Seven minutes into the fireworks show at the Blast in the Valley Sunday evening, one of the shells fell over and was shot into the crowd of spectators. Shown here is the moment of the explosion on the ground as visitors scrambled to escape. Organizer Bentley Cromer said the shell travelled through a narrow opening between two parked vehicles to reach the crowd. Six people were reported injured and four were taken to the hospital with minor injuries. All four were treated and released.

EF-1 causes damage

Touches down in Brodhead

By: Mike French

Storms hit Rockcastle County Monday at about 4:30 p.m. causing damage to several homes in Brodhead.

Officials with the National Weather Service visited Brodhead Tuesday and confirmed the damage was caused by an EF-1 tornado. A tornado is designated EF-1 if winds are between 86-110 mph. An EF-2 is 111-135 mph.

One of the harder hit homes belongs to Steve Lunsford and Amanda Branscum. Lunsford's car was carried 70 feet across the yard of the home on Old Highway 150, and dropped in front of the house. A truck in the driveway was lifted and slammed back down to the ground. Once the heaviest winds started blowing, Lunsford grabbed his family and took them to the bathroom. "I put my girls in the tub and I was standing in front of them," Lunsford said. "I was scared to death and worried that the house was going to come down.' Lunsford said he was standing in the kitchen door

Woman escapes twice while under arrest

By: Mike French

Holly M. Mullins, 36, of Mount Vernon, was arrested more than a week ago by the Kentucky State Police and charged with theft by unlawful taking, criminal mischief, and operating a motor vehicle while impaired, according to reports.

However, police say that Mullins somehow escaped from the KSP cruiser and fled. Police searched for her for about a week until she was picked up by the Mount Vernon Police Department on the warrant for her origi-

However, while being processed by officers in Mount Vernon, Mullins leapt from her chair beside the cruiser, in the parking lot, at the police station and escaped again. But this time, officers chased her across Sigmon Street and through yards and onto Richmond Street and by another house into the back yard.

Officer Shay Helton caught Mullins in the yard and forced her to the ground

Mullins was then taken back to the police station (See "Escape" on A7)

An experience I'll never forget happened to me this

My dad lost a his brother, Jennings, in the Korean war in 1958. They were not only brothers but best friends and played music together at all the local churches.

Needless to say, Jennings became somewhat of a hero in our family. Though he died shortly before I was born, I knew him very well.

As it turns out, we looked almost identical. My family has pictures of me and Jennings side by side and other than the age of the pictures, one can't tell the difference between us.

My dad always said my mannerisms were just like Jennings and I was apparently like him in many ways.

I have heard about his girlfriends and antics as a child. I've even read all the letters he sent home to his mother from Korea. I feel like I've known him all my

We visited his grave regularly over the years and I named one of my sons after him.

This weekend, I was visiting a nursing home and a white haired lady came up to me slowly and quietly and slightly bent over.

iar with the town of Speedwell (which is where my dad and Jennings grew up.) The lady then informed me that she knew who I was and she has all my life but never really spoke to me.

She asked if I am famil-

She informed me that she and Jennings were together back in the 50s and that they wrote each other constantly while he was in Korea.

She told me stories about Jennings that I had never heard. She told me of some of his hopes and dreams that he had shared with her.

She told me of his passions and of the times their eyes met at the little church they attended.

After he was killed, this lady slowly got back to normal and eventually married a man who loved Bluegrass music. She informed me that over the years she had attended many of the shows I've played and thought "There's Jennings doing exactly what he always wanted to do." She would think of him and see him in me over the years but kept quiet about it

Each time she saw me play, she thought of his dreams to play music and how much of my life mirrored his.

Last year her husband passed away and she told me she just wanted me to know that I have kept her first love alive in her memories all these years.

For 60 years she would see me and think of him.

She told me she could tell that if he had lived, he would have looked just like me at this age. She asked me for a favor. "You have Jennings' blood and you look just like him. Would it be possible to get a hug from you?" I told her I wouldn't have it any other way. It wasn't a typical hug. Not that quick hug of a stranger. Instead, a loving, missing, tight hug. I knew in that moment she was hugging Jennings one more time, 60 years later. I didn't let go and she didn't let go.. She put her head against my chest and held on like she hadn't seen me in 60 years. I could almost see the memories in her head from the stories of Jennings that I had heard. Kind of like seeing a lifelong movie in a moment. The thoughts that must have been going through her head and the ideas of what might have been.

When we parted I saw the tears in her eyes as she thanked me and turned to walk to her room in the nursing home.

I stood and watched her slowly walk away and she turned and looked back at me one last time and gave me a little smile as she rounded the corner headed back to her room at the nursing home.

Life is so short.

It doesn't sound very masculine of me, but hug who you can, while you still

Since Kathy and I are both retired, we often drive to Winchester or Mt. Sterling to get our groceries. Both stores are much larger than our local Kroger here in Stanton and are better stocked.

Last week, while we were strolling up and down the aisles of the Winchester store, we ran into several of my former students. Delighted to see each of them, I of course stopped to chat. Frankly, we bump into former students with some regularity since I was a teacher for so many years. I taught at George Rogers Clark (GRC) in Winchester for the last twenty-seven years out of a total of the thirty-eight years of my ca-The first young lady I spoke with is named Ashley. When in high school, she was enrolled in my Human Anatomy and Physiology class. She loved my class and often said that she wanted to study medicine. I was so pleased to learn that she is now a dentist, currently practicing in Berea, Kentucky. She graduated from GRC in 1986. As she walked away from our brief visit, I will admit that a small grin of satisfaction could be seen on my face.

On the next aisle, another former student approached and began to chat. She graduated from GRC in 2003, which was my last year before retirement. She was excited to see me and to explain that she is now a chemist for a drug company. She loved both my Chemistry and Anatomy & Physiology classes. She told Kathy that she was still single and waiting for "Mr. Right" to appear. Kathy assured her that she is being smart to wait for that special guy. As we parted ways, I believe that the grin on my face was growing.

While we were nearing the last aisle or two, another former student of mine stopped to catch up. She was older than the previous two, but I failed to ask which particular year that she graduated from GRC. She, too, seemed pleased and excited to see

By this time, my wife is getting very tired and begins moving past the two of us, remarking to me that she was going to have to start leaving me at home. She acknowledges my student as she breezes on by with, "There's one of you at the end of every aisle!"

me after all of these years.

We both laughed and kept talking. She explained that she had graduated from Eastern Kentucky University with a degree in nursing. She also noted that her first notion to study some form of medicine had originated in my Anatomy class. By the time that we parted ways, I was grinning from ear to ear.

Honest to goodness, it took us almost two full hours to get out of the grocery store. I have to admit that I totally understand what Kathy meant. It seems that nearly everywhere we go, one of my former students appears. (Kathy and I were in Anchorage, Alaska, and one of my former students rode up on a motorcycle and said, "Mr. Griffin, is that you?" Kathy almost fainted.)

My love and devotion to science and math originated when I was in high school at Mt. Vernon. My most favorite classes were taught by the science and math teachers. When I entered college at the University of Kentucky, my major interests were in chemistry and human physiology. I received my degree in 1965 and taught chem-

I've always considered myself about as patriotic as the next fellow when it comes to being proud to be an American. Heck, we even have a big American flag around here somewhere that we used to fly from the front porch on the patriotic holidays like Presidents Day, Memorial Day, Veternans Day, during The Olympic Games or just for the fun of it.

But we haven't flown the flag at our house since 2012. Not because we have anything against it nor that we've become less in love with our country, but simply because that was the year we built new porch railing, complete with posts that have no flat surface on which to attach flag staff mounts.

I know that's a pretty sorry excuse and that a bit of ingenuity could come up with a way to mount the flag but the truth of the matter is that I've been too lazy to put my mind to it and Mr. Parkinson makes it very difficult to do anything that requires the use of both

Anyway, as I sit here writing early on this muchneeded rainy 4th of July morning, I'm feeling just a tad guilty for not being nearly as into the spirit of the holiday as I should be.

Seldom, if ever, has a year gone by that Loretta, the kids, when they were youngsters, and I have not attended some sort of July 4thcelebration and then grumbled about the traffic jam that always happens right after the fireworks show. We've even been known to waste a few dollars at one or another of these perennial travelling fireworks tents to have our own little show.

However, I'm reasonably sure that we never spent more than 25 or 30 bucks, nor did we find it necessary to start celebrating around the first of Junelike a bunch of folks in our neck of the woods chose to do this year.

There has not been a night since the first of last month when I have not heard fireworks going off somewhere within a couple or three miles of our home.

Most of the time I've been unable to actually see them but the nightly booming has been fairly steady for over a month and it finally culminated last Saturday night as a steady roar that began just before dark and was still going on at midnight when I went to bed. I enjoyed the show one of our neighbors, perhaps half or three quarters

In fact most of the noise was too far away for the fireworks to be more visible than vague flashes of light on the horizon of any direction I chose to look. It actually sounded like a war zone and the blasts were too rapid to count. There were at least several dozen per minute. It sounded like we were under attack by mortar fire from all sides and the enemy was closing in to finish us off. I would not have been much surprised to have seen the red army come screaming like banshees with bayonets mounted down the back fortypasture. History would record it as the battle of Charlie Brown

The booming was still going on, although it had become sporadic and more distant and the neighbor's show seemed to be over when I went to bed. The walls of our house are so thick and well-insulated that the distant booming did not keep me from falling asleep as soon as my head came in contact with the pillow.

Then, at 10 minutes past 2:00 AM, our big indoor dog woke me up barking and simultaneously there were a couple of booms so loud they jarred the windows. I ran out to the porch and heard two more equally

High cholesterol can be deadly for your heart and brain

High cholesterol is a problem for many people in the United States. It can cause a heart attack or stroke by blocking the arteries leading to the heart and brain, and also doubles the risk of heart disease. Heart disease is the number one cause of death in the United States, with stroke not far behind at third. Yet one in every six Americans has high cholesterol – with less than half of Americans aware of it and receiving treatment to lower their

Saint Joseph Berea, part of KentuckyOne Health, hopes to save lives through cholesterol screenings, as well as proactive steps to lowering cholesterol levels, including a healthy diet and regular exercise.

"High cholesterol itself does not cause symptoms, so it can unfortunately go undetected," said Derrick Williams, DO, of KentuckyOne Health Primary Care Associates in Berea. "Screening for this silent killer can be achieved through a simple blood test, called a lipid profile, with your primary care physician. Cholesterol levels should be measured at least once every five years in people over age 20. For those found to have high cholesterol, there are plenty of ways to manage it, often through medication and lifestyle changes."

While cholesterol itself is a harmless, fatty substance created and used by the body, it becomes problematic when it occurs in excess and accumulates on the artery walls, making it difficult for blood to circulate properly. This accumulation is often referred to as "hardening of the arteries." When cholesterol builds up in an artery that goes to the heart, it can cause a heart attack. Similarly, when it builds up in an artery that feeds the brain, it can cause a

Two types of cholesterol exist – high-density lipoprotein (HDL) and low-density lipoprotein (LDL). In treating high cholesterol, the goal is to lower LDL or "bad cholesterol," which is the type of cholesterol that moves from the liver to the rest of the body. Having high high-density lipoprotein (HDL), on the other hand, actually decreases the risk of adverse health effects, because it carries cholesterol back to the liver to be removed from the

Generally, the higher the patient's LDL, along with the number of other risk factors they have, the greater the chance of developing heart disease or experiencing a heart attack or stroke.

High blood cholesterol levels are often the result of a combination of factors, including the consumption of foods high in saturated fat, lack of regular physical activity, smoking, diabetes, obesity and hereditary factors. Cholesterol levels also tend to rise with age, particularly for women after menopause.

Monitoring cholesterol levels is a key part of staying healthy. Leading up to a cholesterol screening blood test, patients typically must fast for nine to 12 hours. taking into account personal risk factors of each patient in order to determine the best strategy to lower patient risk, which may or may not include medi-

Prescription medications such as statins, bile acid sequestrants, nicotinic acid, fibric acids, and cholesterol absorption inhibitors may be prescribed. Or, therapeutic lifestyle changes alone or in conjunction with medication may be recommended. Lifestyle changes include switching to a cholesterol-lowering diet, increasing physical activity, managing weight and quitting smoking.

"It's certainly in a patient's best interest to call their primary care physician today to schedule a cholesterol screening," said Dr. Williams. "Because high cholesterol presents no signs or symptoms, it's an appointment that may save a life."

 In High-Need National Forests Join Arbor Day Foundation in

July and 10 trees will be planted

Forests across America are a prized natural resource, and anyone can help plant trees in these vital areas by joining the Arbor

Day Foundation this month. Through the Replanting Our National Forests campaign, the Arbor Day Foundation will honor each new member who joins in July by planting 10 trees in forests that have been devastated by wildfires, insects, and disease.

The cost for joining the Arbor Day Foundation is a $10 donation.

America's national forests face enormous challenges, including unprecedented wildfires that have left a backlog of more than 1 million acres in need of replanting. The Foundation has worked with the United States Forest Service for more than 25 years to plant trees in high-need forests. Our national forests provide habitat for wildlife, keep the air clean, and help ensure safe drinking water for more than 180 million

Americans. "Keeping our forests healthy is vital to the health of people and the entire planet," said Matt Harris, chief executive of the Arbor Day Foundation. "By planting trees in our national forests, we will preserve precious natural resources and the benefits they provide for generations to come."

Students at Kentucky's public high schools can take advantage of a new dual credit scholarship during the 2016-2017 school year. This program was initially announced by Gov. Bevin and Education and Workforce Development Secretary Hal Heiner on June 1.

Dual credit allows students to earn high school and college credit for passing classes offered by colleges.

The new scholarship provides $52 per credit hour for up to two dual credit classes taken at a Kentucky college during the school year. That is the highest rate participating colleges can charge for classes under the program. A student can use the scholarship for no more than nine credit hours.

Students can use the scholarship for general college classes and for career and technical courses. Career and technical courses must be in a state-approved pathway the leads to a credential recognized by an industry.

To be eligible for the scholarship, a student must be a Kentucky resident. Eligible students must also complete a 30-minute college success counseling session available through their high schools.

Proper handling helps fish thrive after summertime catch and release

Proper handling helps fish thrive after summertime catch and release

Summer is arguably the most popular time to fish as muggy, hot days push people to the water for relief and relaxation.

Many anglers, especially those who seek game fish such as black bass, trout or striped bass, release their

"Catch and release works and is a good thing," said Dave Dreves, assistant director of fisheries for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "But, if you don't handle the fish properly, your good intentions can be reversed." Fish have a protective slime coat that acts as part of their immune system.

Protecting this slime coat is of the utmost importance when handling fish. "Fish are surrounded by pathogens all of their lives in the water they inhabit," Dreves said. "The slime coat is their protection."

A fish gripper is an essential tool for handling fish with ease and doesn't harm them. They provide exceptional control of the fish by latching on to its lower lip. "They are a great thing, especially on toothy fish such as walleye, for getting hooks out of fish without touching them," Dreves said. "They also keep people from squeezing a fish too hard which can damage internal organs."

Some models with calibrated scales cost a pretty penny, but many on the market simply hold the fish and cost less than $20, with some less than $10.

"These devices keep people from handling a fish with a towel," Dreves said. "I can't imagine anything much worse you can do to a fish than using a towel to hold them. You must protect, not remove, the slime

If you must handle a fish with your hands, wet them first. Dry human skin strips off the fish's slime coat. "Also, if you plan to measure its length, wet the measuring board before placing "Make sure to keep the measuring board out of the sun. They can get really hot." Secure the fish when landing it. Do not allow the fish to flop around on the bank or in the bottom of a boat. This not only removes the protective slime coat, but may cause injuries.

Anglers who catch a big largemouth bass or hybrid striped bass usually want a photo to commemorate the event. "You see these anglers on fishing shows sometimes hold their fish out of the water for way too long when talking to the camera," Dreves said. "If I am fumbling around for a fish scale or a camera, I either put the fish back in the water while I hold it or I drop it in the livewell. A fish out of water can't breathe."

Livewells work great for keeping fish alive, but in summer they can be a potentially lethal environment for fish if proper procedures are not followed.

"Warmer water holds less dissolved oxygen," Dreves said. "Because of the heat and the lower levels of dissolved oxygen, summer is a highly stressful time on fish in a livewell.'

Dreves explained the most important thing is to cool the water first after pumping it in from the lake. Two frozen 1/2-gallon jugs of water will cool a 30-gallon livewell about 10 degrees for roughly three hours.

"Then, you need to recirculate the water in the livewell to avoid pulling hot lake water back into the livewell," he said. "You also don't want to cool it more than 10 degrees."

Enter "Keeping Your Bass Alive" in the search box in the top right corner of the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife's homepage at www.fw.ky.gov for complete details on proper livewell procedures for summer bass tournaments. "Plus, if you plan to keep fish to eat, it is much better to place those fish in a cooler with ice right away than in a hot livewell," Dreves said. Light tackle is fun and produces a lot of fish. But, ultralight rods and 4-pound line are not the best choices for the stressful times of summer if you plan to release the fish. "Some say light tackle is more sporting, but getting the fish in hand as quickly as possible is best for the fish's health in summer. Long battles are not good for them when it is hot.'

Employing catch and release helps ensure good fishing for future generations, but sloppy techniques can cancel out the benefit

All of the injuries were called minor and each person transported to the hospital was treated and released.

MVFD Chief Adam Bales said part of the reason for the quick and efficient response was thanks to the citizens of Rockcastle County. "Without the support of the community, we wouldn't have the UTVs and med kits available to help with off road rescue like this," he said.

The annual event is cosponsored by the City of Mount Vernon, the Rockcastle County Fiscal Court and the Rockcastle Tourist Commission.

(for a total of $30,000) to hold the event. "It is a wonderful event for people of our county and it brings in tourists also. I've been told this was the biggest crowd we have had and it's continuing to grow each year."

The fireworks show was expected to last about 30 minutes but stopped after the accident.

Bentley Cromer, organizer of the event, said it was a freak accident. "This company has always done our show and they are very reputable. We did everything right and the distance was good. There was just no way to predict that kind of thing," said Cromer.

According to Cromer, he is working closely with the three sponsors to look at ways to prevent such an event in the future. "One of the things we may do is park trailers and vehicles to provide a better barrier between the shells and the patrons," he said.

Cromer said the company has offered to credit the sponsors for the unused fireworks or include them in next year's show.

"I know people were disappointed in the fireworks show but we just hope they understand that we needed to stop after the accident," said Cromer. "It had our emergency crews tied up and we just couldn't continue the show after that fluke accident."

Cromer also commended all fire departments and police for the quick response.

Bryant said other than the accident, the day was a huge success. "It was a great day for everyone and was a success. Other than this fluke accident, it was a good day for 8 to 10,000 people," he said.

Bryant also said he is planning to meet with the county and the tourist commission to review the event and determine if there needs to be additional safety measures implemented for future events to prevent accidents.

According to officials, The Kentucky State Fire Marshall's office is currently investigating the incident and will be assisted by local EMS workers.

Most college-bound students qualify for financial aid to help pay for their education, such as federal and state grants, scholarships and Federal Stafford and PLUS Loans. In addition, local scholarships are often available, according to the Kentucky

Higher Education Assistance Authority (KHEAA). A parent can also borrow a federal loan to help pay their child's college costs.

Those programs make it easier to pay for college. However, they may not cover all the costs. When that happens, many people turn to private student loans, also called alternative loans.

The interest rates on private loans largely depend on the borrower's credit rating. So some students and parents may have to pay higher interest rates than they would on federal student loans. In addition, many lenders require students to have a cosigner, and some require the college to certify that the student needs the

Campbellsville University honors 199 teachers in Kentucky

Submitted by coordinating director, and

news writer

"I hope you are proud of yourselves and your accomplishments. Today is a day to celebrate you!"

Rhonda Sims, associate commissioner of the Kentucky Department of Education, told the 199 teachers from 70 school districts throughout Kentucky honored by Campbellsville University, teaching is an important job, a hard job and a challenging job.

Sims, a 1984
Campbellsville College graduate, was the guest speaker at the 30th Annual Excellence in Teaching
Awards Ceremony Saturday, May 21 at the Ransdell Chapel on the
Campbellsville University campus.

Sims urged teachers to not say "I'm just a teacher" when asked what they do. She told them to say: "'I inspire,' 'I innovate,' 'I motivate,' 'I engage,' 'I challenge' or 'I nurture children."

She told the honorees they prepare the next generation to lead, think and solve problems.

"You can love the subject matter you are teaching, but without care, concern and compassion for your students, you may be a good teacher, but you will never be a great teacher," Sims said.

Sims taught before going into administration with the Kentucky Department of Education, and said, "Teaching ignited a fire within me that I still feel when I go to work each day."

After playing school with dolls when she was a little girl, pretending they were students, she said, "When I got into the classroom with real students, I discovered that teaching was not only my calling, but also my passion," she said.

"You wouldn't be here today if you didn't have that passion for your students and share that love of learning."

Dr. Shane Garrison, dean of online education, made a special announcement in which Campbellsville University will be offering a $1,000 scholarship to each award recipient to be used toward any online master's degree program at Campbellsville University for a total of nearly $200,000.

In addition, Campbellsville University will allow this scholarship offer to be shared with others. Award recipients can recommend a fellow teacher, colleague, family member or friend for a $1,000 "Pay It Forward" scholarship. He said principals and superintendents of honored teachers can also recommend someone for the scholarship.

The deadline to apply for the scholarship is July 29, and students must begin their academic coursework either in August or October of this year. More information can be found at online.campbellsville.edu/ excellenceinteaching.

Dr. Donna Hedgepath, vice president for academic affairs; Dr. Beverly Ennis, dean of the School of Education and Garrison presented the certificates to the teachers before a luncheon in Winters Dining Hall. Garrison also gave the invocation.

Hedgepath, who has taught in the public school system, told the teachers to "Enjoy the day; it's about you."

Dr. Beverly Ennis, dean of the College of Education, said, "Thank you for your service to children." She told of the history of Campbellsville University, and said Campbellsville University is the most diverse private college in Kentucky and is in the top 20 lowest debt college in the United States.

Dr. John Chowning, executive assistant to the president of Campbellsville University for government, community and constituent relations, introduced Sims and also read the names of the honorees.

At this 30th annual program, CU recognized 199 teachers from 70 school districts. A total of 3,390 teachers have been recognized for their teaching excellence throughout the years.

The Excellence in Teaching Awards program is in partnership with Lexington's CBS-affiliate, WKYT-TV.

The Excellence in Teaching Award recipients include the following with their superintended listed first:

Rockcastle County Schools – David Pensol, superintendent; Rita Shaffer, Brodhead Elementary School; Kimberly Holcomb, Rockcastle County Middle School; and Mary Adams, Rockcastle County High School.

Shaffer is a kindergarten teacher at Brodhead Elementary School where she has taught since 1988.

She graduated from

An encouraging word:

Look Beyond The Surface By Howard Coop

Many years ago the community in eastern Kentucky in which I lived was, to use an old country phrase, "taken by storm." A young man who had grown up in that community as an ordinary kid, after some time away, returned home, and he made a splash. He was a handsome young man, sharply dressed, pleasantly mannered, and driving a sporty automobile. He caught the attention of everyone, and wherever he went he attracted a crowd. For a few days, that young man was "the talk of the town."

After a few weeks at home, the young man left the community. Then, one day, news came that shocked everyone. It was unbelievable news. The young man was in prison in an adjoining state. He and a friend had gotten into a fight, and he had killed his friend. He was waiting to be tried for murder. The people in his hometown were stunned.

A person is more than the flashy clothes that are worn, the artificial smile that may be on the face, or the eye-catching automobile that is driven. Beneath the outer trappings, the real person is the inner being, that is, what is in the

Sunday afternoon, May 11, 1969, is unforgettable for me. I was resting when the doorbell rang. A man, very ordinary looking that I had never seen before, was standing at my door. I invited him in, and he took a seat. Then he introduced himself, and for the rest of that afternoon, I had an unusual opportunity and the high privilege of talking with Dr. Frank C. Laubach, a world-known author, outstanding missionary, and one of the great saints of the twen-

A long time ago it was said, "Stop judging by mere appearances, and make a right judgment." First appearances can be, and often are, deceiving, for things are not always what they seem to be. Therefore, before making a judgment, one must look beyond the surface. Whoever said, "under the old coat here may be a good heart" was right.

Bible Talk

Today we hear a lot about homosexuals demanding their "rights" and even churches promoting such. Let us consider the "Homosexual Bill of Rights" in the Scriptures.

- They have a right to hear the blessed gospel of Jesus Christ, Mark 16:15-16, 1Cor.6:9-10; Luke 24:47, Matt.28:19.
- 2. They have a right to know that their conduct is sinful before God, 1 Cor.6:9-10; Romans 1:26-27; I Timothy1:10.
- They have a right to know that God does not regard homosexuality and/or lesbianism as an "alternative life style," Hebrews13:4; Romans 1:26-27.
- 4. They have a right to know that they will suffer in their own bodies & personalities the consequences of their sin, Romans 1:26-27.
- 5. They have a right to know that the Bible calls them "Dogs," Deut.23:17-18; Rev.
- 6. They have a right to know that their companion (husband/wife) has a God ordained right to put them away because of their sin, Matt.19:9; Jude 7; Genesis 19:4-5.
- 7. They have a right to repent or turn from their sin and turn to the Lord, Luke 24:47; Acts 2:38; 1 Corinthians 6:9-11.
- 8. They have a right to know that homosexuality is not a disease, nor an alternative lifestyle, but a sinful way of life that can be changed by the gospel of Christ, 1Cor.6:9-11.
- 9. They have a right to know that they were not born homosexuals, but through lust have fell into this lifestyle, and changed "the natural use into that which is against nature." Romans 1:26-27.
- 10. They have a right to be accepted and forgiven by the love of God, when they repent and enter the body of Christ, 1 Cor. 6:9-11; 2 Cor. 2:7-11; John 3:16. We invite you to worship with us at the Providence church of Christ. 758-8524

For kids 1 to 4 years of age

Drowning #1 cause for unintentional injury death

Summer is here, which means millions of people hit the pools, beaches and lakes to cool off and take in the sun. The nation's emergency physicians strongly advise all parents and guardians to get their children familiar with water - specifically teaching them to swim safely as early as possible.

"It only takes a few seconds and a few inches of water for a child to drown," said Dr. Jay Kaplan, president of the American College of Emergency Physicians. "While it's impossible to predict and prevent every scenario, you can take steps to protect kids, stay safe and still enjoy the water."

Facts about Drowning

Drowning is the leading cause of unintentional injury death among children between 1 and 4 years of age, with almost 400 cases reported in 2014, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Young children aren't the only ones affected. Every day about ten people die from unintentional drowning. Overall, it ranks fifth for unintentional injury death in the United States. More than 50 percent of drowning victims who are treated at emergency departments require extended hospitalization or long-term care.

Several factors can contribute to a person drowning and obviously not all of them can be controlled. However, steps can be taken to keep a child and even an adult safe as possible when near or in the water.

Ways to Stay Safe

• Supervise Young Children - They must be watched at all times when near water. It can take only a matter of seconds for a child to accidentally drown when an adult turns away.

• Learn to Swim - Formal swim lessons can protect people, especially young children from drowning.

• Learn CPR - It can take paramedics several minutes to arrive. Having CPR skills often times can mean the difference between life and death or permanent brain damage.

• Use the Buddy System
- Never swim alone. Always be with someone. Swim in areas that have lifeguards on duty if possible.

• Don't Drink and Swim
- Drinking alcohol while on a boat or swimming in the water can severely impair a person's judgment and cognitive skills. Also, never drink alcohol while supervising children.

• Use Life Jackets - When on a boat, make sure the number of (Coast Guard approved) life jackets match the number of passengers on the boat and that they are easily accessible in case of emergency. Young children should have a life vest on at all times in a boat, or in the water. Potentially half of all boating deaths might be prevented with the use of life jackets.

• Air-Filled or Foam Toys Not Safety Devices - These toys are not substitutes for life jackets and are not designed to keep swimmers safe.

• Be Aware of Weather Conditions - If strong winds or heavy thunderstorms and lightning roll in, get out of the water and seek shelter immediately.

• Understand Waves and Rip Currents - If on the beach, watch for dangerous waves and rip currents. If caught in a rip current, swim parallel to the shore. Once free of the current, swim toward the shore.

• Don't Overestimate Your Swimming Ability -Everyone has limits, even the most experienced of swimmers.

Storm damage reported across county

By: Mike French

Rockcastle County is among many in Kentucky to suffer storm damage since the beginning of

According to David Colson, Director of Rockcastle County Emergency Management, over seven inches of rain has fallen in the county in the first eight days of July.

"It's very abnormal to have that much rain in eight days," said Colson. "One area of the county had over three inches in 30 minutes. That's very unusual "

There was also an EF-1 tornado in Brodhead as reported last week.

According to Colson, there have also been numerous reports of straight line wind damage and trees damaged or broken.

"County crews have been out most of the month repairing road damage and cutting tree limbs out of the highway. Luckily the storms stopped for a few days and we got caught up," he

Members also heard a report from Corey Craig concerning the sewer and water line at the Rockcastle Business Park South.

Craig told members the sewer line is 100% complete and approved and that the water line is very near completion as well. Craig said he expects the water line to be finished this week if weather permits.

The board also heard from County Judge/Executive Doug Bishop concerning the possible lease of the Anchor Packaging Building.

Bishop told the board that clients are still "very interested" in leasing the property from the county.

"They have responded very positively and show lots of interest. It is still a very promising possibility, We are excited about it," he

Aces Over

By Mike French

There is a small building made from stone and sitting out in the country near Speedwell, Kentucky called Viney Fork Baptist Church.

Every Sunday morning of my childhood, I sat on those old oak benches and tried my best to stay quiet.

Mom usually had a piece of candy for me to suck on so that I would sit still for that hour.

The old building had a really high ceiling but I swear when the whole congregation stood and sang When the Roll is Called Up Yonder, we filled that building with music.

Special singers would come and visit us from time to time and that kept my attention much better than the preaching when I was wooden floors creaked as you walked in that building and even as the preacher walked around the pulpit while he was preach-

Sometimes, as soon as the preaching was coming to an end, all the women would be "sneaking" out making the floors creak as the preacher told everyone to bow their head and close their eyes.

He would always ask if anyone needed to come down front and be saved or just be prayed over.

As soon as he had one of the deacons say the final prayer, we would all head outside to discover that the women who had snuck out had put together a potluck lunch on tables in the church

I know that saying "the women put together the meal," is sexist these days, but that's just what happened at this church in those

Hardly anyone would go home. Most everyone who filled the old church house would stay and eat and even then most hung around after the food was gone.

I could usually hear the clanging of horseshoes where the men (yes, just the men) had started a game with full bellies.

Luckily for me, the church sits on a hill. A pretty steep bank. That was great for a 7-year-old to roll down over and over.

We kids would pretend we were cowboys and Indians (I know...Native Americans) and use that hill to sneak up and shoot at each other with our capguns (yes, I said guns).

The talk in those days was about some president getting shot but at that age, I didn't even know who they meant. Believe it or not though, I do remember them blaming some fellow named Oswald and not some rifle, but I digress.

By the end of the afternoon, my church clothes were usually covered in grass stains and mom would make me take them off and she'd scrub on them with lve soap.

Memories that helped make me who I am.

But this Sunday morning I found myself on that old country back road right at church time and I saw the steeple as I got closer.

But as I passed the old rock building, there were three cars there. The church yard was quiet and no tables were set up. No children were playing and no horseshoes clanging..

There was no laughter or chatter or men leaned against their cars talking about current events.

The place was kept up very nicely. Someone obviously still cares a lot for the old church house.

But it appears that without the large screen, high-

Dear Journal,

1940's Music

While listening to the Sirius XM radio in my Ford Explorer, I stumbled upon a station called 40's Junction. It is located on channel 73 and plays big bands, swing, and hit parade music from 1936 to 1949.

When I was about five, the radio belonging to my mother (Bee) was located on top of the refrigerator in the kitchen. She loved to listen to artists like Perry Como, Frank Sinatra, Benny Goodman, Bing Crosby, and even a comeback of Al Jolson. She also tuned into the local and national news, usually broadcast by Lowell Thomas. He was the most popular nightly-news commentator on national radio at the time.

As such a young child, I often played in the kitchen while my mother was preparing our meals. As you may recall my mentioning before, I distinctly remember lining up the kitchen chairs in a row as I pretended to be a bus driver, a large lid from one of my mother's cooking pans serving as my steering wheel. Bee listened to the radio while I played "under her

At this time in my life, my brother (Al) was fifteen and also loved the music of the time. I remember him listening to Al Jolson and to Benny Goodman. I am sure that he had many other favorite artists, but the specifics of my memory are limited to those two. Al must have loved the big band sounds of Goodman because he, too, took up the clarinet in the high school band at Mt. Vernon. I also remember Al listening to 78 rpm records in the living room of our small house.

Al joined the band when he was in the fourth grade and remained in the band until he graduated in 1952. Within a few years, after graduation from college, he became the high school's band director and music teacher. By that time, I was in the sixth grade.

The backdrop of the development of the music so loved by Al's generation actually had its beginnings with the stock market crash of 1929 and the beginning of the Great Depression, which in turn caused the music market to essentially dry up. By the middle to the end of the 1930's, the turnaround of the music industry approached, and the era of the big band swing began. By the 1940's, Dixieland jazz artists established their own unique style. Some of the most notable jazz artists of the 1940's include: Ella Fitzgerald, Billy Holiday, Louis Armstrong, and Nat King Cole.

received Robinson's country ham from Jimmy Robinson, there in East Bernstadt, just after Thanksgiving last year. Loretta had planned to fix it for Christmas dinner but that was before our son. Christopher, announced that he had come into a pre-cooked Virginia ham, ready to slice, and offered to contribute it to the cause.

Now, as far as I am concerned, a smoked Virginia ham is slightly better than no ham at all and not in the same league as a properly cured country ham, but I'm also the first to concede that the pre-cooked ones require several days and several hours less laborthan their properly prepared country cousins. I emailed Jimmy to inquire about how long we could wait to cook the one we'd gotten from him and told him we had Easter in mind. He advised that we keep in the cheesecloth it came in and hang it somewhere that bugs couldn't get to it and it might be even better than it already was.

Loretta decided that the only bug free place in our house in which she had any confidence was the spare refrigerator we keep going in the utility room. Believe me when I tell you that if you have two refrigerators you will soon discover tha they are both crammed ful and that you will rapidly ac quire more leftovers than a single family can possibly put to use. On the other hand, if you have a spare ham lying around, you wil discover that the spare fridge makes way more sense than it used to.

However, when Easter rolled around, there was high demand for turkey among kids and grandkids and nobody seemed in the mood for country ham. We checked on it. Took it ou of the box, unwrapped the cheese cloth and decided that it looked as good as i ever had, if not better That's when my wife an nounced that we never prepared a big meal for Memorial Day and that several or our offspring had birthdays coming up in June if Memorial Day didn't work out for cooking ham.

So, Memorial Day came and went, as did numerous birthdays, all devoid or country ham and before we knew what was going on the Fourth of July was upor us. At which point I declared that I couldn't think of anything that sounded more patriotic than the hind leg of a long-dead hog.

We actually let the holiday get past before Loretta

Yards to Paradise

By Max Phelps A Spot to Relax

Relaxing sounds pretty good to most of us. Whether yours has been a hard day, or you're retired, relaxing appeals to you probably. I have a few ideas that might help facilitate relaxation at your place.

A comfortable seat is probably No. 1 when it comes to relaxing. Just as a comfortable bed is to sleep-

A recliner in a den or on a back porch might be your spot. I love an Adirondack chair in the shade of a tree or on the patio on a cloudy day. For some, it would be a hot tub or a hammock. The old folks had a rocking chair on the porch they would sit in at dusk.

Removing yourself from annoying sounds and distractions is a big part of it, if you are seeking to relax. Watching politics and tackled the ham after being inspired by the invitation to a post-4th party/potluck dinner that was being thrown by some close friends.

Fixing the ham, for Loretta, is a three-day effort that involves much soaking, scrubbing, trimming and sawing before the ham even gets close to the big bluespeckled enamel canner where it simmers in her special brew for several hours before hitting the oven for a spell. Such things as baking soda, vinegar, brown sugar and soda pop are involved as well as numerous knives and a reciprocating saw designed for use in the home construction business.

The end result is stuff of which gastronomic dreams are made and our Christmas-in-July ham did not disappoint.

I'm not sure whether it has to do with Jimmy Robinson getting better and better at selecting the hams he puts on the market, whether it was the extra 7 months of aging or whether my wife just keeps improving her preparation techniques. I suspect it was a combination of all three, but I can tell you, for sure, that this was, hands-down, the best country ham I've ever

It's bad enough to have one elusive dog to worry about, but we have two. During the weekend of the 4th, we looked at the local animal shelter website to see a small black mixed breed elderly female dog that had been brought to the shelter by a man who had found it wandering his neighborhood. As it turns out, it has cataracts and can hardly see. Stanley and I decided we would give it a good home to spend her last days and thought we would pick her up on July 5th. I had thought of a name, Laura, as the 5th was Stanley's mother's birthday and Ruth because I've been studying the book of Ruth for about a week.

Well, as fate would have it, she got away from the shelter probably on Saturday the 2nd. We've been calling the shelter and searching the neighborhood without success, although some have seen her. I fear that if she isn't found soon, if not already, she will meet her tragic end. It would be such a tragedy for such an elderly, almost blind little dog to meet her demise in starving or being a meal for a wild animal. I'm almost sick with worry about these two little ones.

However, in my search for Laura Ruth. I saw a monument at the shelter entrance I'd never seen before. It made me feel a little better. It read, "A righteous man careth for the life of his animals. Proverbs 12:10".

CAPRESE PASTA SALAD

This makes a lot of salad, but it also keeps well in the refrigerator. In the summertime, I like to keep some made so we can have a quick, easy, and cool meal (or snack). 1 package (16 ounce) mini bow tie pasta

2 cups grape tomatoes, halved

7 ounces fresh mozzarella cheese, cubed

1 medium sweet yellow pepper, chopped 1 small red onion, chopped 1/2 cup pickled banana pepper rings, chopped

1 can (3.8 ounce) sliced ripe olives, drained 1/2 cup fresh basil leaves, thinly sliced

DRESSING:

1 cup red wine vinegar 1 cup olive oil

1 garlic clove, minced 1 teaspoon salt

1/2 teaspoon pepper

1/4 teaspoon dried basil Cook pasta according to package directions; drain and rinse in cold water. In a large bowl, combine pasta, tomatoes, cheese, yellow pepper, onion, pepper rings, olives, and

LAYER SALAD

Uncle Paul's wife June was the first to bring this salad to our holiday and Sunday meals. It has certainly withstood the test of time as it is still one of our favorites.

1 medium head lettuce, shredded

1 sweet onion, chopped 1 cup celery, chopped (optional)

1 package (about 16 ounce) frozen green peas, thawed and drained

5 hard-boiled eggs, chopped 8 strips bacon, cooked

crisp and crumbled 1 and 1/2 cups Miracle Whip® or mayonnaise, spread evenly over bacon

2 cups Cheddar cheese, shredded

Layer ingredients in order given in a 9 x 13 glass dish. Do no toss. Refrigerate several hours or overnight before serving.

NOTE: Some of the family likes to thin the Miracle Whip ® out a little bit by mixing it with 2 tablespoons milk and 1 teaspoon sugar. Adjust the amount of Miracle Whip® to your taste.

I am glad that my mother and brother had such interests in music at a time when I was soaking it all up. Muic of many forms played an important role in my high school and college days, and even today it is a daily part of my life. Whenever I hear songs, or even snippets of tunes, from those days, it naturally takes me back to growing up in Mt. Vernon. Remembering those early days of music in my childhood home always makes me smile.

attention—whatever it is, it takes energy to focus on it.

Replacing irritating sounds, whether it be cars passing, commercials blareing or just other family members playing or completing some chores, with attractive and relaxing sounds can be really helpful. Wind chimes in a breeze, especially if they are tuned well, are nice. Wind blowing through the needles of a big pine tree offer a special sound. It may have more to do with why us guys like hunting in in the woods when you ladies thought we just wanted out of earshot for awhile. Relaxing sounds transport your mind to another world it

One of my favorites is the sound of a waterfall. A big one, like Cumberland Falls near Corbin, Kentucky, to the little ones in a nook of the backyard—the sound of falling water is universally relaxing. A little fountain tucked into a secluded spot, a koi pond, or the popular "pondless" waterfall that offers the sounds and benefits without any upkeep. (And if you can't afford a waterfall, how about dialing the sounds in via your laptop or iPad? There are waterfalls, rainstorms, Tibetan music or whatever your heart desires for free. Try it, and turn up the speakers for awhile as the rain pelts the imaginary roof or the ocean waves roll

Back to your yard. Hedges, fences, trees strategically planted to block a bad view or to enhance a good one, decks and patios, a sitting place in a private nook or under a big tree there surely is a spot you can find to relax. But, if there isn't, then I hope you are stirred to create such a spot.

To my thinking there is not much value to having a yard if you never spend any time in it. It just becomes something to mow every week during warm weather. At least try a fruit tree or a blueberry bush somewhere.

Finding (or planting) that shade tree, constructing (hiring someone unless you possess construction skills) a deck or patio, putting in an outdoor kitchen (or at least something to grill a burger on), creating some running water for the birds and butterflies, and growing some flowers for them to enjoy nectar or seeds from, are all ways to obtain more from your yard. Carefully choosing shrubs and perennial flowers that need little attention and return year after year will keep it enjoyable, rather than a chore to be done that hinders the relaxation we are aiming for. Try to find or create the ideal spot to relax and refresh, it'll make life more enjoyable.

STRAWBERRY CAKE For most of my young life, Mum bought my birthday cake from Burke's Bakery in Danville, Kentucky. After we moved away from Danville, I started asking Mum to fix this cake as my birthday cake. It remains my favorite cake.

1 box white cake mix 1 box (10 ounce) frozen strawberries, thawed 1/2 cup vegetable oil

1/2 cup water 2 eggs

1 box (3 ounce) strawberry 1 teaspoon vanilla

Preheat oven to 350°. Pour cake mix in large bowl. Chop strawberries, measure out 3/4 cup, add to cake mix along with oil and water; mix well. Set aside remaining strawberries to use in frosting. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each. Add dry Jello® and vanilla; beat well. Pour into greased and floured 13 x 9 cake pan. Bake about 40 minutes at 350°. Cool. FROSTING:

1 teaspoon vanilla 1 box (1 pound) powdered

1 stick butter, room tem-

Combine confectionery sugar, butter and remaining strawberries in mixing bowl until well blended. Spread over warm cake.

1 cup sugar, divided 4 boxes (8 ounces each) cream cheese, softened 1/2 cup blueberry preserves

Grated zest from 1 lemon 1 package (16 ounce) fresh or frozen blueberries (thaw and drain if using frozen) 1 tub Cool Whip®

Mix crumbs, margarine, and 1/4 cup sugar; press firmly onto bottom of 9 x 13 pan. Refrigerate while preparing filling. Beat cheese and remaining 3/4 cup sugar in large bowl with electric mixer on medium speed until well blended. Add preserves and lemon zest, mix until blended. Stir in blueberries. Gently stir in whipping topping. Spoon into crust; cover. Refrigerate at least 4 hours.

Back-to-school tips when you're on a budget

(StatePoint) Between new clothes and new school supplies, back-toschool season can put a strain on household bud-

In 2015, families planned to spend $630 on back-to-school items, according to the National Retail Federation, and this year's numbers are also expected to be pricey. With a little planning, your family can get the most out of your school shopping budget -- by taking advantage of sales, comparison shopping, buying in bulk and simply by making sure you don't buy things you already own.

Here are some smart ways families can reduce costs as students head back to class this fall.

End-of-Season Sales Take advantage of endof-season sales to stock up. This concept may not help you this fall, but it's a great habit to adopt now for long-term savings. You can stock up on summer clothes now and great fall items once the weather gets chillier. Stores will be offering deep discounts and clearance prices on items that eventually will come in handy for next back-toschool season. Remember to take into account that kids grow quickly!

Add it Up

Bigger ticket school supply items can cost you a pretty penny if you don't comparison shop.

For example, required tools like a high-quality graphing calculator can come with a price tag of $75 or more! Get more for your money with an affordable model, such as Casio's fx-9750GII, which retails for under $50. It offers useful features like a high resolution screen and compatibility with a personal computer. It is also permitted to be used in such major tests as the ACT and the SAT. More information about calculators can be found at CasioEducation.com.

Take Stock and Buy in Bulk

Don't buy things you already own, and take advantage of bulk discounts for the stuff you need! Before making your shopping list take stock of what school supplies you already have in your closets -- and your child's backpack -- from the last school year. From scissors to folders to unused or partially used notebooks, you may already have many things your kids need for the year ahead.

For those necessities that kids will need all year long -- such as tape, paper, pens, pencils, markers and more take advantage of bulk sales at discount stores and online retailers. Buying more now can save you cash in the months

Go Green

Brown bags, plastic baggies and plastic silverware are small expenses that add up quickly. Instead, opt for reusable lunch container alternatives and a one-time expense. It's not only good for the planet, but kids will get on board if you let them pick items that speak to their sense of style. You'll also save yourself trips to the store!

Don't let back-toschool make a hefty dent in your wallet. At the store, take advantage of great deals and also consider different ways of eliminating perennial expenses.

Five questions with new Ruffed Grouse and Wild Turkey program coordinator

Zak Danks was homesick and uncertain about what career path he wanted to pursue after his freshman year at the University of Kentucky. The picture soon came into focus through his involvement with his local National Wild Turkey Federation (NWTF) chapter and after meeting a wildlife biologist employed by the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

The Logan County native changed his major and vigorously pursued a career as a wildlife biologist. His educational background and real-world experience laid the groundwork for him to take a new role with Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife earlier this year.

Danks now heads the Ruffed Grouse and Wild Turkey programs as a wildlife coordinator with the department. Prior to that, he spent five years as the eastern Kentucky liaison between Kentucky Fish and Wildlife and the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) promoting land conservation and habitat improvement on private lands through federal Farm Bill programs. He also previously worked as a Farm Bill biologist and private lands biologist

Much of his focus since starting his new job has been on developing a long-range plan to restore the ruffed grouse population in Kentucky. A draft of the "Ruffed Grouse and Young Forest Initiative" is available for public review and comment on the department's website at fw.ky.gov through Friday, India?

Danks, 34, recently sat down to discuss his new role and the plan.

Q: How has your previous experience helped prepare you for this new chapter in your career?

Danks: "My previous work has been totally about cooperative partnerships, especially with private landowners. They're the hardest group to influence because they are motivated by many different factors. Understanding them, working with them, helping them. All those things are truly important. That said, we've got to work on public lands as well, and that means partnering with other agencies. Grouse management is going to be very difficult. If we don't get the word out, we're just going to keep doing what we've been doing, which is not enough."

Q: How did we get to the point that something needs to be done for grouse in Kentucky?

Danks: Grouse populations in Appalachia have the ability to survive at low levels even when the forest is older and there's not a lot of prime grouse habitat. That's a good thing. They're persistent. They're probably locally abundant in places that happen to have quite a bit of proper-age cover, but there's not that much of it. We know from U.S. Forest Service inventory data that there is just a declining amount of young forest cover overall, but we also know that certain little pockets of suitable cover probably exist. We get reports of hunters having good luck. What's going to be critical moving forward is you've got this public perception of what is the grouse population. That's difficult to say. Over all of east Kentucky, how in the world do we come up with a population figure? What is comprehensible are these local populations. That's sort of what we're getting at with our hope to take a focal area approach. On a smaller scale we can target work, hope to see a local grouse response and then build on that and get surrounding private landowners to manage their forest in a way that's beneficial for grouse and hopefully have bigger impacts."

Q: In your opinion, what makes the ruffed grouse special or unique?

Danks: "Grouse are extremely challenging to hunt. The elusiveness, the fact that they inhabit the thickest, nastiest cover; it's not for the faint of heart. It's physically demanding. That's part of what makes it special. As a biologist, what makes it special is its close tie to habitat. Grouse, they exist and can persist in that eastern forest just as they would have historically. They exploited and depended on young forest that would have been created by Native Americans or natural disturbances. But those habitats that they exploit are so ephemeral in nature. Fast forward the past century when we cut the forest, it regrew and grouse were abundant. Their numbers have declined because the forest has aged. It's clear what the problem is, but the challenges associated with managing it are real."

Q: As a graduate student at the State University of New York's (S.U.N.Y) College of Environmental Science and Forestry at Syracuse, you studied moose in Maine. What parallels can be drawn between moose and grouse and how both utilize the forest?

Danks: "Moose and their habitat needs being similar to the kinds of things I'm working with now with grouse really helped me to see the importance of forest management as a tool for wildlife management. Moose eat a lot and there's a lot of forage in cut-over forest stands. That regenerating forest provides a lot of food. That kind of tie-in there to forest management opened my eyes because there's another species up there -- the New England cottontail -- that has reached critical status. They depend on the same kind of habitat. I went on my first grouse and woodcock hunts up there. So, I began to see the tie and the specific value of young forest habitat in addition to older growth. What people may not realize or fail to think about is what food is available for wildlife. Yes, big trees make acorns or beech nuts, but in some cases that may be all. That's a periodic resource. You need cover and a lot of times in those older forests there's not a lot of cover, not a lot of forage."

Q: What would it mean to you to see this plan succeed?

Danks: "It will be extremely rewarding, no doubt. The thing about grouse, it's going to take time. The first 10 years is just getting your foot in the door. True success is decades down the road. If we are able to make headway, we most certainly would make headway for a lot of other species. I talk about that in the plan and I'm dead serious about it. What helped cement my decision when I decided to go for this job was the potential to help other animals as well -- from deer and turkey to non-game species. We'll need a lot of support from the public, knowing and believing and hopefully realizing grouse management would be good for other species."

Farm Service Agency County Committee Nomination Period Begins June 15

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) announced that the nomination period for farmers and ranchers to serve on local Farm Service Agency (FSA) county committees begins today, June 15, 2016.

"Through the county committees, farmers and ranchers have a voice. Their opinions and ideas get to be heard on federal farm programs," said FSA Administrator Val Dolcini. "I encourage all eligible farmers and ranchers across the spectrum of American agriculture, to get involved in this year's elections. We have seen an increase in the number of qualified nominees, especially among women and minorities, and I hope that trend continues."

To be eligible to serve on a FSA county committee, a person must participate or cooperate in an FSA administered program, be eligible to vote in a county committee election and reside in the local administrative area where they are nominated.

Farmers and ranchers may nominate themselves or others. Organizations representing minorities and women also may nominate candidates. To become a candidate, an eligible individual must sign an FSA-669A nomination form. The form and other information about FSA county committee elections are available at www.fsa.usda.gov/elections. 2016 nomination forms must be postmarked or received in the local USDA Service Center by close of business on Aug. 1, FSA will mail election ballots to eligible voters beginning Nov. 7, 2016. Ballots must be returned to the local county office via mail or in person by Dec. 5, 2016. Newly-elected committee members and alternates will take office on Jan. 1, 2017.

Nationwide, there are approximately 7,800 farmers and ranchers serving on FSA county committees. These individuals make decisions on disaster and conservation programs, emergency programs, commodity price support loan programs, and other agricultural issues. Committees consist of three to 11 members that are elected by eligible producers, and members serve three-year terms.

To learn more about county committees, contact your local FSA county office or visit http://offices.usda.gov to find a county office near you.

Since 2009, USDA has worked to strengthen and support American agriculture, an industry that supports one in 11 American jobs, provides American consumers with more than 80 percent of the food we consume, ensures that Americans spend less of their paychecks at the grocery store than most people in other countries, and supports markets for homegrown renewable energy and materials. USDA has also provided $5.6 billion in disaster relief to farmers and ranchers; expanded risk management tools with products like Whole Farm Revenue Protection: and helped farm businesses grow with $36 billion in farm credit. The Department has engaged its resources to support a strong next generation of farmers and ranchers by improving access to land and capital; building new markets and market opportunities; and extending new conservation opportunities. USDA has developed new markets for rural-made products, including more than 2,500 biobased products through USDA's BioPreferred program; and invested $64 billion in infrastructure and community facilities to help improve the quality of life in rural America. Community Health Needs Assessment surveys to be mailed week of July 18

Rockcastle County households will receive a survey in the mail next week asking for feedback about the health and healthcare of the community.

The survey is part of Rockcastle Regional Hospital's Community Health Needs Assessment, which is done every three years by all non-profit hospitals in the U.S. as a requirement of the Affordable Care Act.

The one-page mailer will contain 19 questions that deal with topics related to health status and access to healthcare. The assessment is designed to provide the hospital with important information that allows it to respond to the community's

The Mount Vernon Fire Department was called to Halcomb East Road near Brush Creek Sunday where several vehicles were destroyed by fire. According to Chief David Bales, a car, a pick-up truck and an ATV were fully engulfed upon arrival. The owner of the vehicles have not been identified and Bales said the cause of the fire is undetermined. No injuries were reported.

During last Wednesday's severe thunderstorm, lightning struck a transformer on Dysart Way causing a field to catch fire near a residence. Mt. Vernon Fire Department responded to the scene and was able to quickly extinguish the blaze.

Proposed bill would give back to volunteer firefighters

In small-town Kentucky, volunteer firefighters are part tradition, part public service. But it is becoming increasingly difficult for cities and counties to find volunteer firefighters in the Commonwealth.

"To become a volunteer firefighter, individuals must dedicate many hours of personal time for training and physical ability testing," said Rep. Rick G. Nelson, D-Middlesboro. "Most volunteers do not get paid when responding to calls or for the required training. If payment is made, those payments may not cover the expenses of the volunteer."

Nelson has proposed an individual income tax credit for certain volunteer firefighters to entice individuals to join volunteer fire departments and to partially compensate individuals for the costs associated with being a volunteer firefighter. He said the proposal calls for a credit to be created in January. It would be equal to $1,000 for each active certified volunteer firefighter.

An active certified volunteer firefighter is defined as a firefighter who:

- volunteers for a qualified fire department;
- is active with a qualified fire department for the entire taxable year for which the tax credit is claimed;
- and appears on the list of certified volunteer firefighter provided by the Commission on Fire Protection Personnel Standards and Education.

Rep. Nelson has always supported firefighters. In 2001, he was a cosponsor of House Bill 101, which says a volunteer firefighter could not be fired over being called away to fulfill firefighter duties.

Jim Pohlman, president of the Kentucky Firefighters Association and the Chief of the Alexandria Fire District, said the legislation would be helpful to volunteer firefighters and departments across the state.

"I think it's a great start," Pohlman said. "Anything
we do would be a plus."
Nelson said he intends to

Nelson said he intends to pre-file his legislation this year to be introduced during the 2017 General Assembly.

"The state has more volunteer fire departments than cities," Nelson said. "Staffing those departments are nearly 18,000 volunteer firefighters.

There is no doubt about it; volunteer fire departments are a major provider of services in rural Kentucky and it is time the legislature acts to preserve these institutions."

More scholarships available in EKU's Dual Credit Program

Kentucky University's Dual Credit Program is more attractive than ever, thanks to the University's participation in the Commonwealth's new Dual Credit Scholarship

EKU's popular program allows juniors and seniors in area high schools to enjoy an "authentic University experience" as they earn both high school and college credits for University-level courses. Now, participants from Kentucky public high schools may qualify for additional scholarships. In fact, qualifying students could take up to two courses each semester at no charge, other than textbook costs. For those who don't qualify for EKU Dual Credit scholarships, or would like to enroll in more classes than covered by the new state scholarships, the cost per credit hour has dropped from $65 to $52.

In the past legislative session, the Kentucky General Assembly allocated $15 million for dual credit scholarships for the 2016-18 biennium through a program to be administered by the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority (KHEAA). This fall, the scholarships will be awarded to high school students through their local

Money Tip for Students

Students should set up, follow a budget

One financial goal for students is to have money at the end of every month. These tips from the Kentucky Higher Education As-Authority sistance (KHEAA) may help you set up a budget to track the money you make versus the money you spend. Knowing how and when you get your money and where you spend it is the foundation of financial planning. You create a budget by estimating how much money you'll make each month and how much you'll spend. It's a great way to avoid running out of money when you need it most.

You must be honest with yourself when completing your budget. If you write down everywhere you spend money over a month's time, you will get a clear picture of your wasteful spending. Once you know where your weaknesses with money are, you can work on correcting them. If you have more expenses than you have income to cover, your income will have to go up, or your expenses will have to go down.

Having a budget in place will also help you save for a vacation, a new car or college. Determine how much you need to set aside to reach your goal, and build that into your budget. Move the money into a savings account so you won't be tempted to spend it before you meet your goal.

The thought of doing a monthly budget scares people, but they aren't difficult. The difficult part is being deliberate with your spending. Once you budget an amount for say movies, then stick to that amount. If you spend more in one category, you will have to take that money from another category.

KHEAA is the state agency that administers Kentucky's grant and scholarship programs, including the Kentucky Educational Excellence Scholarship (KEES). KHEAA also provides financial literacy vidat http:// itsmoney.kheaa.com. Just plant in sunny spots and enjoy the blueish blooms that seem to keep on coming until cold weather. This low care perennial should be considered as offering about as much bang for the buck as anything you can plant.

The botanical name for catmint is nepeta. It should not be confused with catnip, although both have a euphoric effect upon some felines. Catmint species are native from the Mediterranean to Russia, China and Japan.

Catmint is a longblooming perennial that faithfully comes back year after year. h e popular cultivar "Walker's Low" is an attractive improve-

m e n t over heirloom seedlings and is the variety most common in garden centers it seems. It is practically sterile. (But not completely, as I've witnessed a few plants come up some distance from plants I've personally planted as the seeds were scattered.) Some varieties can spread by seed, some only by division. Some varieties are tall, and some of the newer offerings are compact and bloom more profusely. All bloom for many weeks, and those that don't can be encouraged to re-bloom by a mid-summer Some cultivars (cultivated varieties) of nepeta include these: For a low or compact plant, consider Walker Junior, Little Titch, Superba, Kit Kat or Little Trudy. For an 18 inch plant that will flop and become 30 inches wide, and bloom all summer, go with the variety "Walker's Low" or perhaps Dawn to Dusk. Those wishing a tall plant, a new one is Cool Cat. Other plants exceeding two feet tall include Blue Dragon, Six Hills Giant, Pool Bank, and Joanna Reed. Finding all these varieties may be a real challenge, as the big box stores all seem to carry the same one, and independent garden centeres may carry but Walker's Low and perhaps one other they happen to Catmint attracts butterflies for nectar, attracts hummingbirds from time to time, and various bees will also visit the flowers for nectar and pollen. It is not known to have pests that bother it. Deer won't eat it, nor will rabbits.

The Rickels-Noe Reunion was held at the old homeplace at Midge's on Fairground Hill on June 25th. There were 52 present.

Some of the Noes present were: Gary and Virginia and husband, Ricky. We were so glad to see them. The rest of the Noe family was unable to make it because of illness.

Six of the Rickels were present: Gene, Midge, Ann, Doug, Jane and Jim. Ray, Jr. and Rodger were ill.

It was too hot and humid to play games but that didn't stop all the talking and eat-the small kids and kept them occupied and we appreciate him and Rocky. Rocky kept everything cleaned up and had everything looking good outside.

Josh Rickels took over

There was so much food brought by family and friends that we couldn't get around to taste everything.

We want to thank each and everyone who brought food and desserts.

The reunion really began on Thursday the 23rd.

Friends stopped by just to say hello and some stayed for a day or two to eat with us. We are so glad our friends think as much of us as we do them so that they feel welcome to stop by anytime.

There were about 25 or 30 family and friends that couldn't make it this year but maybe next year.

I thank the Lord for a loving Christian family He has blessed us with.

See you next year, Lord willing.

An encouraging word:

Want Something Better? By Howard Coop

The day had not gone well at all. I seemed to be all thumbs, and everything I had attempted to do turned out wrong. Late that afternoon, the project upon which I was working wasn't coming together in a successful way when a friend happened to come by. After a simple greeting, we chatted for a moment, and he found a way to express appreciation for what I was doing. Then, without criticizing me for that which I had done wrong, he, in an encouraging way, made a simple suggestion. I accepted his suggestion, and I was amazed at the outcome. Things came together perfectly, and the project upon which I had struggled was finished successfully. After a getting off to a poor start, thanks to a friend, my day ended well, and I was grate-

As I mulled over the day's events and the unexpected late afternoon visit of my friend, a thought came to my mind: In everyday life, relationships, words, and actions are important.

They can either hurt, or they can help. Sometimes there is the notion to put the self on a pedestal and look down upon others while ignoring their accomplishments and criticizing them for their faults and failures. In the end, that attitude accomplishes nothing positive, but it does hurt. On the other hand, good relationships. kind words, and helpful actions that flow from a positive attitude are encouraging and helpful. They do accomplish much. There is an old idea that goes back for centuries. In simple words, it says, "that you and I may be mutual encouraged by' the attitude that we express through the way we live, what we say, and how we relate to each other, that is how you live, what you do and what you say should help me, and how I live what I do, and what I say should help you.

The Brindle Ridge Fire Department was first on the scene of this trailer fire on Roundstone Loop Road Friday morning. The home of Scott Bullin, 43, was fully engulfed upon arrival and the home and all its contents were destroyed by the fire. Police suspect the trailer was set on fire and Bullin was found deceased outside the home, according to police. Officials are investigating the suspected arson and the Kentucky State Police are conducting an ongoing death investigation.

City budget shows surplus at the end of the fiscal year

By: Mike French

The Mount Vernon City Council held their regular monthly meeting Monday

The first order of business was to accept and approve the final monthly financial report of the fiscal

The report indicates that the General Fund for the City of Mount Vernon budget was $1,538,450 while the city only spent $1,495,446, leaving a surplus of $43,004.

Mayor Mike Bryant said he was pleased with the fiscal responsibility shown by members of the council. "We can feel good about operating in the black and having a surplus at the end of our budget cycle," he

In other action, the members of the council passed an ordinance allowing car dealerships to hold temporary "tent sales" in the city under certain restrictions.

The restrictions include a certain number of times allowed each year that a dealership may hold the open display and includes a $25 permit fee for each display event.

City Administrator Josh Bray informed the council that work has begun on the third and final dock at Lake Linville. Mayor Bryant praised the work. "It's good to begin this final phase of the current project at the lake. We will explore new projects there for the next budget," he said.

Bray said he hopes the city will consider improvements on the camping areas at the lake.

Project Administrator Chrystal Rush informed the council that the new nuisance ordinance passed earlier this year is working very

"Thus far we have sent nine letters concerning the nuisance ordinance and have had agreement from all nine of them," she said. "People have been very cooperative and willing to meet the requirements."

Council member Jamie Bryant said the ordinance is working as planned. "I can already see a difference. Things are getting cleaned up and looking better around the city," she said.

For the third consecutive meeting, there was also discussion of yard sale signs left out after the yard sale is over. Members of the council discussed the problem of local residents holding yard sales and not removing the signs they had placed. Councilman Wayne Bullock said his crews spend time every week removing signs that people have not removed. "Someone is going to have to start paying for that. It is using time and labor of city employees to go around picking up all these signs that people just leave out," said Bulock. Mayor Bryant agreed. "It's only a common courtesy to pick up your signs

Four accidents Sunday on I-75

By: Mike French

Four separate accidents kept I-75 in Rockcastle County backed up most of the day Sunday.

According to Deputy Sheriff Matt Bryant, the sheriff's department worked four individual wrecks, including a five-car crash near the Mount Vernon exit, throughout the day Sunday.

Bryant says congestion on the highway was heavy Sunday which slowed traffic dramatically causing the wrecks to be non injury.

"Where the traffic funnels into two lanes on high traffic days and congestion builds up, people just get in there too close and rear-end each other and this causes even more congestion," he

However, any school that does not take advantage of the scholarship, will lose their scholarship funds which will be allocated to another school. Funding will be distributed by the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority.

This scholarship allows juniors and seniors in highschool to take certain classes and receive both high school credit and college credits. "I am very excited about the opportunities this scholarship brings to our junior and senior students," said Rockcastle Superintendent David Pensol.

"They will have the opportunity to enroll in dual credit coursework that will fullfill both high school and college requirements at no cost to the student or their families. Removing this financial barrier is a huge benefit to our families and the school district.," he said.

Finance board member Jason Coguer said the price to the school board for dual credit hours will be less than the $52 allotted and the school system may be able to put the extra income aside to use for other things within the school system.

Pensol said information about the scholarship was only released least week and in order to prepare and be

I remember the day I got my first calculator. It was the greatest thing ever. All it had was plus and minus, divide and multiply, but it was so high tech, our whole family would type in math problems and "oooh and ahhh" as it revealed the answer.

"How on earth does that little box know what 53X27 is?" we all asked ourselves. We even tried to trick it and type in really hard problems and then we would do the problem on paper just to check and make sure it was

Then came the day that all us kids were informed that we could not use calculators in school. "It was cheating" they said. Anyone caught with a calculator would be in serious trouble.

The use of a calculator on a test would result in being expelled. We were told the point of school was to teach us to use our brain and not to depend on technology to

I remember the actual speeches from grown-ups. 'If you use technology all the time, you will become dependent upon it and won't be able to survive without it," they said.

I recalled that memory and those lessons this week after lightening hit our house. It sounded like a bomb had fallen on our roof and at that instant our light bulbs blew and everything in the house shut down.

After I changed underwear, I set about flipping breakers back on and changing light bulbs and inspecting the house for signs of fire in the attic.

The one thing that was destroyed was our wi-fi. We called Windstream and they couldn't come and repair it for five days.

Well, it turns out that old Miss Young (my fifth grade teacher) was right.

I had no idea how dependent I had become on the internet. I do business there, my band handles all our communication there, emails are my only form of communication facebook is how I keep up with everyone.

I was lost.

I dislike getting "stuck" intensely to the point where Ramona, Dr. Griffith's very capable nurse, told me once she would rather give a shot to a child any day than me.

I don't know why -- am I just a baby or is there some traumatic event buried deep in my childhood that caused this? I personally am going with the traumatic event but family and friends would probably opt for the baby explanation smart alecks!

I have been experiencing shortness of breath often and my cardiologist decided to begin exploring why. I have endured a heart cath, a CT scan, chest xrays, a stress test, - which I failed miserably, a breathing test and both arms look like they belong to a voodoo doll. I was sent to a pulmonologist who, combined with daughter Jamie, bullied me into a pneumonia shot.

I have decided that death is not imminent and the shortness of breath seems to have eased somewhat. I do have moderate emphysema and, of course, this is not reversible but can be managed, particularly if I quit smoking.

This Saturday, at 11:15 a.m., I will have been quit for two weeks. It is the hardest thing I have ever done, even with the patch, but I honestly believe I am already reaping the ben-

Garden Vegetables

Even though fall is by far my most favorite season, I truly enjoy the "fruits" of the summer gardens. If I had to choose just one of my most enjoyable meals, even after all of these years, it is one that came from my grandfather's (Pop) garden and was prepared by Mommie Katie, my grand-

That meal consisted of the following summer delights. The center of the meal, as far as I was concerned, was a huge pot of white half-runner green beans – cooked, of course, with a slab of salt pork that was cured by Pop himself. The meat for the feast was usually country ham from our smoke house. A large bowl of Silver Queen corn on the cob, from Pop's garden was also available. On the other end of the table, there was a platter of fresh, both red and yellow tomatoes, sliced cucumbers, and fresh green onions. Without question, Mommie Katie made sure that a large pone of her very own cornbread was passed around the table, followed by a butter dish containing real butter.

I can remember this fabulous meal being on Mommie Katie's table from as far back as 1949 or 1950, when I was only six years old. I was also able to witness Pop in his garden for months before such meals as he carefully prepared the soil to plant his favorite vegetables. Row after row of green beans and corn made up the major portion of his bounty. Occasionally, he would allow me to follow along behind him as he chopped the weeds from his cherished crop.

Pop would begin his planting in late spring after the final frost. He continually worked this piece of land until the middle of August, when his reward for his labor would all be ready for Mommie Katie's kitchen. He worked extremely hard every day, and I never knew him to com-

About this time of the year, I am reminded of the magic that Mommie Katie was able to accomplish in her small kitchen. She was a master of her craft, as was witnessed by the entire neighborhood as well as by her whole family. She was by far the greatest cook I have ever known.

Since both my grandparents are now gone, I have to depend upon different sources for my summer vegetables. Kathy and I have two very good Farmer's Markets in Powell County. They are found in Clay City and in Stanton. They usually have half-runners and a variety of tomatoes, cucumbers, and corn. They never reach the level of Pop's garden, but we are glad to have them available to us.

Kathy and I are also fortunate to have kind neighbors on Furnace Mountain who regularly share their bounty with us. Mike and Donna Gabbard have been friends of ours for over twenty years, arising initially from a friendly and welcomed "check" on us during a huge snowstorm. We are mightily blessed when they bring us "shuck beans" every year from the half-runners that they grow themselves.

Occasionally, I attempt to duplicate Mommie Katie's meal here on Furnace Mountain, but it never comes anywhere close to hers, even though I use some of her recipes. I did not inherit her special skills. However, we still love to prepare her special dishes.

I am totally blessed to have been raised by a family that knew how to prepare wonderful country meals from fresh produce. I am truly thankful, and I hereby salute the bounty of sum-

I got in on the conversation late but wish I had been quick enough to ask if we could call him Votto then. Votto Carney, sorta has a ring to it doesn't it?

We're teasing of course. It's Allison and Daniel's perogative what they want their son to be called. But still, wouldn't Votto be unique for a nickname?

I have watched very little of the Republican Convention and, from what I understand haven't missed much. I did catch a part of former New York Mayor Rudy Guiliani's speech Monday night and it was impressive but I have been more concerned with the horrible national news of the way our police officers are being tar-

This is untenable and a national disgrace.

On the way to London, we decided to call him 4th of July weekend with "Uncle Sam" being the key figure. Then there is Thomas Jefferson, the writer of the Constitution, so he is Samuel Jefferson. He is a dog found on (or at least near) the 4th of July.

It was horrible. So, we contacted our phone service provider and paid for a plan that would turn our cell phones into "hotspots" and basically use 4G as a wi-fi service for our laptops. (I said all that because that's what Dena said happened. I have no clue what it means.)

So we were back in business once Dena took my phone and hit a bunch of buttons and changed something on the laptop. All I know is, it was working.

there was no way that we were not going back on Friday to catch blue gill that weighed somewhere between one and two pounds Andy caught one that I am reasonably sure topped 2 pounds but I dared not ask a fellow at the delicatessen to weigh it. Some people are fussy about getting fish slime on the platform where they weigh out such things as pastrami, liver loaf and sharp cheddar cheese.

I, personally believe that a dead fish doesn't smell any worse than some of the other stuff they weigh out but I still didn't ask them to weigh

Andy says he's seen larger bluegill but I told him that if I'd ever seen any that big, I didn't remember them. that is possiblebecause there's a lot more stuff that I don't remember these days than stuff I do recall. Which makes it rather embarrassing to run into someone at the grocery store whom I've known for decades and not have the slightest idea what their name is.

Anyway, we first went to Owsley Fork Lake, locally famous in Madison and surrounding counties for its big bluegill and red-eared sunfish and where we'd done pretty well a year ago, but after a couple of hours neither of us had caught anything longer than my thumb nor much thicker than the nail on said thumb. In other words, nothing to put in the fish basket.

So we drove a few miles until we were able to get two bars of cell phone signal and I called a friend whose name I can't mention in the paperbecause he doesn't want people sneaking into his private pond. If you culd see the bluegill we caught from it, you'd know that it's a secret you'd want to keep if you ever wanted to go

Andy wound up cleaning the catch on both days. His batter recipe, basically beer and eggs to soak the fillets in before shaking them up in a bag of well-seasoned meal/ flour and frying them in very hot oil, was so good that I called him on Saturday when

I will very reluctantly be voting for Trump. I cannot imagine another four years of a continuation of this administration's policies and I will certainly not waste a vote on the Libertarian candidate which would only be a vote for continuing the present administration's policies woman who, if her mouth is moving, is lying.

We are at a crossroads in this country and I wish our Republican candidate could have been a bit more, oh, I don't know, sensible? But, it is what it is and perhaps Trump will turn out to be just what we need at this point in history. One can only hope and pray.

I tried replicating it on our second day catch.

Top-water lures break mid-summer doldrums

An old saying among bass anglers declares they would rather catch one bass on a top-water lure than 10 on anything else.

The shake-inducing strike of a huge black bass savaging a top-water lure at dawn is as addictive as free donuts in the break room at work. Once bitten by the top-water bug, it becomes part of your fishing arsenal for life.

Daytime bass fishing grows increasingly tough in the heat of July and August. Fishing a top-water lure during the edges of the day draws vicious strikes.

"The last hour of daylight to a little after dark is one of my favorite times to throw a top-water lure in summer," said Adam Shepard, senior biologist with the Center for Mollusk Conservation in Frankfort. "Early and late is a good time to catch bigger fish with topwaters, especially in summer."

Pre-dawn, dusk and night are also the most comfortable to fish when the daytime temperatures reach the 90s. All three species of black bass - spotted, smallmouth and largemouth crush topwaters during the low light times in summer.

Shepard, who is an expert kayak tournament angler for bass, makes his lure choice based on water conditions and clarity of the lake. "I really like a buzzbait in the morning," he said. "I've always been a buzzbait guy. Most of our fertile lakes here in central Kentucky get murky water in summer, so I like a black buzzbait on those kinds of lakes.'

He throws a frog-imitating topwater in areas with surface scum or vegetation. "I really like throwing a frog into those shady spots with some scum build up in the little back pocket areas," Shepard said. "You almost use a flip cast to get it under the nest of tree branches. Just twitch it. You never know when a 4 pounder will hit it in those spots."

Walking-style baits such as the Zara Spook is Shepard's choice for clear water lakes such as Lake Cumberland, Laurel River Lake or Cave Run Lake. These lures are cigar or banana-shaped and move side-to-side with jerks of the rod tip, called by anglers the "walk-the-dog" retrieve.

"It is nothing for them to come from 30 feet deep on Lake Cumberland and hit walking baits," Shepard said. He adds an extra split ring and upgrades the treble hooks on his walking baits.

"The extra split ring allows the hook to rotate 360 degrees," he said. "I have better hook up ratios and keeps the fish on better. I also upgrade the treble hook on most of them with one where the hook points angle back toward the shank. They hold the fish better."

Shepard is enamored of a new style of top-water lure where the back end of the lure has a tail that rotates around an axle on the retrieve, called a Whopper Plopper. It makes quite a commotion.

"I started throwing the Whopper Plopper last fall," he said. "They designed the lure for muskie fishing, but you can catch nice bass on them as well. They work best in open water, not around wood or weeds. The tail sinks with the nose up at rest and can grab stuff."

Designed by nationally known angler Larry Dahlberg, the heavy weight of the lure allows an angler to cast them what seems like

"I love fishing them at night during summer," said

King's Eye Care

Chad Miles, host of the "Kentucky Afield" television show. "They sound just like alewives or shad when they are skipping on the surface. I use the smallest size and it does well."

Night is also a good time to fish a large black Jitterbug. They might be the best top-water lure ever for pond fishing at night during summer, but they also work on larger lakes. Employing a steady retrieve and using the jointed 3 1/2-inch Jitterbug helps produce strikes on reservoirs and larger lakes.

The popular 3-inch model works great at night worked along weed lines in farm ponds and smaller lakes. On these waters, retrieve the Jitterbug a few yards, let it sit still for a time, then repeat. Bass often mangle this lure when it moves after the pause.

The smallest-sized black Jitterbug is an overlooked producer of stream smallmouth bass from twilight into darkness. Cast the lure above and below stream drops at a 45-degree angle. Reel fast enough to keep it

Sometimes fish strike with vengeance, other times they gently suck the lure under and swim away with it. It is as fun as any fishing found and usually produces bigger than average bass.

Get out in the low light, escape the heat and enjoy some of the hottest fishing during the steamiest weeks of the year.

Students should check KEES accounts for accuracy

Kentucky high school students and 2016 graduates should check their Kentucky Educational Excellence Scholarship (KEES) accounts for accuracy.

KEES allows students to earn money for college by getting good grades in high school and for qualifying scores on the ACT or SAT. Students eligible for free or reduced lunches may also earn awards for good scores on Advanced Placement, International Baccalaureate and Cambridge Advanced International exams. KEES is administered by the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority (KHEAA).

To check awards and personal information, students need to use the MyKHEAA function on www.kheaa.com. If they do not already have a MyKHEAA account, they can set one up using the "Sign In" button on the KHEAA home page.

Students can verify their KEES GPA is correct by taking the letter grade for each course taken during the year and converting it to a 4.0 scale. On this scale, an A = 4.0, B = 3.0, C = 2.0, D= 1.0, and F = 0. Pluses and minuses count the same, so an A-minus and an A-plus are both worth 4.0 points. Grades for AP, IB, CAI, and dual credit courses are weighted for KEES, making an A = 5.0, B = 4.0, etc. The GPA is calculated by adding all the points together and dividing the total by the number of credits earned during the year.

In addition to KEES, students should check their personal information. Students who need to have GPAs or other information corrected should contact their high school counselor as soon as possible.

If students have problems with their MyKHEAA account or cannot see their KEES information, they should call the KHEAA College Access Team at (800) 928-8926.

For more information about Kentucky scholarships and grants, visit www.kheaa.com; write KHEAA, P.O. Box 798, Frankfort, KY 40602; or call (800) 928-8926, ext. 6-7214.

State court system is ready to provide for felony expungement

The Administrative Office of the Courts is ready to offer resources to help those who want to apply for a felony expungement when House Bill 40 goes into effect Friday, July 15.

The 2016 Kentucky General Assembly passed HB 40, which allows certain Class D felony convictions to be expunged. The new law creates a process that permits a defendant to file a motion to have his or her conviction vacated and expunged. If the court grants the motion, the original judgment will be vacated and the charges dismissed. Records in the custody of any other agency or official, including law enforcement, will be expunged.

The AOC has been working with Governor's Office, the Kentucky State Police, the Kentucky Justice & Public Safety Cabinet and other criminal justice partners to prepare for the transition.

"The court system is the hub of activity for this piece of legislation," Theriault said. "Working with state partners, we've put in countless hours to revise legal forms and update our electronic case management systems to communicate with other state agencies. and the public can get information from a new section on the Kentucky Court of Justice website that is devoted to felony expungement. Theriault said that drug possession, criminal mischief, receiving stolen property and flagrant nonsupport represent a majority of the convictions that people will seek to expunge. Extremely serious felonies, such as sex crimes, public corruption, drug trafficking and human trafficking, are not eligible for expungement. Theriualt said he would advise petitioners to be patient as they begin the application process. "The process could take up to six months or more, especially given the high volume of petitioners we expect to apply for expungement," he said. "This is a complicated process that will be in my mind as a special day. Through the kindness of a friend, I was privileged to attend a performance of the Glenn Miller Orchestra at the Grand Theatre in Lancaster. It was an outstanding performance, and I enjoyed it very much. Almost every seat in the restored theatre was taken. Exactly on time, the lights their right hands and saluted the flag in military style, and many in the audience placed their right hands over their hearts in the traditional manner. They proudly joined together and pledged allegiance to the flag that is the symbol of "...the United States of American, and the republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all." It was a thrilling experience that touched me deeply, and I was delighted to be a part of it.

But, at that point, I was astounded, and somewhat disappointed, by what I saw. Many people, one would have been too many, in the audience, some near me, stood like they were bored by the event and did nothing. They neither raised a hand to put it over the heart nor joined in the pledge allegiance to the flag, a simple act that shows respect and loyalty. And I wondered: What has happened? Have we lost something that is important, willingness to show respect to the symbol of our country? If there is no respect for our flag, what else is there for which there is no respect?

Respect for, and loyalty to, that which is significant is important. And the flag of our country is important.

Pokémon Trainers descend upon Mt. Vernon

By Zac Pensol

I'm a Pokémon trainer. And I'm not the only one around here who is. In fact, over the past few weeks, millions of people across the world have become Pokémon trainers by downloading and playing the incredibly popular new smartphone game, Pokémon GO, which turns everyone's hometown into a landscape of strange, digital magic.

You may have seen us around town lately - walking streets you've never seen us on before, or maybe we're standing in parking lots or on sidewalks, phones held upright like we're taking pictures of something that can't be seen. It's odd, no doubt - certainly a curious sight to see here in Mt. Vernon, but it's all in the name of harmless fun that is doing wonders to bring an extra bit of life and community to our little town.

For the uninitiated, Pokémon GO is the most recent addition to the huge video game franchise, Pokémon. Making it's debut in 1996 for the handheld gaming system Nintendo Gameboy, Pokémon quickly spun into a worldwide phenomenon that culminated in dozens of video games, multiple movies and animated series, a collectible card game, plushes, figurines, clothing, and be-

The games follow the basic premise that you, as a trainer, must journey the world seeking out and capturing curious little beasties called Pokémon, a portmanteau of "pocket monster". Your goal as a Pokémon trainer is to catch as many as you can and train them in their ability to battle other

Pokémon with the ultimate goal of catching them all and being a master Pokémon fighter.

Pokémon GO takes this basic notion of the previous Pokémon games and adds an interesting technological twist: using the GPS and camera in your smartphone, the actual world around you becomes the land of Pokémon!

When I pull up the game and prepare to walk out the door, I see the streets of Mt. Vernon represented on the little screen in front of me, with an animated avatar symbolizing me standing on the map exactly where I am just off Williams Street. Tufts of animated grass are kicked up near the elementary school suggesting a digital creature in the vicinity - if I choose to fight it, the game uses my phone's camera to make the cartoon creature appear on the sidewalk in front of me, moving and squawking in real time as if he's actually there!

Down the road a bit sits First Baptist Church on Main Street, which in the game's digital world is a Pokéstop: a location where you can collect useful ingame items simply by being near enough to the building. Meanwhile, the Courthouse appears as a Pokémon Gym where trainers in the area can go and battle each others' Pokémon with hope of taking over and becoming a gym leader! Pokéstops and Gyms like these are scattered all over Mt. Vernon, placed at familiar markers of cultural and social significance - the Post Office, the Library, even the Rocket in front of the high school!

As I walk through the streets of town in the fading sun of another warm

Kentucky summer day, there's a group of youngsters in the parking lot by City Hall reaping the rewards of a Pokémon Lure they just planted. A young couple stands just off the sidewalk engaged in a battle for a rare creature and we jovially commiserate on the difficulty of catching some of the in-game monsters. I continue down Main Street to another Pokéstop placed at the mural beside Community Trust Bank, and a man walks by, the familiar sounds of the game emanating from his phone. "Catch anything good?", I ask; his knowing smile in reply assures me that we're on the same page. We chat for a bit and he stifles his beaming pride in telling me about how he's just taken control of the Courthouse Pokémon

My time in town goes on like this - people come and go, everyone from teenagers in giddy clusters to lone adults taking drags of their cigarette as they play with cartoon animals. Some walk, some sit in parked cars with their families. Virtually all of us share a word or at least a smile. The sun is down now, and on my journey home, a parked police officer leans out his window, inquiring simply, "Pokémon?" I chuckle and give him a thumbs-up. I take the long way home, hoping to encounter the rare Pokémon my radar tells me is up ahead.

This all may seem rather silly, and truthfully I suppose it is, but if you ask me there's also a wonderful, albeit understated value to a game like this that's adding a unique touch of liveliness to our small town. It encourages players to go out, get some exercise by walking around, and explore some corners of Mt. Vernon they may've heretofore never taken the time to really pay attention to. The sense of community I feel chatting with fellow trainers from all walks of life - young and young-at-heart, old school buddies and total strangers - and being able to talk about something as inconsequential as a computer game, is something that's a rare but welcome experience.

Fellow Pokémon trainer

Brandy Kirby, who, like me, was among the initial group of kids to become fans of Pokémon two decades ago, agrees, pointing out that the game also serves a wonderful function in uniting fans

MIKE HARMON AUDITOR OF PUBLIC ACCOUNTS

To the People of Kentucky Honorable Matthew G. Bevin, Governor

William M. Landrum III, Secretary

Finance and Administration Cabinet

Honorable Doug Bishop, Rockcastle County Judge/Executive Members of the Rockcastle County Fiscal Court

Independent Auditor's Report

Report on the Financial Statement

We have audited the accompanying Statement of Receipts, Disbursements, and Changes in Fund Balances - Regulatory Basis of Rockcastle County Fiscal Court, for the year ended June 30, 2015, and the related notes to the financial statement which collectively comprise the Rockcastle County Fiscal Court's financial statement as listed in the table of contents. Management's Responsibility for the Financial Statement

Management is responsible for the preparation and fair presentation of this financial statement in accordance with accounting practices prescribed or permitted by the Department for Local Government to demonstrate compliance with the Commonwealth of Kentucky's regulatory basis of accounting and budget laws. This includes determining that the regulatory basis of accounting is an acceptable basis for the preparation of the financial statement in the circumstances. Management is also responsible for the design, implementation, and maintenance of internal control relevant to the preparation and fair presentation of a financial statement that is free from material misstatement, whether due to fraud or error

Auditor's Responsibility

Our responsibility is to express an opinion on this financial statement based on our audit. We conducted our audit in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America, the standards applicable to financial audits contained in Government Auditing Standards, issued by the Comptroller General of the United States and the Audit Guide for Fiscal Court Audits issued by the Auditor of Public Accounts, Commonwealth of Kentucky. Those standards require that we plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statement is free from material misstatement.

An audit involves performing procedures to obtain audit evidence about the amounts and disclosures in the financial statement. The procedures selected depend on the auditor's judgment, including the assessment of the risks of material misstatement of the financial statement, whether due to fraud or error. In making those risk assessments, the auditor considers internal control relevant to the entity's preparation and fair presentation of the financial statement in order to design audit procedures that are appropriate in the circumstances, but not for the purpose of expressing an opinion on the effectiveness of the entity's internal control. Accordingly, we express no such opinion. An audit also includes evaluating the appropriateness of accounting policies used and the reasonableness of significant accounting estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall presentation of the financial statement.

We believe that the audit evidence we have obtained is sufficient and appropriate to provide a basis for our audit opinion. Basis for Adverse Opinion on U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles

As described more fully in Note 1 of the financial statement, the financial statement is prepared by Rockcastle County Fiscal Court on the basis of the accounting practices prescribed or permitted by the Department for Local Government to demonstrate compliance with the Commonwealth of Kentucky's regulatory basis of accounting and budget laws, which is a basis of accounting other than accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America.

The effects on the financial statement of the variances between the regulatory basis of accounting described in Note 1 and accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America, although not reasonably determinable, are presumed to be material.

Adverse Opinion on U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles

In our opinion, because of the significance of the matter discussed in the Basis for Adverse Opinion on U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles paragraph, the financial statement referred to above does not present fairly, in accordance with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America, the financial position of Rockcastle County Fiscal Court as of June 30, 2015, or changes in financial position or cash flows thereof for the year then ended.

Opinion on Regulatory Basis of Accounting

In our opinion, the financial statement referred to above presents fairly, in all material respects, the fund balances of Rockcastle County Fiscal Court as of June 30, 2015, and their respective cash receipts and disbursements, and budgetary results for the year then ended, in accordance with the basis of accounting practices prescribed or permitted by the Department for Local Government described in Note 1. Other Matters

Supplementary Information Our audit was conducted for the purpose of forming an opinion on the financial statement taken as a whole of Rockcastle County Fiscal Court. The budgetary comparison schedules, capital asset schedule, and the Schedule of Expenditure of Federal Awards, as required by the U.S. Office of Management and Budget Circular A-133, Audits of States, Local Governments, and Non-Profit Organizations are presented for purposes of additional analysis and are not a required part of the financial statement, however they are required to be presented in accordance with accounting practices prescribed or permitted by the Department for Local Government to demonstrate compliance with the Commonwealth of Kentucky's regulatory basis of accounting and budget laws. Other Matters (Continued) Supplementary Information (Continued)

The accompanying budgetary comparison schedules, capital asset schedule, and schedule of expenditures of federal awards are the responsibility of management and were derived from and relate directly to the underlying accounting and other records used to prepare the financial statement. Such information has been subjected to the auditing procedures applied in the audit of the financial statement and certain additional procedures, including comparing and reconciling such information directly to the underlying accounting and other records used to prepare the financial statement or to the financial statement itself, and other additional procedures in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America. In our opinion, the budgetary comparison schedules, capital asset schedule, and the schedule of expenditures of federal awards are fairly stated in all material respects in relation to the financial statement as a whole.

Other Reporting Required by Government Auditing Standards In accordance with Government Auditing Standards, we have also issued our report dated March 22, 2016 on our consideration of Rockcastle County Fiscal Court's internal control over financial reporting and on our tests of its compliance with certain provisions of laws, regulations, contracts, and grant agreements and other matters. The purpose of that report is to describe the scope of our testing of internal control over financial reporting and compliance and the results of that testing, and not to provide an opinion on the internal control over financial reporting or on compliance. That report is an integral part of an audit performed in accordance with Government Auditing Standards in considering Rockcastle County Fiscal Court's internal control over financial reporting and compliance. Based on the results of our audit, we present the accompanying schedule of findings and questioned costs included herein, which discusses the

PEACH COBBLER

This is one of Will's favorites. Whenever Judy knows that he will be coming to Mt. Vernon with me, she usually makes this for him. Don't tell her, but, it is one of my favorites also.

3 cups canned peaches, sliced, undrained 1 cup milk

1 cup sugar

1 stick butter or margarine 1 cup self-rising flour Pour peaches in medium saucepan. Heat until bubbles form around edges of pan. Do not boil. Turn off heat. Preheat oven to 350°. Put butter into a 9 x 13 cake pan. Put in oven until butter melts. In a bowl, mix sugar, milk, and flour together until smooth. Slowly pour batter over melted butter.

Spoon peaches on top of batter and gently pour juice over peaches. Do not stir. Bake for 30 to 35 minutes. As it bakes, batter will rise to top and fruit will be on the bottom and peeking up through the batter.

NOTE: Can also use fresh peaches, hot sweetened blackberries, blueberries, or cherries.

CREAM CHEESE PEACH PIE DELIGHT 1 package of white or yellow dry cake mix 1/3 cup butter, room temperature 2 large eggs, divided 1 can (29 ounce) peach slices, drained 8 ounces of cream cheese, room temperature 1/3 cup of sugar 1 teaspoon vanilla Preheat oven to 350°. Spray a 13 x 9 pan with cooking spray.

In large bowl combine cake mix, butter, and 1 egg. Mix until crumbly Set aside 1 and 1/2 cups of crumbs for topping. Press remaining crumbs in bottom of prepared pan Bake 10 minutes.

Cut peach slices into 1inch pieces. You can use frozen or fresh peaches if you choose but I like canned for this particular recipe because of the short baking time.

Spoon into partially baked crust. In large bowl combine cream cheese, sugar, 1 egg and vanilla extract. Beat with mixed until creamy.

Spoon over peaches. Sprinkle with reserved crumbs. Bake 30 minutes. Chill at least 30 minutes before serving. Refrigerate leftovers.

Salato Wildlife Education Center hosts Hunting and Fishing Day

The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources will host a celebration in honor of National Hunting and Fishing Day at the Salato Wildlife Education Center in Frankfort on Saturday, Aug. 6. Activities and demonstrations will run from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. (EST). Admission is free during the event.

National Hunting and Fishing Day has been celebrated in the United States for more than four decades. The Salato Center's celebration of this event has traditionally been held in September in correlation with the national initiative, but will be held in August this year.

"We hope that by holding this event in late summer, people will get a jumpstart on preparations and excitement for upcoming fall hunting seasons," said Salato Center manager Brent McCarty.

Hunting and fishing licenses are available for purchase at the center and individuals can complete the range day portion of their hunter education course during the event.

Activities for this special event will include 3-D archery, archery trap shooting, air rifles, laser shot, fishing and casting. All equipment, poles and bait will be provided to participants. A falconry presentation will also be featured, as well as a hunting retriever dog demonstration. The Western Hills High School FFA (Future Farmers of America) will provide concessions during the event.

The activities being held at the Salato Center recognize the contributions to conservation made by 713,000 Kentucky hunters and anglers, and the 35,000 jobs that hunting, fishing and outdoor activities support.

For a detailed list of activities and times, contact the center at (502) 564-7863.

Angie Payne and Kim Hunter accept a $500 donation for the Rockcastle FRYSC Program from local employees of Hyster-Berea. Rockcastle Schools would like to thank Hyster-Berea for the support they provide to the students of Rockcastle County.

To help fight opioid crisis in Appalachia

Operation UNITE participating in social media training

Operation UNITE is one of five organizations selected to participate in a pilot social media training program to help community-based organizations in Appalachia more effectively use social media to combat the misuse and abuse of prescription painkillers and illegal opiates, such as heroin.

The training is sponsored by the National Center for Injury Prevention and Control at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), the Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC) and Oak Ridge Associated Universities (ORAU).

More than 60 organizations applied for the program, which is intended to enhance community capacity and ultimately economic growth within the Appalachian Region.

Social media channels such as Facebook and Twitter offer new opportunities for organizations to connect with their communities in order to share and receive information,

Healthy choices affordable and simple for everyone

If the idea of eating nutritious food seems expensive and difficult, it may be surprising to learn it can be affordable and simple to live a healthy lifestyle.

The University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service makes the healthy choice the easy-and-affordable choice for Kentuckians. Through the Nutrition Education Program's Healthy Choices for Every Body series, participants focus on building a healthier plate, preparing easy meals that taste great and saving money on groceries.

"Our goal is to help Rockcastle residents eat better for less," said Brooke Jenkins-Howard, curriculum coordinator for the Kentucky Nutrition Education Program. "We provide simple ideas folks can incorporate at home to spend less time in the kitchen and more time with their families."

Through a series of free classes, participants receive tips and resources for making healthy lifestyle changes, recipe cards and motivation to make improvements for their bodies.

of Pokémon both of all ages: "It shows that age doesn't matter," she says, "Teens can look at adults like us who were raised up with the first generation of Pokémon and learn more." She adds, "Also, a Pokéstop here in Mt. Vernon is the library, so that encourages more people to go there!"

At a time when politics and conflicting social issues can be a rift between people, and when video games and cell phones tend to keep us inside and alone, it's endearing to see that a game where you search your town for computer-generated cartoon characters can bring people together and help them experience our town in such a fun, unique way.

Pokémon GO is free to play on compatible smartphones via the Google Play Store and Apple App Store.

influence health behaviors and provide a network of support.

Operation UNITE staff participated in a full-day training on July 11 to learn more about how to use different social media channels to reach and engage with the community to raise awareness of the problems as well as the role everyone can play in the solutions. The training included step-by-step guidance in developing a social media strategy for the organization.

The drug overdose rate in Kentucky is more than 1.5 times higher than the national average, and the rates in several counties in UNITE's service area triple the national average

"Our commonwealth has been ground zero for the explosion of opioid abuse," said Nancy Hale, president/CEO of Operation UNITE. "But as a result, we also have been on the forefront of fighting this epidemic with a multi-pronged approach that has become a national model. This training will help Operation UNITE continue to leverage every available tool to help our families and communities."

Following the training, health communication and marketing specialists from ORAU will work with Operation UNITE to provide additional guidance on implementing and improving the strategy, and evaluate the efforts in order to identify social media best practices for community-based organizations tackling the opioid crisis in Appalachia.

Local officer faces possible suspension

Six hour hearing held

By: Mike French

A decision, by Mt. Vernon Mayor Mike Bryant, is expected Friday concerning the possible suspension or termination of Mount Vernon Police Officer Ed Robinson.

A six-hour hearing was held at City Hall Monday as witnesses, for City Attorney Bobby Amburgey and witnesses for Robinson's attorneys Jerry Cox and William Leger, gave testimony about the complaints against Robinson.

Usually, such personnel matters are held in closed sessions and the public may not attend. However, Robinson requested the meeting be public, which is allowed by KRS 15.520, according to Leger.

Robinson has been accused of several infractions and witnesses informed Bryant, who presided over the hearing with the technical assistance of an attorney from the Kentucky League of Cities, of the events in question.

According to the complaint, Robinson was accused of providing inadaquate security on June 17th of this year when Governor Matt Bevin was at the Source HOV Building and Robinson was part of the security detail.

Assistant Police Chief Joe Rush told members of the hearing that Robinson had his back turned to the Governor and was chatting with other people and therefore not able to provide adequate security.

Another complaint involved an incident when Robinson was apparently providing security at Rockcastle Regional Hospital.

The complaint said that

I grew up in a home full of practical jokers. I spent most of my youth either laughing or being the "laughee.' Nothing is better for the soul or the health than a good laugh and we were healthy people.

I quickly learned that if you fill a plastic glass half full of water and turn it upside down on a slick counter, the water won't leak out. I can't count the early mornings that I heard my mother pick up a glass off the counter and water splashed everywhere.

Soon, mom figured out that she could look for the water line visible through the cup. If it had water in it, instead of lifting it, she would slide it over to the sink and water would go down the drain.

So naturally, I started putting rags over the cup so the water line wasn't visible. SPLASH!

Those little poppers that shoot confetti everywhere were fun too. I would tie them to the inside of the cabinet doors and when mom would open them in the morning....BOOM! My poor mother had a hard life because my dad supported my pranks. And in fact, helped on some of

The hardest I ever saw my dad laugh in my life was when he pulled a joke on my mother.

When I pulled into the driveway, dad was laughing so hard that he couldn't speak to tell us what was so funny. As we listened to him try to tell us, we got tickled at him being so tick-

Dad always kidded mom about her family being a bunch of thieves. They weren't of course and dad loved all of mom's family. But she was very sensitive about them and if you said anything bad about anyone in her family, you were about to see her get red really quickly.

Because it bothered her so much, that's why dad thought it was so funny to call them thieves. He would be cracking up laughing as he ran out the door with mom throwing skillets at

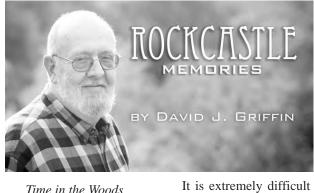

If mom said "We need a new car," dad would say "Have one of your brothers steal one," as he winked at me and laughed. There goes another skillet.

So on this particular day mom's entire family was due to visit for some holiday function. While mom was in the shower, dad took 100 post-it notes and wrote "DO NOT STEAL!" and stuck one on every lamp and table and ash tray in the that mom was a forgiving kind of lady. She had a hard life and to this day she opens the cabinets very slowly and checks every glass before she picks it up.

Time in the Woods

For as long as I can remember, I have loved spending time in the woods. Any regular readers of this column, friends, or family members are familiar with my attachment to nature. It all started in Rockcastle County when I was about six years old when my grandfather (Pop) allowed me to accompany him as he carefully stalked squirrels in our family's woods. My fondness for spending time in nature has never ceased during the last 60-plus

When I became a science teacher in 1965, I lived in a variety of communities. but I always made sure that I had a friend that would allow me access to their woods. I have hunted, fished, and hiked in the woods of Kentucky since I began teaching.

T.J. 's Journal by: Tonya J. Cook

The Garden Party Dear Journal,

I've loved poetry even as a young child. I remember quite often after supper our family would sit around, on the front porch if weather permitted, and talk, tell stories, and recite poetry. Sometimes the poetry was read from a book. It really brings back such sweet and peaceful memories.

Back in the "good old days" when my maternal grandparents were growing up, who had a great part in raising me, such activity was commonplace. It was some of the limited entertainment they had. It had its advantages. It brought families together and allowed two or three generations to really know each other. Those days are now

I remember my grandparents, especially my grandma, reciting very lengthy pieces of verse and never miss a word. She could recite with such expression which only added to the experience. The poems had been memorized at least forty or fifty years prior. My great-grandfather, Henry Price, had a particularly keen mind and memory. He could recite books of poetry word for

My mother, Inez, was somewhat the poet. She could recite as well as write poems and was the first to really introduce me to it. She had me to memorize a handful of poems even before I was going to school. No, I can't remember very many, if any, now.

Last week, I had one of the most pleasant experiences I've had in months. Stanley and I had been invited to a poetry reading at the home of Roland and Nancy Mullins by Martha Cox. There is a small group of poetry lovers in the county who gather to read and recite poetry from time to time. I'm so glad to have been included and I'm sure Stanley is, too.

It turned out to be what I'd call a "perfect" evening. A group of about fifteen or so gathered in a very beautiful garden area with a beauty almost beyond belief. The sky was overcast with dark storm clouds gathering. Rumbles of distant thunder could be heard. There was a gentle, warm breeze kissing our cheeks as it whispered through the

I'm pretty sure I know exactly what he was talking about. I know, too, that complaining about them does not do a single thing to alleviate the aggravations and that most people are too busy coping with their own peculiar sets of miseries to be the least bit concerned about mine but I growl and grumble about them any-Over the last week I've suffered through a bout with pollen allergies that none of the normal pharmaceuticals seem to do anything in the way of symptom alleviation. My eyes burn, my temples throb with pain, the inside of my throat itchesand my nose runs like a mountain spring right after a long, hard rain. On top of that I've had a mild fever throughout these days when daily heat indices have hovered near or just over 100 degrees.

I sit here thinking that the heat should be plague enough so why should I be punished with all this extra misery.

It started early last week right after I'd commenced harvesting the first little cart load of bodacious sweet cornfrom our garden right after the dew had pretty much dried off. I stayed indoors and sneezed the rest of that day. After trying three different allergy meds, the sneezing finally abated but I'm pretty sure the meds had nothing to do with what little relief I got.

Loretta found my industrial grade paint maskand safety goggles, both of which I wore to the corn patch late that evening. I may have looked more like I was prepared to perform surgery than gather corn, but it worked and that was the last peaceful night I've had in over a week

Because, while picking the corn. I noticed that the Babe (Campbell) beans I'd planted with one row of corn were also ready for the first picking. Tannie Cornett, who lives at Ulvah, Ky gaveme the Babe Bean seed nearly ten years ago and they are the best tasting beans I've ever grown. They look sort of like white half runners on steroids but, in my humble opinion, they taste much better.

Next week we are going to give them a taste comparison with the Big John's I got from Kyle Whitaker but that's a story that will wait until then.

In the meantime, on Tuesday morning of last week, I was so excited about the prospect of having my first mess of beans this growing season that I grabbed a 5 gallon bucket and wobbled out to the garden to pick beansand completely forgot about the paint mask and goggles,

Huge mistake. All the aforementioned symptoms kept me up all thatnight and Loretta got very little sleep as well because of all my sneezing, gagging, hacking and coughing and, to make a long story short, it's been that way every night since then because not a day has gone by that I didn't make a trip to the garden for something and then slap myself on the forehead as soon as I got there and remembered, too late, that I wasn't wearing the necessary protection.

Then, on Sunday evening Loretta yelled at me to come and see a facebook photo of the vegetables that Joe and Connie Brownhad grown in the garden behind the home next door to ours. The photo has them displaying a bushel basket more than half full of green beans and another with zucchini. yellow squash and half a dozen large, heirloom tomatoes.

"And to think they grew all this stuff in a bale of straw," my wife exclaimed.

I actually went to bed

Thank you community...

Dear Editor

A month ago I wrote a letter to the Signal asking for community help if they could, and did they ever. I don't want to leave anyone out so I won't mention many names. I know that the wonderful community pulled together for us so our sweet Bethanie can make the trip to Rhode Island to visit family while she can.

You see, Bethanie is very sick and we don't know how much more time she will have with us. Most of her aunts, uncles and cousins live in Rhode Island. This is one of her wishes on her list, it's the biggest wish she has.

We would like to thank the Neurology Team, Dr. Hessler, Lisa Smithern, Jennifer Burton, Rebecca Rawlins, Regina Looney and Sherry Bullock. Lisa and Jennifer saw my plea in the Signal and called to ask how they could help. Within 1-2 weeks they collected the money for the trip, we plan to leave on August third. We were just overwhelmed when Lisa called with this exciting news. Bethanie and I love them and they love us as much, you can always tell this just shows that they go above and beyond nursing care. They really do love and care about their patients. We also want to thank Dr.

Saylor, Dr. Escalante, Ronna Owens, Howard Saylor at Brodhead Pharmacy, Collins Respiratory, Rockcastle Family Wellness and Rockcastle Hospital.

Without everyone of these donating or putting up jars, this trip would not be possible. Thank you also to the one who donated the 31 Totes. This will be very useful for the trip. Thanks to anyone who gave in any way. We are so grateful and proud to live where people

Soon the dark clouds began to pour a gentle rain. We had to make a frantic dash to a beautiful rustic barn to resume the evening. The rain may have dampened the dry, parched earth, but not our spirits. We continued our evening and merriment as we listened to the pitter-patter of the rain on the tin roof. We soon ate of the delicious hors d'oeurves as the evening came to a much too-soon end.

Turns out the only thing grown in the bale of straw were the tomatoes but they were very impressive.

(The Moving Wall Company will be coming to Mount Vernon on August 22 to display the replica of the Viet Nam Memorial. The following article was submitted to help veterans and those interested understand more about the Moving Wall)

The Wall is solid, its granite face designed to resist the elements for all time. Yet, as visitors touch its surface, the Wall becomes almost fluid. Small ripples of hope and healing spread ever out-wards. Like the concentric circles created when a stone is tossed into a pond, the impact of the Wall grows and grows.

In 1982 John Devitt, a former helicopter door gunner and Army veteran, visited Washington, DC for the dedication of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial and to participate in the National Salute to Vietnam Veterans. This visit and experience changed Devitt's life and led to the creation of the "Moving Wall," which has since moved millions of people.

His story is one of thousands spawned by the Memorial. As Devitt explains, "When you approach the Memorial, you don't recognize what's going on. It's a visual experience that words cannot describe. . . Then suddenly, as the words inscribed on the Wall come into focus, it's so subtle, you're drawn in and it's too late. . . You're riveted and the emotions just pour forth."

This emotional outpouring and the pride of having participated in a parade honoring Vietnam veterans inspired Devitt to dedicate the next eleven years of his life to giving people all across the nation a chance to experience a similar catharsis. Originally, Devitt and his friends had hoped to create a photo mural of the Wall, but when the negatives proved unusable, they came up with another solution. The concept was simple: build a replica of the Wall in Washington which could travel across the country, so that everyone who couldn't visit the Wall could share the experience and emotion which it evokes.

Devitt's idea was deeply personal. He had been out of work when the Wall was dedicated, and had made the trip with financial help from family and friends. "There were millions of people who would never be able to come to Washington," he realized, "I wanted them to be able see and feel what I had."

His emotions ran deep. "Before 1982 I never felt like I needed a parade or a memorial," he says. He had come to the Wall expecting to dislike it, anticipating it would be as some media stories had said, "a black gash of shame." Instead, the Wall changed his life; it gave him a new mission and sense of pride in his military service. With the help of a few friends, Devitt set out to build a movable wall. They estimated it would take $40,000, however, pooling their savings they could only come up with $2,500.

They decided to seek assistance in raising the necessary funds. "We had a tough time in the beginning, convincing people about what we were trying to do," explains Devitt. "The Wall is a visual thing. When you tell people you want to build a half-scale replica, they think miniature and model; they don't realize the power of Maya Lin's design." Searching for a way for the work to be completed, they sought contributions of goods and services. If they couldn't get the material donated, they could at least arrange credit terms and discounted pricing.

"We were totally surprised by the reaction of the businesses we approached. I didn't even have a credit card at the time, but when we talked to various companies and explained what we were trying to do, they were very sympathetic. Many took the job on our word." Devitt says, "I knew that once we got started, it amazing statistic.

My interest became intensified when I read that time in the woods could actually prevent cancer: "... when people walk through a forest, they inhale phytoncides that increase their number of natural killer (NK) cells – a type of white blood cells that support the immune system and is associated with a lower risk of cancer." Wow! Doing something that I totally enjoy could help keep me healthy.

The article also listed several other conditions that could be improved by spending time in a natural setting. Some were: having increased energy, reduced inflammation, lowered ADHD symptoms, reduction of anxiety and decreased depression. Here is something worth noting: "Accessible natural areas may be vital for mental health in our rapidly urbanizing world."

I am so thrilled to learn that my life long attraction to nature and forests could have been instrumental in influencing my good health and even my future life span. I am also glad that the scientific community has affirmed my life-long feelings of satisfaction in God's natural environment.

In hopes of influencing my grandchildren in this direction, I play to send a copy of this column to each of them. I can hope can't I?

would pay for itself...and if it didn't, we were prepared to pay for it ourselves." He was convinced of the need for the Moving Wall.

The first Moving Wall was built of plexiglas, with each name silk-screened onto the panels.

The photographic negatives of the names were made available by the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund, the organization responsible for building the Memorial. When new names are added to the Wall, they are also added to the Moving Wall at the end of its season. In its present form, the third generation, the Moving Wall consists of aluminum panels and is a half scale replica of the original.

In the eleven years since the Moving Wall has been in existence, it has been visited by millions of people, in over 410 locations. While the material of the Moving Wall has changed, its impact remains the same.

The Moving Wall was first displayed in 1984 in Texas as part of the Tyler Rose Festival. "We hadn't even put up the fifth panel when a Gold Star Mother placed a beautifully decorated candle at the base of the panel where her son's name was inscribed," Devitt recalls (by michael). Just like the Wall in Washington, people began to leave mementoes, so many, in fact, that Devitt decided to have them shipped to the Moving Wall's off season home in San Jose, CA. He hopes to build a museum to display the items, but for now concentrates on making sure the Moving Wall travels to as many cities as possible.

"When you think about it," he says, "two or three million people visit the Wall every year. There are ten or twenty times that many people, who, for whatever reason, will never be able to make the trip to Washington." Scheduling the route of the Wall is a tough job

How to get ready for the next four years for college bound students (StatePoint) Many college-bound students and their families underestimate the cost of college. Indeed, 31 percent of students who left school without completing a degree reported they did so due to financial reasons, according to recent National Center for Education statistics.

Beyond rising tuition rates, there are many expenses to consider -- books, class materials, room and board, cell phone plans, and incidentals -- to name

With nationwide student debt at $1.3 trillion and growing, according to the National Student Loan Debt Clock, the importance of financial planning and establishing good money habits can't be overstated.

Students can more confidently take on college and beyond with these helpful tips from the "Get College Ready" experts at Wells Fargo:

Paying for College

The first step all students should take toward funding college is to complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA).

Then, use free resources to investigate other funding. Some scholarships can be found on sites like tuitionfundingsources.com, the largest database of scholarships in the US.

It's also helpful to know how much money you'll need. Most school websites offer a net price calculator that can help you arrive at a realistic estimate.

If necessary, look into Federal Direct PLUS loans, which can cover up to 100 percent of remaining education-related costs.

"College-bound students and their families should review grants, scholarships, and loans from a wide variety of says John Rasmussen, head of Wells Fargo's Personal Lending Group, which is also the nation's second largest private student lender among US banks. "After making careful comparisons, they should borrow only what they need."

A handful of private student lenders defer loan repayments until after students leave school. In the case of Wells Fargo, this date begins a full six months later -- and if new graduates need time to find a job -- the bank can extend the repayment start date up to a year.

Cost-saving opportunities exist whereby students can consolidate loans or refinance into loans with a lower interest rate. These actions can help students significantly reduce costs associated with their debt.

funding With all sources, it's critical to be aware of application deadlines and the terms associated with assistance, whether it's GPA maintenance for scholarship eligibility or an interest rate. Managing Money

For many students, college is an opportunity to manage money for the first time. Fortunately, students today have financial planning tools that previous generations did not enjoy.

Young people can leverage their technology confidence to manage money by signing up for mobile banking and then setting up account alerts to avoid over-drafting. Online budgeting and expendituretracking tools can help students form sound financial habits and monitor savings.

Building Credit

Good credit gives you more financial freedom and choices down the road. Start building good credit while you're still in school. Pay bills on time, don't open too many lines of credit and keep balances low. Whenever possible, pay more than the minimum each month. Check your credit history often.

Free resources that can help you plan for college can be found wellsfargo.com/ getcollegeready.

Are you ready for college? Preparation is about more than test-taking and achieving solid grades -- it also means preparing financially for the next four years and beyond.

Electrical safety warning for Pokémon Go players

Jackson Energy and other utilities are reminding players of Pokémon Go to stay away from electric substations, power plants and other electric equipment. The new smartphone-based augmented reality game sends players to real world places to "catch" Pokémon.

Pokémon turn up everywhere—from grocery stores to hospitals. But they're also appearing at electric substations, drawing players into dangerous situations.

"Electric utilities cannot control where the Pokémon appear, and players should make sure they catch their Pokémon from a safe distance," said Jackson Energy Safety Director Brandon Long. "Any game or activity that distracts people from the possible dangers around them and potentially brings them in proximity to our electric equipment and lines is a major concern for all us."

Remember these important electrical safety tips from Jackson Energy you try #CatchEmAll:

Never touch electric equipment, including transformers and power

Never touch a downed power line. Assume all lines are energized and dangerous.

Tips and tricks to save on back-to-school items

(StatePoint) Whether your kids are school playground-bound or college-bound, the backto-school season can be an expensive time of year. Families with children in grades K-12 plan to spend an average $673.57 while college students and families with children in college plan to spend an average of $888.71, according to a National Retail Federation 2016 annual survey.

Where are their dollars going? The top five back-to-school supplies searched for are Crayola ColorStudio iMarker, BIC Pencil Xtra, TI 84 graphing calculator, Brita filtration water bottle and Crayola Washable Erase, according to Qmee, an online shopping compan-

So how can you save on these popular items and more when shopping?

"Whether it's a calculator, backpack or dorm furniture, before making a purchase, it's important to do your research. Educated shoppers always get the best deals," says Jonathan Knight, Co-Founder and CEO, Qmee.

Shopping online is the best way to save time and be sure you're getting a good deal, says Knight, who recommends a few strategies for how parents can get more bang from their back-to-school buck:

- Price check: Price comparison tools can help you know for sure whether you're getting the best deal on any given item. These tools automatically research what you're searching for to show you the best prices available.
- Use coupons. These days you don't need to spend hours scanning the paper with scissors. Online coupons and discount codes can help you save big at checkout. Before clicking "Purchase," always verify whether any such deals are avail-

- Connect: Brands are looking to connect with their consumers online. In some cases, you can earn cash for your everyday searches by clicking on relevant ads. Likewise, by sharing your valued consumer opinion through surveys, many brands will reward you with cash. • Use shopping tools:
- Download a free browser app which will automatically allow you to earn cash for your everyday searches, and also find the best coupon codes while you shop online. For example, online search and save companion Qmee unobtrusively becomes part of your browser to work with search engines and commerce sites such as Google, Bing, Amazon and Walmart, to help you search for what you want, compare prices, secure discounts and offer opinions while earning cash. It's a good tool to help college kids stick to a budget while shopping for everything from books to dorm supplies. For more information or to download, visit Qmee.com.

Back-to-school shopping for students of any age can be expensive, but with the right knowledge, there are plenty of ways to save time and money.

state EMA office to the county was again going unspent. Colson said that the county's yearly allocation of $15,692.25, used for his salary, fuel and maintenance and office expenses was amounting to only a little over $7800, leaving the same amount on the table in the 2014 fiscal year.

The grant is a 50/50 grant which means the county has to match any funds spent for the program.

Colson told the court that fiscal year 2015 was shaping up to be the same as last year and asked the court to allow him to apply to the state EMA office to use the funds toward a new vehicle for his use. Colson said he was currently driving a 2000 Jeep with over 107,000 miles on it and which failed him when he tried to take an EMA officer on an inspection of snowstorm damage in the county last winter.

The vehicle in question is a 2016 4WD Chevrolet Silverado 2500 with a regular cab which can be bought for a state contract price of

However, application for the special project has to be made by July 31st. The court approved the application and purchase, contingent on the application being approved, but asked that Colson find out if expected surplus funds from FY16 could also be used toward purchase of the truck which would cut the county's share down to $13,220 or half of the total cost.

Magistrate Shannon Bishop agreed with the proposal, saying that the worst case scenario would be that the county, which would hold title to the truck, would obtain the vehicle for around $19,000 if the state did not approve the special project for more than one year.

It was also noted by Colson that the county would be in danger of having their funding from the state cut if all available funding is not used each

Back-to-school tips when you are on a budget

(StatePoint) Between new clothes and new school supplies, back-toschool season can put a strain on household bud-

In 2015, families planned to spend $630 on back-to-school items, according to the National Retail Federation, and this year's numbers are also expected to be pricey. With a little planning, your family can get the most out of your school shopping budget -by taking advantage of sales, comparison shopping, buying in bulk and simply by making sure you don't buy things you already own.

Here are some smart ways families can reduce costs as students head back to class this fall.

End-of-Season Sales Take advantage of endof-season sales to stock up.

This concept may not help you this fall, but it's a great habit to adopt now for long-term savings. You can stock up on summer clothes now and great fall items once the weather gets chillier. Stores will be offering deep discounts and clearance prices on items that eventually will come in handy for next back-toschool season. Remember to take into account that kids grow quickly!

Add it Up

Bigger ticket school supply items can cost you a pretty penny if you don't comparison shop.

For example, required tools like a high-quality graphing calculator can come with a price tag of $75 or more! Get more for your money with an affordable model, such as Casio's fx-9750GII, which retails for under $50. It offers useful features like a high resolution screen and compatibility with a personal computer. It is also permitted to be used in such major tests as the ACT and the SAT. More information about calculators can be CasioEducation.com.

Take Stock and Buy in Bulk

Don't buy things you already own, and take advantage of bulk discounts for the stuff you need! Before making your shopping list take stock of what school supplies you already have in your closets -- and your child's backpack -- from the last school year. From scissors to folders to unused or partially used notebooks, you may already have many things your kids need for the year

For those necessities that kids will need all year long -- such as tape, paper, pens, pencils, markers and more -- take advantage of bulk sales at discount stores and online retailers. Buying more now can save you cash in the months

Walking Trail at Lake Linville

A new walking trail can now be enjoyed at Lake Linville. The quarter mile trail, known as Eagle's Nest Trail, begins at Space 2 Create and winds in front of the scenic wetlands and ends at the parking lot beside the ball field. Thanks to Frank Baker and his team, water has been diverted from this wet lowlands area so you should be able to walk the trail all year. Be sure to keep your eyes openyou just might see an eagle.

Walls & Bridges

The Moving Wall, a portable replica of the Vietnam Memorial in Washington, is one veteran's tribute to the sacrifices made by his fallen comrades.

By Michael Oricchio, staff writer San Jose Mercury News (7/16/90)

Everything seemed to come together for San Jose native John Devitt when he attended the dedication of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C. nearly eight years ago.

Not until then did the former Army helicopter door gunner realize that anyone wanted to recognize the sacrifices made by more than 58,000 of his dead brothers in arms. Not until then did the re-

Not until then did the recurring problems he'd been dealing with since serving in Vietnam from '67 to '69 cease. For years he had suffered from violent temper flares, the sweats, bad dreams and the boredom of going from an intense, adrenaline-pumping existence to normal workaday life.

"That's why I wanted to do something. People really did care and I wanted to let other vets know they care," says the 41-year-old Devitt. "I wanted to capture that spirit I felt in Washington, D.C. and sort of spread it around and share it with people who couldn't get there."

To do that, he got together with a couple of friends in January 1983 and spent 22 months and about $28,000 in donations building the Moving Wall, his original, aptly named half-scale plexiglas replica of the memorial in Washington.

These days, there are two Moving Walls that tour around the country during the year.

Å third serves as backup in case there's a booking problem. Now, however, that third replica is on display at San Jose's Municipal Rose Garden, at the corner of Dana and Naglee avenues, until its two-week appearance there ends Saturday.

Gone for almost a year, the Moving Wall has returned to the city where both creator and creation were born.

"After having traveled all over the country with it," says Devitt, "it's good to bring it home and let people know it's still going on."

Since the original Moving Wall made its first appearance in Tyler, Texas, it and its two counterparts have been refurbished. Currently, each measures 250 feet long, 4 feet tall at each end and six feet tall in the center. Each is made of aluminum with the 58,175 names of the American dead

The Vietnam Veterans' Memorial Moving Wall is coming to Rockcastle County in August. An opening ceremony will be held August 18th at 6 p.m. The Moving Wall will be on display August 22nd through the 28th in Renfro Valley.

20TH ANNUAL ROCKCASTLE KIWANIS

Yards to Paradise

By Max Phelps

Edible Landscaping: Part 1—The Basics for Starters Edible landscaping, or landscaping with edibles, can have a variety of meanings to different people. Some think of raised beds and garden rows and fruit trees everywhere, and some think of a landscape like any other but with a few foodproducing plants added in among the petunias and boxwoods. However you look at it, the trend continues to grow. I encourage the reader to consider it if you haven't already.

Edible landscaping is good landscaping only when the principles of landscaping are followed. For instance, sizes, shapes, colors, symmetry that compliments the home or the yard, have to be kept in mind if the look is to be professional and pleasing. Hardscaping is important; perhaps more than ever. The sidewalk, the deck, the urn at the door, the trellis, the pergola, garden storage area, all the usual elements need to be considered. Perhaps even emphasized (for there may be seasons of the year when the edible landscape just does not look great).

Think hardscaping, then add trees and other visual skeletal items. Then some small trees and shrubs. Then some perennials. Finally, deal with where annuals like tomatoes or cabbages might be grown. Having a sketch, a line drawing, even a bubble drawing or freehanded sketch can be helpful. Get the shapes of the walks, patios, decks figured out. Next where would a tree look best? Then, how about some blueberries, hazelnuts or honeyberries instead of boxwoods or spirea? How some raised about beds...filled with traditional vegetables like carrots or

When the design is done; then, what tree looks good at the corner, or on either side of the entry? Instead of a birch tree, will a serviceberry work? Instead of a sweetbay magnolia, will a pawpaw or jujube work and give the same structural look, but with added benefit of providing blossoms and food? Rather than a viburnum shrub, how about a hazelnut (or one of the edible viburnums...viburnum trilobum, viburnum opulus <not the one with "sterile" in the cultivar name>, or nannyberry viburnum or black haw viburnum), or maybe a edible honeysuckle bush? Daylilies are edible, so no adjustment for them,

Groundcovers that are

edible might include bearberry or teaberry (kinnickinick and gaultheria). Also edible creeping raspberries and cranberries. The idea is to have a good functional landscape, including mulch, that is also utilizing edibles either sparingly or to have nearly everything be an edible in some way.

For the trellis, rather than wisteria or trumpet creeper, how about grapes, or blackberries or hardy kiwi vines?

For the flower pot or large pottery, perhaps a sweet potato plant, some chard or nasturtium, some chives, maybe even a dwarf blueberry?

For a shade tree, there could be a beech or chestnut, perhaps? A pecan or hickory. Or a full sized pear or apple tree. And putting a sweep of green bush beans interspersed with some euonymous or juniper bushes could look good as pansies or marigolds, could it not?

Think of the edible landscaping as good looking landscaping that is functional first. Then think of it as what is edible that I can put in that spot that meets the test.

And think of rows of corn and pole beans as a plot of traditonl garden out behind the house or the back lot somewhere.

With these ideas to get you thinking and organized, we will follow up soon with one or more articles on various edibles and combinations, and how they may be substituted for more traditional landscape plants.

We shall look at common vegetables and fruits that everyone knows, and ideas on where they might be worked into the landscape. Also, we shall take a look at more exotic vegetables and flowers that you may not have even heard of, or at least not thought of previously as being edible.

You can have a landscape that you can eat. It can even look amazing.

Rockcastle FFA Chapter attends Leadership Training

During the week of July 4th, the 2016-17 Rockcastle County FFA Officer Team attended the Kentucky FFA Leadership Training Center in Hardinsburg. During this week, students gained important leadership and communication skills by participating in classes such as an officer's class, chapter planning hour, special interest classes, and group athletics. Further, the officer team was able to develop teamwork skills through participation in a ropes course, volleyball, and water-ball. The Rockcastle County FFA Chapter was represented well at camp. Autumn Davidson represented the chapter as the nominee for Camp Council, while Trevor Sweet served as the delegate from the Rockcastle Chapter on the Camp Council Nominating Committee. Savannah Goff sang "I Told You So" during the Camp Talent Contest. Michaela Barron, Autumn Davidson, and Sydney Hines were selected as part of the camp all-star volleyball team. Hope Holbrook placed second in the FFA Quiz Contest and advanced to the state finals that will take place during the Kentucky State Fair. Each week of FFA Camp, the top 10% of students attending are selected to receive leadership awards. Several Rockcastle FFA studentswere among that 10% attending the fourth week of FFA Camp. Savannah Goff received one of these leadership awards. Further, the top 3% of that top 10% is selected to receive the highest honor that a student can achieve at camp: an Outstanding Leadership Award. Rockcastle FFA was proud to have the most students within this top 3% of any other FFA chapter attending camp during the same week. Jarrett Burke, Josh Martin, Pamela Miller, and Trevor Sweetall received Outstanding Leadership Awards. The Rockcastle County FFA would like to thank the Rockcastle FFA Alumni Association for providing $100 per student towards the $150 student camp fee. In addition, we would like to thank the Kentucky FFA State Alumni Association for providing two full camp scholarships for two of our members.

An encouraging word:

Words Have Results By Howard Coop

It was an unusual experience, one that will be remembered for a long time.

The meeting ran on, and on, and on. One person dominated the discussion. That individual talked, and talked, and talked. While many words were spoken, little was said. As time moved on, an old adage came to mind: "Words are cheap," and that adage was reinforced by words of an anonymous individual, "Don't use a gallon of words to express a spoonful of thought." Important ideas are not always "a matter of talk;" there is more.

In 1874, Philip P. Bliss wrote, "Beautiful words, wonderful words, wonderful words of life," and we use words, lots of words, every day. In most cases, words come easy, and they accomplish a good purpose. With words, we express our feelings to, and communicate with, each other.

An old proverb says, "A word aptly spoken is like apples of gold in settings of silver." So, Blaise Pascal, the French philosopher of the seventeenth century said, "Kind words do not cost much. They neither blister the tongue or lips. Though they do not cost much, they accomplish much. They make other people good-natured. They also produce their own image in other men's souls."

While words are powerful, they are like a twoedged sword; they can cut more than one way. They can either be invaluable, or they can be worthless. They can either be soft and soothing, or they can be sharp and cutting. They can either be comforting, or they can be discouraging. They can either be inspiring, or they can be depressing. It all depends upon the user and the way the user chooses to use the words. But beyond the spoken word, the expression on the face and the tone of the voice of the speaker can convey a lot.

Words have results; therefore one must use them with care. Napoleon Hill put it well when he said, "Think twice before you speak, because your words and influence will plant seed of either success or failure in the mind of another."

Bullen Reunion

Around 100 family members and friends attended the 2016 Bullen Reunion (Dewey B. and Flora Wolfe Bullen) on July 10th. Attending from out-of-state were Carlos and Kay Hurst Rodriguez of Woodbury, Minnesota and Jessie James Bullen of Indiana. Everyone brought dishes of food and desserts and enjoyed the day. May God bless and keep you all safe until next year.

"It didn't seem like we were ever going to finish. There were times when I wanted to just get into my truck and leave," he adds. "I never left. I just said, 'Let's go for it.' And that meant stop when you finish or die trying.'

When he started, Devitt thought the original replica would just be a weekend project. Shortly after he started, however, he decided to give up his maintenance work at a half-dozen San Francisco apartment buildings and devote all of his time to the model.

Eventually Devitt, who is single, could no longer afford his Mission District apartment and took to sleeping in his car or at the homes of friends.

"He's so dedicated to those 58,000-plus fellows on that wall. That's been his says his 68-year-old father, Mike Devitt, a former arson investigator for the San Jose Fire Department.

"It's like an artist," adds his dad, who now lives in Capitola. "How can I put it? Like an artist."

At first glance, his son the artist - who graduated from James Lick High School in 1966 - looks like a freeze-frame still in someone's old photo album of the Sizzlin' '60s.

A black baseball cap sits atop his long, muddy brown hair flecked with gray, which hangs halfway down his back in a ponytail. A splotchy beard hides half his face, while big black plastic aviator-style glasses cover day: black Vietnam vets tshirt with an American bald eagle on it, faded Levis and black sneakers. He wears an AMVETS ring given to him at an appearance and three bracelets with the names of MIAs etched on them.

"Underneath that beard and that long hair and those dark glasses, he's a hell of a good guy," says his father. "It makes me proud, not just as a father but as an Ameri-

Apparently, others agree. As his project developed, Devitt found support from the Vietnam Combat Veterans, Ltd., the San Jose-area group to which he belongs. Eventually the memorial replicas became the primary project of that group, which has grown nationally since it was formed in January 1982.

"John, he's unique. He sees the wall as his Holy Grail. I guess that sort of colors his vision," says Bill Dupras, 45, who acts as president of the veterans group. "It's very all-consuming for him. It's almost an obsession."

Devitt also had a lot of help from two other local Vietnam vets who've stuck by him since the beginning.

Longtime pal, Gerry Haver, a Mountain View tree trimmer who served on an aircraft carrier in the Gulf of Tonkin, was one of the first people to be inspired by Devitt's idea.

"John and I were sitting around talking, and he mentioned that he wanted to get some project going," says the 47-year-old Haver, who threw in $2,000 of his savings along with the $500 or so Devitt had already put in the pot. It was all they had at the time.

"Then when he decided how big one side was going to be, I said, 'Oh, what have we gotten ourselves into?" he adds with a laugh.

The pair took the idea to Norris Shears, another Navy who owns the Screentique silk-screening shop in south-central San Jose. Eventually that became their base of opera-

"I didn't know what to think. It was a hell of a project to take on," says the 47-year-old Shears. "Hell, I don't say no to anything."

In September 1983, Devitt and company went to the San Jose City Council for an endorsement, which they felt would help them raise more money for the model. Instead, the council gave them $16,000. As payback, of sorts, Devitt hopes to build a fourth, permanent model and a small museum in a city park.

After the original project was finished, and the demand for appearances grew, Devitt built a second model in 1986 and then the third The Moving Walls each visit 22 to 28 cities around the United States annually. Devitt says 75,000 to 100,000 people come out to the memorials during their weeklong appearances at each spot. There's a certain similarity to what happens in each city.

"Basically it's what happens at the wall in Washington, D.C.," he says. "You just see the whole emotional spectrum played out."

Devitt travels by truck with one of the memorials in fact, he recently returned from an appearance in Concord, N.H. - while someone else travels with the other. The third is used as they need it.

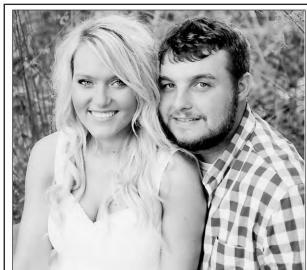

He doesn't pull down a salary, his traveling expenses and lodging are provided by the organizations that bring the Moving Wall to town. Those sponsors also pay a $2,500 fee that goes for maintenance and insurance for the structures and a 30 cents-a-mile transportation charge.

No admission is charged at the display sites.

Still, there's a big payback for Devitt.

"A lot of these plaques here are from the places I've gone, organizations that have had the wall. It's just their way of saying thanks," he says, looking around the cramped, tiny Vietnam Combat Veterans, Ltd. office in San Jose. The walls are jammed with citations, awards and photos.

"It's a real rewarding thing to be doing," he says. "It brings people together. People for the war. People against the war. It has a lasting effect.'

USDA Reminds Kentucky Deadline to Enroll in Agriculture Risk Coverage and Price Loss Coverage Programs

U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) Kentucky Farm Service Agency (FSA) Executive Director, John W. McCauley reminds farmers and ranchers that they have until Aug. 1 to enroll in Agriculture Risk Coverage (ARC) and/or Price Loss Coverage (PLC) programs for the 2016 crop year.

"Producers have already elected ARC or PLC, but they must enroll for the 2016 crop year by signing a contract before the Aug. 1 deadline to receive program benefits," said McCauley. "Producers are encouraged to contact their local FSA office to schedule an appointment to enroll."

The programs trigger financial protections for participating agricultural producers when market forces cause substantial drops in crop prices or revenues.

1.76 million farmers and ranchers are expected to sign contracts to enroll in ARC or PLC. Since 2009, USDA has worked to strengthen and support American agriculture, an industry that supports one in 11 American jobs, provides American consumers with more than 80 percent of the food we consume, ensures that Americans spend less of their paychecks at the grocery store than most people in other countries, and supports markets for homegrown renewable energy and materials. USDA has also provided $5.6 billion in disaster relief to farmers and ranchers; expanded risk management tools with products like Whole Farm Revenue Protection; and helped farm businesses grow with $36 billion in farm credit. The Department has engaged its resources to support a strong next generation of farmers and ranchers by improving access to land and capital; building new markets and market opportunities; and extending new conservation opportunities. Some changes for upcoming early migratory bird seasons

Although Kentucky is baking in the hottest temperatures of the year, hunters will be afield in a little over a month pursuing migratory birds such as dove, wood duck, American woodcock and resident Canada goose.

Those planning to hunt during these seasons must be aware of some significant changes for the September Canada goose and American woodcock seasons.

The September Canada goose season historically ran during the first two weeks of September, but will open Sept. 16 and close Sept. 30 in 2016.

"It wasn't an option before, we could only have the September Canada goose season in the first two weeks of September," said John Brunjes, migratory bird coordinator for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "The Mississippi Flyway Council recently changed our goose management plan and we can now have the season anytime in September." Brunjes and other Kentucky Fish and Wildlife staff gathered feedback from waterfowl hunters regarding their date preference for the September Canada goose

"The overwhelming majority wanted the season in the last two weeks of September," Brunjes explained. "Farmers across Kentucky usually have not cut silage yet during the first two weeks of September, but they usually do cut it by the last two weeks of the month. This gives hunters a better chance at harvesting geese in fields."

Brunjes also noted hunters enjoying the September wood duck and teal seasons may now also harvest a Canada goose if one comes into range.

"Opening on Sept. 1 gets crowded with the dove season opener and other seasons," Brunjes said. "Separating these seasons out keeps hunters from trying to do three things at once."

The American woodcock season also changed for 2016. Previously, the season opened Nov. 1 and closed Dec. 15. It will be a split season in 2016, with the American woodcock season closing for the opening weekend of modern gun deer season. The first segment opens Oct. 22 and closes Nov. 11. The second opens

Nov. 14 and closes Dec. 7. "We sent surveys to over 500 known woodcock hunters asking them what they wanted in a season," Brunjes said. "After gathering their input, combined with the desires of the woodcock hunters who attended the March Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Commission meeting, the Commission decided to recommend these season dates."

The earlier dates better correspond with peak migration of American woodcock through Kentucky.

This is also the second vear of the Habitat Information Program, or H.I.P., a survey implemented last year to improve migratory bird and waterfowl harvest information and gauge hunter participation. Hunters must complete the survey and get a confirmation number. This number must be written on your hunting license or Kentucky Migratory Game Bird-Waterfowl Hunting permit to be a legal migratory bird hunter.

"It is annual thing, you must complete your H.I.P. survey every year," Brunjes said. "We had strong compliance last year."

The Habitat Information Program is comprised of a few questions about the hunter's harvest of migratory birds last season. It takes less than 5 minutes to complete.

"The information gleaned by answering four or five simple questions is extremely valuable," Brunjes said. "The information about the number of birds harvested as well as the number of hunters afield, along with the sex ratio of harvested birds is critical for the management of these species. The H.I.P. survey allows the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to identify hunters they could contact for more intensive harvest information." To complete the H.I.P. survey, log onto the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife homepage at www.fw.ky.gov and click on the "My Profile" tab in the upper left of the page. This takes you to a page that asks for some basic information to confirm your identity. You must answer a few simple questions and get your confirmation number. You may also complete the survey by calling 1-
