to understand how we finish it off."

Grady agreed with Calipari and added the Wildcats were resilient in overtime after faltering down the stretch in the second half that enabled the Bulldogs to rally and force overtime.

"I wish we hadn't blown that lead," he said. "I think this game was good for us, it shows that we can execute and win a game down the stretch. There is a lot we can take away (from this game). … The last 10 minutes of that game was atrocious — not good and I think the overtime was a reset. … it was a good win for us."

Grady missed a 3-pointer at the end of regulation that pushed the contest into overtime, but he more than made up for the missed shot in the extra period. Grady scored eight straight points, including back-to-back 3-pointers that helped the hosts fend off the feisty Bulldogs.

Grady sank four 3-pointers overall and scored 18 points. He was one of four Kentucky players who finished in double figures.

Oscar Tshiebwe led the Wildcats with 21 points and 22 rebounds. He grabbed two crucial offensive rebounds on a pair of missed free throws in overtime.

Sahvir Wheeler made a pair of free throws in overtime and added 15 points, while Keion Brooks chipped in with 12 points.

The Bulldogs (13-6, 4-3) rallied from a 16-point deficit in the second half and used a big performance from Iverson Molinar, who led all scorers with 30 points. Molinar sparked Mississippi State's comeback attempt with 22 points in the final half.

Dontaie Allen provided a boost for the Wildcats in the first half and finished with five points. Allen connected on a 3-pointer and slammed home a dunk in his first significant outing since November.

and we talked about a Kayak launch. I think there's a lot more kayakers that use that now and go out there and maybe even fish from their kayak, or just for recreation purposes. We're looking at making some improvements out there that are much-needed."

On another note, the court discussed and approved fresenius medical care in Berea and Richmond. The resolution is to approve a notification requirement for the medical care FMC of Berea and Richmond and the Madison County Emergency Management Agency. FMC is a dialysis organization that works in and across the state.

If an emergency arises and causes a disruption of services, the Madison County Emergency Management Agency will be in assisting in providing special assistance and fresenius medical care, and also work in assistance to other needs such as power restoration, communications, security, supplies, water, fuel, sandbags, and occasional transport. The CFR requires a formal partnership be established that they have communicated with their Emergency Management Agency in establishing a plan for uncontrollable circumstances where they may need assistance. This is just a notification, but a requirement for CFR standards. The duration for this agreement will be one year with automatic renewal following or until termination.

Wendy Lynch, 9-1-1 Director gave a presentation about "Smart 911," a free service to all citizens with an app-base program for easy access. The application allows citizens to make valuable information easily accessible to 9-1-1 during an emergency.

"The information is very private," she said. "We only have access to it when your cellphone has called 9-1-1." In a variety of circumstances, the app can be helpful to first responders and dispatchers in giving the best immediate care possible with instant information on hand."

Taylor also discussed the tree and limb debris pickup on Old Wilderness Trail North, Union City Road, Hackett Pike, Brookstown, Nolan, Walker Park, Dolesville and Wiloughby roads.

"This is only for tree limbs, not other storm debris," he said. "In order to have your debris picked up, residents must have scheduled an appointment in advance with the road department. Appointments will be taken in three rounds. Please contact our Madison County Road Department at 624-4739."

In other business:

• The court will continue to have its bi-monthly meetings at the Berea City Annex and set the meeting schedule for the remainder of the year.

• The court entered into an agreement with the Commonwealth of Kentucky Transportation Cabinet on March 3, 2020 for the USBR 21 Signage Project whereas the Commonwealth Kentucky committed discretionary funds in the amount of 85,000 to be applied to the FD 39 construction signage project. All requirements have been met on the part of the county. The amendment will increase the FD 39 construction funding by $24,000 with a new grand total of $109,000 was spent on the project.

• An addendum approved by magistrates for work to be completed on the sewer lines of the Madison County Detention Center. After work began on the lines, it was undetermined at that time of the amount of need of restoration. The additional scope cost will be $199,548.00 to complete the project.

• Taylor reminded citizens of the "Tracks" program that can be utilized during a snow event. The app gives residents an indication of what road crews are plowing in real time. It can be accessed at madisoncountyky.us/tracks or also on social media outlets such as Facebook.

Scott Shepherd, head of our Road Department, announced that after four snow events already this year, $224,326.36 has been spent in maintaining road conditions.

"That just kind of brings light when you put money to what we're out there doing and for everybody to realize what it costs," Shepherd said.
